Nazis Report Spearhead Within Sight Of Caucasus

By the Associated Press

The Germans claimed last night that their Crimean spearhead had broken through to the shores of the narrow Kerch Strait within sight of the Caucasus, but along the Central Front their cold and weary armies apparently were struggling bitterly for no better than a draw above and below Moscow.

About this latter theater Berlin was all but silent, save for the claim that a Soviet cavalry division had been smashed at Tula, about 100 miles south of the capital.

Driven Back at Tula

At Tula, the Russians asserted the invaders had in fact been driven back five miles and then were able to restore a line only with great difficulty.

At Kalinin, 95 miles above Moscow, Soviet sources reported the Germans were attacking with "unabating strength" on the fourth day of an unsuccessful attempt to break that flank and that, although their casualties were heavy, Nazi reserves were still coming up to the line.

Southwest of the capital it appeared that an earlier advance had carried the Germans to within 30 to 35 miles of the city, the Nazis putting their forward positions at only 31 miles short of it and the Russians themselves acknowledging that the thrust had carried to the vicinity of Narofominsk, 35 miles away.

Advance Body Is Small

There was nothing, however, to suggest that this advance had been extended and, indeed, nothing to suggest that it had been carried out by other than small bodies of troops.

Progress for the Crimean offensive was announced by the German high command. The southern Crimean coast was reached, it stated, at a point just south of the city of Kerch itself, which is separated at one point by only 2 miles of water from the western Caucasus.

Nazi Army Running Out of Monocles

Doing Well

Weighing In For 11-Inch Baby Today

Doll-like Bette Gay Bonbrest, the 11-inch mite at George Washington University Hospital, will be weighed today, with her parents, doctors and nurses waiting in suspense for the result.

It will be the infant's first introduction to a scale since last Friday when, born nearly four months prematurely, she amazed attendants by tipping the beam at a mere 28¾ ounces—and living.

Bette Gay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy D. Bonbrest, 1144 Branch Avenue Southeast. Dr. Alfred J. Steinberg said the baby was doing well yesterday in its heated incubator.

Also progressing satisfactorily is the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Griffith, 700 block of Rock Creek Church Road Northwest, who weighed in at 27½ ounces when she was born at Gallinger Hospital October 4. She, too, is confined to an incubator.

Fish Fails To Appear Before Jury

Busy on Capitol Hill As Name Is Called At Nazi Agent Probe

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

From the door of the closed hearing room of the special grand jury on German agents this summons was shouted yesterday morning:

"Congressman Fish!"

Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, did not answer. He was busy on Capitol Hill in another closed session, where he put in 15 minutes before the Judiciary Committee, which is considering whether the privileges of the House was violated when Fish was subpenaed to give testimony "in behalf of the United States."

"You can just say he was talking," said the committee chairman, Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas. Fish would say nothing of what he told the committee.

Other members of the group declared Fish wanted the committee to hear his lawyer, former Representative John O'Connor, of New York. O'Connor also is attorney for George Hill, 43, Fish's secretary, who is under indictment on two charges of corrupt perjury. The committee declined, but agreed to let O'Connor hand in a brief.

A Kiss in Time Will Cost a Fine, Motorist Learns

Jesse C. Gram, of 1750 Lamont Street Northwest, was charged in Traffic Court yesterday with failing to give full time and attention to the operation of his car. Policeman V. C. Rautsaw testified the defendant was kissing a girl companion.

Gram denied the lovemaking and told Judge John P. McMahon his companion merely was whispering in his ear.

"How many persons were in the car?" the jurist asked.

"Two, your honor."

Churchill Predicts Invasion In 1943, Calls It Impossible Now

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 12.—Winston Churchill predicted today that "the freedom-loving powers" would be able to produce enough ships by 1943 to support an overseas invasion "utterly beyond British resources at the present time."

In Commons the Prime Minister argued against disclosure of the strategy by which Britain plans to aid Russia, and gave new figures to show substantial British successes in the Atlantic war against U-boats since early summer.

Citing the captive Rudolf Hess as his authority, he said Hitler had "relied upon a starvation attack even more than upon invasion to bring us to our knees." That has failed, he asserted, but "this only increases his need to come at us by direct invasion as soon as he can screw up his courage and make arrangements to take the plunge."

Churchill's speech followed the traditional opening of the seventh session of the present Parliament in which King George VI, speaking to both houses, paid tribute to the United States for furnishing war supplies to Britain "on a scale unexampled in history."

Twice the Prime Minister dealt with the demands which military operations, in the future, would make upon the shipping available to Britain and both times he made it plain that Britain's shipping capacity could not meet those demands now.

In selecting 1943 as the year for "overseas operations" on a great scale he said this was dependent

Sen. Langer Pictures Self As Benefactor

Fury Chokes His Voice As He Tells of Acts Of 'Some Scoundrels'

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

William Langer, of North Dakota, yesterday presented the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee with a self-drawn word picture of a maligned and persecuted public benefactor falsely accused of tampering with justice and accepting graft.

The hero of a book called "The Fighting Governor," now battling to retain his title of United States Senator, gave the committee an explanation for every one of the major charges on which it will have to decide whether Langer should be returned to North Dakota as a private citizen.

Once fury choked his voice and anger filled his eyes with tears as he recalled how "some scoundrels" in his home State mailed three full-page newspaper accounts of one of these charges to his aged father and mother because "they didn't take any chances on their not seeing that about their son."

He was accused of taking $56,800 for land with a net equity of $5700 from Gregory Brunk, Des Moines (Iowa) lawyer, who made thousands of dollars in North Dakota bond sales while Langer was Governor.

He told the committee that he paid $60,455 for the land and improvements, that he agreed with Brunk to pay off nearly $25,000 worth of encumbrances on the property and that, furthermore, he had nothing whatsoever to do with the

10,000 Open Chest Drive In D. C. Today

Volunteer Army Will Canvass Each Block In War on Want

An army of 10,000 volunteers springs into action today against privation in the Nation's Capital.

This army of citizens takes the field in the fourteenth annual campaign to lend a hand to neighbors in need, to raise two million dollars for the District's 59 Community Chest agencies.

The volunteers will cover every city block and knock at every door and ask those who can to help those in distress. The army's battle cry will be, "For Their Tomorrow . . . Give Today."

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation in observance of the Chest fund drive, declaring:

"It is important to remember now that there are many among us to whom the present wave of prosperity brings no benefits. There are children living in ever more crowded homes, playing on ever more dangerous streets, deprived anew, perhaps, of their chance for health, safety, and happiness, because family incomes have not kept pace with the rising cost of living.

"There are families ill equipped to meet the tragedies of illness, accident, death and deprivation, when they strike—inevitably—throughout a whole year of tomorrows.

"Each day, each week, each month during the coming year, the agencies of the Community Chest will be called upon to come to their aid.

"The Community Chest campaign affords us an opportunity to reaffirm our belief in the American way of life. For it is the American way

Plan Prepared To Take Over Mines, if Talks Tomorrow Fail

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Determined to fight to a finish if the long-threatening Administration show-down with John L. Lewis finally develops, the Government has detailed plans in readiness for immediate occupation of the Nation's captive coal mines, it was learned last night from an informed official.

As a last chance of peaceful settlement to avert a strike that would stop the flow of coal to the country's steel mills, President Roosevelt yesterday arranged a White House conference for 11 a. m. tomorrow with the Congress of Industrial Organizations' United Mine Workers leaders, including Lewis, and representatives of the steel company owners of the threatened collieries.

The conference call, accepted by Lewis and his aides, was made in an atmosphere of increasing tenseness in the defense labor situation, with the mass resignations of C. I. O. members from the National Defense Mediation Board threatening to spread to a wholesale boycott by that union organization of the OPM as well.

Course of Action Hinted

As a beginning, the resignation of John W. Owens, chief C. I. O. labor consultant in the OPM, was announced. Owens, an alumnus of the miners' union, is C. I. O. representative in Ohio. His resignation was accompanied by reports that Van A. Bittner, Chicago regional director of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Allan Haywood, C. I. O. director of organization, would leave the OPM labor advisory committee. Both men are graduates of the U. M. W. ranks.

The dramatic call for a White House meeting included, besides Lewis, C. I. O. President Philip Murray and U. M. W. Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy, both of whom announced their resignations Tuesday from the Mediation Board after it voted, 9 to 2, against the miners' demand for a union shop in the captive mines. Meeting with the unionists will be Frank Purnell, of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Corporation; Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation, and Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel Co.

"Immature Judgment"

An hour earlier, at 10 a. m. tomorrow, Lewis has scheduled a meeting of his national policy committee, 200 strong, to determine the union's course of action in the face of the adverse Mediation Board decision. A "truce" dating from a previous strike of the 53,000 miners involved, is to expire Saturday night.

The possibility that the strike, if called, might also include more than

42 States Face Tie-up

Long Distance Workers, Truck Drivers Set Strike Deadlines

(Five Rail Operating Unions Set Strike to Begin Dec. 7. Page 10.)

A strike that threatens to cripple or stop long-distance telephone and telegraph service in 42 States was set last night to start at midnight tomorrow, and locals representing 250,000 truck drivers in the Midwest authorized a walkout that may begin Sunday.

These late developments in the country's tense labor situation were the most striking of numerous new union-management disputes that were handicapping or threatening to handicap, directly or indirectly, various phases of the defense program.

The communications tie-up action was announced in New York by John J. Moran, president of the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers, an independent union, who said 15,000 workers would be involved.

Decision to go ahead with the strike was reached after a meeting yesterday with the United States Conciliation Service and representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., the Associated Press reported.

Union demands include a 4 per cent wage boost and narrowing of geographic pay differentials.

Authorization for the truck strike was announced at Chicago by Frank Brown, an official of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (A. F. L.), according to the Associated Press. Brown said, however, that the union men have asked for mediation by the OPM and a representative of that office is expected in Chicago today. The dispute is over wages.

Selects, Guard Asked to Join Regular Army

Transfer Would Provide More Men for Possible Service Overseas

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The War Department disclosed last night that it was circularizing selectees and National Guardsmen to transfer to the Regular Army for possible service overseas.

Officials said that a recruiting drive has been launched among the citizen-soldiers to volunteer for three-year enlistments and that they were being specifically asked in this connection as to their willingness to serve overseas.

The action was viewed here as an effort to remove from as large a part of the Army as possible the present barrier to service of troops outside the Western Hemisphere and American possessions, including the Philippines. Present law so limits the service of selectees, National Guardsmen and reservists but permits Regulars to be sent anywhere in the world.

Army Looks Ahead

Spokesmen declared that efforts to remove such restrictions do not mean that an A. E. F. is contemplated, but that the Army wants to be ready for any contingency.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, has several times recommended the repeal of the Western Hemisphere restriction, but Administration leaders in Congress have refrained from pressing the explosive issue.

First word of the move came in press reports from the First Army now engaged in maneuvers in the

Roosevelt Has Cold; He Wouldn't Talk With Hat On

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt's refusal to make a speech in a tall silk hat Tuesday caused him to be confined in the dwelling part of the White House yesterday with a head cold.

The President wore formal morning attire—cutaway coat, black topcoat and gray striped trousers—to Armistice Day ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery. He stood bareheaded, of course, before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Despite the chill wind, he did not restore the hat to his head during his subsequent speech at the Amphitheater or, indeed until he began to drive back to the White House.

Southern Bloc In House Insists President Take Sterner Attitude

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A sharp Democratic split over Neutrality Act modification yesterday alarmed Administration leaders and threatened a photo-finish House vote on the legislation today.

Conservative Southern Democrats led a bolt from the bill shortly after House debate opened, with Administration inaction on the defense labor front their major cause of complaint.

Before recess, six Democrats and three Republicans who supported the original House ship-arming bill, took the floor against Senate changes allowing merchantmen to go into war zones or belligerent ports.

Rayburn Visits White House

Concerned, but still contending the bill would pass by a close vote, House leaders and Foreign Affairs committeemen held a series of conferences and Speaker Sam Rayburn called at the White House.

The Speaker told reporters there was much opposition, but he thought it would be overcome. He said he felt confident the House would approve the bill, but declined to predict the size of the majority.

"We're in better shape tonight than we were this morning," said Rayburn.

[Southern Democrats were reported by the New York Times last night to have won an Administration promise of remedial antistrike legislation after the neutrality bill is out of the way. The promise was said to have come from Congressional leaders. However, the Times quoted one unidentified House member as insisting "Let's get John L. Lewis first, and then Hitler."—Editor's note.]

Across Strait From Caucasus, Nazis Report

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The German army of the Crimea has stormed to the shores of the narrow strait facing the Caucasus, the high command announced tonight, but the Moscow and Leningrad fronts were reported all but static.

In the Crimea, German troops were declared to have reached the east coast just south of Kerch, possibly within sight of the western Caucasian stretches, in a continuing "hot pursuit" of the Soviet defenders. Kerch and Sevastopol, the main Soviet Black Sea naval base in the southwestern Crimea, were reported under bombing attack.

About Leningrad the only fighting officially reported was a Russian "breakout" attempt which was said to have been crushed with the loss of 11 Red tanks.

Moscow Weather "Very Bad"

On the Moscow front fighting was mentioned only in one sector—that south of Tula, about 100 miles below the capital. There it was claimed that German tanks smashed a Soviet cavalry division.

On this generally stagnant front, military spokesman said roads were unusable and the weather "still very bad."

To observers who day after day read the German military reports of the winter of 1939-1940, while the Nazi troops lay stationary in the West Wall, the current bulletins from the Moscow front have taken on a striking similarity.

The wintry character of the fighting was also reflected in a news picture of SS (Elite) troops in white "ghost" jackets designed to make soldiers indistinguishable against a snowy background. Other pictures showed Soviet hamlets under deep snow.

While the authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland spoke of disorganized Soviet railway systems as the Russians' biggest problems, the official news agency D. N. B. reported that the chaos had been widely extended overnight. In the southern sector alone, said the agency, four trains and four locomotives were broken to bits by bombs.

Many Trains Destroyed

A military spokesman asserted that between November 1 and November 11 German pilots had destroyed 61 complete freight trains and severely damaged 420, as well as destroying 100 locomotives and 40 railway stations.

In raids last night which extended deep into the Russian hinterland to Gorki, it was claimed, two Moscow stations were smashed by explosives. Landing fields around the capital also were attacked.

disappointment with the reply from Helsinki.

While pointing out that he had not yet seen the full text of the Finnish note, the Secretary said press reports indicated that the government of Finland was evading the real issue and added significantly that he still hoped the Finnish people were not irrevocably committed to collaboration with Germany.

Hull asserted that Nazi propaganda in this country was largely responsible for the fact that many Americans had failed to understand what he called the extremely important and valuable contribution the Finnish forces are making to Hitler's cause and the damaging effects their aid to Germany has had on the nations resisting Hitler.

The Finnish note, whose full text was made public by the legation here yesterday, said Finns could not understand how the operations of their troops could threaten the United States, "a mighty power, protected by two oceans and secured by numerous bases, of which some are situated thousands of miles beyond the frontiers of the United States."

German Spokesmen Quoted

Hull told reporters the negotiations between the United States and Finland were not a matter of words, but of real issues, and that he believed the issue had been clearly stated in an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin Tuesday.

The dispatch quoted German military spokesmen as crediting combined German and Finnish operations in the Leningrad area with making it "extremely difficult" for American and British supplies to move from north Russian ports to the Moscow front and the Caucasus.

Indicating that he accepted this German interpretation of the significance of Finland's present military operations, Hull said the dispatch showed clearly that Finland is moving into a new phase of hostilities against Russia.

Hull said the vital question for this Government, in formulating its policy toward Finland, is whether Finland, over and above the security requirements of her own borders, is going to continue military operations to the extent desired by Germany so that she will be in the general war as an active partner of Germany.

Nazis Are Jubilant At Finnish Stand

Berlin, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Finnish reply to the United States was declared by a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman today to have produced a feeling of "joy to live in this Eprope where there are such brave peoples as the Finns."

The spokesman said the reply to "pressure attempts by the American President" constituted an "ear-boxing of the hysterical old man in the White House."

on whether "the war against U-boats continues to prosper as it has done—about which, of course, there can be no guarantee."

He made clear also that it was predicated on vast American help: "The great American shipbuilding promised for 1942," and said the United States was building merchant ships on a scale many times that possible in the United Kingdom.

Shipping Losses Contrasted

Churchill said Britain in the four months ending in October had lost less than 750,000 tons of ships, or an average of about 180,000 tons a month, as compared with two million tons, or an average of 500,000 tons a month in the four-month period previous to July.

Taking new British building into account, he said the net loss from July through October was less than one-fifth what it was in the previous four months, in spite of the fact "that there never had been more U-boats or long range aircraft than are working now."

In the July-October period, he continued, almost one millions tons of Axis shipping had been sunk or damaged seriously, with the most severe Axis losses in the Mediterranean. He termed the last Axis convoy destroyed there by light British naval forces a "particularly valuable one," and he said Italy had not yet been able to find the ships to repatriate 4,000 noncombatants from Ethiopia, d[illegible] a British agreement to perm[illegible]

Skillfully, Churc[illegible]ed with the critics who wa[illegible] what Britain is going to do for Russia in the way of military aid. To those who object to certain ministers in his government, he said flatly: "No change is contemplated at the present moment," and he also ruled out any immediate remodeling of the war cabinet.

Refers to Criticism

Again he stressed that he would make no predictions about the future and again he taunted Adolf Hitler for doing so—this time, for "making a speech in which he told the German people that Moscow would fall in a few days."

"If I were to describe in detail the help which we are giving to Russia it would be very interesting, but it would be giving away to the enemy secrets which are Russian as well as British."

Slyly he reminded his critics that in ancient China anyone who wished to assail the government could do so if he subsequently committed suicide to show that he had no ulterior motive.

"For the guidance of those in countries abroad" he made the point that no one in England who votes against the government "will be assaulted with rubber truncheons or sent to a concentration camp or otherwise molested."

The President's Day

By International News Service

FUEL FOR THE HEADACHE: After breakfast, as always, Mr. Roosevelt huddled with his staff, made one concession to his head cold by keeping the appointment book clear. Otherwise the day was hectic as any. Fruit juice appeared with downing orders from time to time, lunch came in on a tray, was eaten absent-mindedly while Mr. Roosevelt pondered the future of coal mining and miners, kept in touch by phone and otherwise with the progress of Neutrality Act revision in Congress.

INVITATION TO WALTZ: In midafternoon the Presidential pondering became written history—out to John L. Lewis, C. I. O.'s Phil Murray and Tom Kennedy, U. S. Steel's Benjamin Fairless, Bethlehem Steel's Eugene Grace, Youngstown Pipe and Tube's Frank Purnell went identical wires, inviting everyone in for a parley Friday morning at 11 a. m. on the possible coal-for-steel strike. All accepted readily.

BONFIRE: About the time the President was dictating the invitation to the Friday clambake, a swarm of ladies appeared around the corner of the White House, and banners akimbo, began a short shift of picketing. Ten minutes later they gathered directly in front of the White House, in line with the front door, and rallied round a big placard screaming "I say to you again, and again, and again that your sons shall not be sent into any foreign wars," then set fire to it. Under the watchful eye of the White House guards, the ladies watched while the placard dwindled to ash, departed quietly with their "We the Mothers Mobilized for America from Chicago" signs trailing along behind them.

LATEST: Having agreed to retire early to break up the cold, the President lingered on at his desk after dinner, got the latest concensus from Capitol Hill regarding the vote on the Neutrality Act today—latest dope was fairly cheerful—gave the Administration a win by a slimmish margin.

Soviet Reports Nazis Driven Back From Tula; New Battles Engulf Donets Front in Fire

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, Nov. 12.—The German position about Tula, the Soviet small-arms arsenal, on the southern Moscow front was described tonight in Soviet military dispatches as seriously endangered by Russian counterattacks which already have driven two German divisions back 5 miles and broken their efforts to make a new stand.

In this area of savage struggle, about 100 miles south of Moscow, the Red commanders were said to have hurled forward infantry, artillery and tanks from Tula's southern suburbs in a series of powerful counterstrokes.

The German retreat, described as nothing short of flight, was ordered for fear of encirclement, it was added, and it was only after reinforcements had eventually been rushed up in trucks that the invader was able to restore "some kind of balance."

(The situation about Tula was in sharp dispute, the Germans claiming that a Soviet cavalry division had been smashed there.)

(German assaults on the right flank of the Moscow defenses at Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of the city, were reported by the Moscow radio to have been continuing unabated for four days.

(The Nazis, it was added, were massing reserves for an even stronger effort.)

Of other fronts there was little specific official news, the midnight communique of the Soviet command reporting only a continuation of heavy fighting elsewhere.

So far as could be learned here, the nearest German position to Moscow was the vicinity of Narofominsk, 35 miles southwest of the capital, to which the invaders apparently had advanced some days ago. (A German report last night said the most advanced Nazi positions were within 31 miles of Moscow.)

Russian resistance in the far south, presumably in the Donets Basin north and to the west of Rostov on the River Don, was reported still rising in violence. A correspondent of Pravda, the Communist Party organ, described it as a front "engulfed in fire."

"Conflagrations are ranging everywhere," he wrote. "Pillars of flame and black smoke rise high in the skies. Whatever it was impossible to withdraw to the rear was blown up."

(The scarcity of German claims as to the Moscow front and Berlin's stress upon action in the Crimea was taken in London by a Soviet spokesman to support his declaration that the Nazis had been beaten down to a standstill both before Rostov and Moscow.)

[A United Press dispatch from London said sustained Russian counterattacks in the Donets Basin were reported to have gained 6 miles at one point, while at another an advance by two German tank divisions and one motorized division was reversed in a battle climaxed by the Soviet capture of a strategic railway junction.]

Fascist Chief Gives Bombed Cities Pep Talk

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 12.—British bombers striking at southern Italy for the ninth successive day damaged civilian buildings at Naples, killed 6 persons and injured 30, it was officially announced tonight, and Adelchi Serena, Fascist Party secretary, began giving pep talks to residents of the attacked areas.

"The behavior of the population at Naples," the communique said, "was calm and disciplined throughout."

Eight Planes Claimed

Eight British planes were declared to have been shot down in overnight attacks on Sicily.

Serena visited Brindisi where 21 of the 96 dead in last week's heavy raid have not yet been identified. He inspected damaged areas of the city, visited soup kitchens and dormitories where the homeless were being cared for, and factories. He gave morale-rousing talks at all these places.

The Italian papers denounced the British air offensive as an attempt to make southern Italians rise up against the war, but Lavoro Fascista said another reason for it was that "our merchant marine continues to transport daily great quantities of men, arms and munitions to Libya."

Cairo Suburb Bombed

By International News Service

Cairo, (Thursday), Nov. 13.—Thirty persons were killed and 43 injured in an Axis air raid on the Fayoum area, 40 miles southwest of Cairo during the night, it was announced officially early today.

Some damage was wrought in the attack it was stated in an Egyptian government communique.

Air alarms were sounded in Cairo and other parts of the middle and upper provinces of Egypt.

It was the second time in the war that Cairo's suburbs had been raided, the first attack having taken place several months ago.

Tokyo, Impressed by U. S. Leaders' Speeches On Crisis, Dilutes Them for Its Public

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Nov. 12.—The Armistice Day speeches of President Roosevelt, Navy Secretary Knox and Undersecretary of State Welles, coming on top of Prime Minister Churchill's speech Monday, produced a profound impression in Japan as a final demonstration of Anglo-American solidarity.

Their impact was such that they were presented to the Japanese public only in a carefully edited version.

The official Japanese answer is expected during an extra session of the Diet beginning Saturday.

According to Domei agency, the speech in which Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo will clarify Japan's foreign policy and which will be presented for approval of the cabinet tomorrow was "prepared with specia care and circumspection to emphasize Japan's policy to maintain and enhance world peace and at the same time take a stern attitude for the protection of the empire's prestige and existence." The precise meaning of this remains to be seen.

Domei sums up the opinion of "informed" quarters as follows:

"The officials and people of Japan are forced to conclude that irresponsible American leaders who have completely lost their reason are to blame for the present unsatisfactory state of affairs in the Pacific. Knox's effort to show that the United States has been generous toward Japan furnishes further evidence that the principle of morality upheld by Americans is one-sided. The mounting tension in the Pacific is to be laid at the doors of those American and British leaders who have adopted an attitude of antagonizing Japan."

According to the Japan Times and Advertiser, the newspaper controlled by the Foreign Office, these same quarters now doubt whether the United States is sincerely desirous of continuing the Washington discussions following the arrival of the special Japanese envoy, Saburo Kurusu.

The press continues to denounce the speeches as "outrageous, arrogant and insulting" and as intended to excite public opiinon at home. The United States, says the newspaper Nichi Nichi, has launched its Pacific advance and "Knox has revealed the cloven hoof."

The same paper also says, "If Churchill's speech were analyzed for its inner meaning his concise statement would be this: 'America, if you go to war with Japan we are with you, but please don't go to war with Japan.'" The reason for this, says the paper, is that Britain needs all the American aid it can get and would not like to see any deflected to the Far East.

[The Japanese press yesterday denounced the Churchill speech as an "outrageous but crafty British plot to involve the United States in a war in the Pacific for the protection of British interests."—Editor's note.]

Meanwhile the extent of the blow dealt Japan by the freezing regulations is revealed by the fact that idle industrial equipment is now estimated at ten billion yen. Total capitalization of both light and heavy industries was put at only 14,972,000,000 yen in 1938.

War Sidelights

Nazis' 'Finest' Has to Seek Volunteers

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The elite Nazi "infantry regiment greater Germany," which comprises the cream of Germany's foot soldiers and has been dubbed by Reichsfuehrer Hitler the "bodyguard of the German people," issued an appeal today for volunteers from the German youth organization.

So far as is known this is the first time this exclusive German infantry group has made a public appeal for volunteers.

The "infantry regiment greater Germany" has taken a leading part in each of Germany's campaigns, and has been highly dramatized as the ideal of German soldiery in the German press and radio.

That's British Humor

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation sent congratulations to the King of Italy on his birthday yesterday and some members of Parliament said today they planned to raise a fuss in the House of Commons.

They called it "an astonishing slip," but B. B. C. officials replied that the congratulations were included in a light entertainment program which "might have a good effect in Italy."

The officials said, "Of course we wouldn't send birthday messages to Hitler or Mussolini."

The Peaceful Irish

Dublin, Nov. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera said today that Eire would always be glad to act as a peace intermediary if the opportunity appeared.

This, he said in answer to a question in the Dail, but he did not reply directly to a query as to whether Eire had been approached by the belligerents for peace negotiations or had discussed the question with the Vatican or other neutrals.

Gen. Vara Killed

Berlin, Nov. 12 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Felix Vara, chief of the department for fortification construction in the German navy's high command, was killed November 3 in the west "by an enemy air attack during a voyage on official business," an announcement said today.

He apparently was on an inspection trip. He had held his post since 1933 and was credited with developing Germany's coastal defenses (German coast defenses are under the navy, although staffed in part by army men.)

[The New York Times reported the deaths in action of artillery commander and an air pilot, both of whom held the outstanding German war decoration of the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross. The German press this week also announced the deaths of three other Knights Cross soldiers and two members of the staff of the official Nazi newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, who were on the Eastern Front.

Hint of Libyan Drive Seen in Churchill Speech

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 12.—Heavy British air and naval blows at Axis shipping in the Mediterranean and at Italy's dwindling war fleet were regarded by the British tonight as the forerunners of a powerful offensive from Egypt against Axis armies assembled in Libya.

A hint that British forces in the Near East may soon strike, now that Axis supply lines in the Mediterranean are weak, was seen in Prime Minister Churchill's statement that "it may yet be that, as the war develops, military operations may make more extensive demands upon our shipping."

Informed sources, however, differed on where the British might attack. Some said that further developments of the Russian-German fight in the Caucasus must be awaited before the new United States-made tanks and planes of the Near East army are used in Africa.

Others said that if the ample reserves of men and supplies were not needed in the Caucasus, then a drive might be launched to sweep the Germans and Italians from North Libya and Tripolitania—which the British public has long awaited.

"It is a matter of economy to withhold any possible offensive until the R.A.F. and navy smash communications so thoroughly that present forces in Libya will be compelled to fight alone," informed sources said.

The smashing is going on with "greater violence than ever before," Churchill told the House of Commons.

"In the Mediterranean, the enemy's losses have been particularly severe. There is evidence he has found it very difficult to reinforce or even supply his armies on African shores."

The last convoy sunk in the Mediterranean and devastation wrought by British submarines is "certainly something very much to rejoice over," Churchill said, and added that the Italian government is seriously lacking in ships.

Later unofficial tabulations showed that at least 116 Italian ships have been either definitely or "probably" sunk by the British Navy and air force since June 1. These include three liners of between 23,000 and 25,000 tons each and a substantial number of tankers carrying fuel, without which Axis armies in Africa are helpless. In addiition the R. A. F. has reported dozens of ships damaged at sea and in North African harbors.

Of Italy's warships, the British claim to have sunk three of the seven 8-inch-gun cruisers, two out of 11 light cruisers, 32 out of about 60 destroyers and between 32 and 40 out of 120 submarines. The shortage of steel and labor was seen by observers as making improbable the replacement of these losses.

'Bossy' Gillis Wins, Even While in Jail

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 12 (INS).—Former Mayor Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, who is serving a nine months' sentence for criminal libel at the county farm at Middleton, tonight bested a five-man field in Newburyport's primary mayoralty election.

The jailed candidate, whose campaign was conducted by his wife, Mrs. Louis Gillis, polled 1851 votes. He will be opposed in the December 2 election by John M. Kelleher, who polled 1324 votes.

British Without Word Of Litvinov Plane

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—The British ministry of information said late tonight it had received no word of an overdue plane from Russia carrying United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Ambassador designate to the United States, and Sir Walter Moncton, head of British information services at Cairo.

Officials said, however, that there was no especial anxiety about the plane, which failed to arrive at Teheran, Iran. They assumed the plane had made an unscheduled stop because of bad weather.

U. S. Ready to Take Over Mines if White House Parley Fails to Avert Strike

330,000 workers in commercial mines in the eight-State Appalachian area was seen in the fact that the group called for conference with Lewis is comprised of all district leaders, not merely those with the captive pits in their jurisdiction.

That the Government would take every means of guarantee continued production of coal, even in the face of a strike, however, was clearly indicated yesterday by White House Secretary William Hassett.

He said it was "a fair assumption the President would see that the Government's position" was maintained. Although he was not specific, it was assumed he meant that, following the Mediation Board majority, the closed shop could not be placed ahead of production for national security.

The coal situation, Hassett said, is very much on the President's mind. He pictured the matter as a direct clash between the Government and the miners' union.

"I do think," he said, "and that is my personal opinion, that there has been a lot of immature judgment expressed in the papers about this being a quarrel between the President and John L. Lewis.

"If there is any quarrel, it's between the United Mine Workers and the United States Government."

All evidence confirmed a growing belief that in the event of a strike Army occupation of the mines would follow swiftly. Although a high official insisted that Federal taking over of the pits was only one of "several" courses of action, he admitted that all the necessary legal authorizations had been long since drafted and that the Army had not failed to make use of a "two weeks' notice that it might have a job to do."

The action would be taken under the President's general power as Commander in Chief of the armed services, it was learned from another source.

In another quarter, interest centered on the possible future of the Mediation Board, where Murray and Kennedy's resignations were followed yesterday by those of James Carey, C. I. O. secretary, and John Brophy, head of the C. I. O. industrial union councils. The resignations of two other C. I. O. officials, Clinton Golden and Hugh Lyons, were indicated as imminent, and a fifth alternate member, Sherman Dalrymple, said he had not made up his mind. Not yet heard from were the remaining two C. I. O. alternate members, Emil Rieve and Herbert W. Payne.

Cases Postponed

Work on C. I. O. cases before the board came to a stop. A dispute involving the Bell Aircraft Co. and the United Auto Workers was postponed for ten days, while a dispute between Farm Equipment Workers and the International Harvestor Co. was put off indefinitely.

Ominously, District 50 of the mine workers withdrew three cases involving its members which were still pending before the board. It also was learned that the board itself declined to accept new cases involving C. I. O. unions, in view of the fact that hearings on them could not proceed, or would be futile, without C. I. O. board members as participants.

Board Chairman William H. Davis, at a press conference, indicated that the board was marking time until Sunday, when the C. I. O. international executive council meets in Detroit, and presumably will decide whether to submit further disputes to the board. Such affirmative action was deemed unlikely.

It was considered certain, however, that if the C. I. O. remained unreconciled and therefore the board were no longer able to function, it would be succeeded by some other mediation machinery, this time with a statutory basis.

Plan Submitted

Observers indicated that the probable result would be legislation setting up a nonpartisan agency, which would have subpena powers and would probably require compulsory arbitration.

However, it was learned that a plan had been urged on the President by a high source for a body similar to the War Labor Board of 1918, comprised of equal panels of labor and management, and functioning on an agreement that if the panels failed to settle disputes, the issues would be referred to arbitration.

Meantime, it was learned yesterday that William Green, president of the A. F. of L., had sanctioned the vote of the two A. F. of L. members on the Mediation Board against the rival organization's union shop demand.

William Calvin, of the A. F. of L. boilermakers' union, an alternate member of the Board, taking the place of George Meany, the regular member, told The Post that he checked his decision with Green before voting.

He indicated that he had changed his mind during the deliberations and then "explained the circumstances" to Green, who supported his decision completely. After the vote, Calvin continued, he was able to get in touch with Meany, who, he said, was "miffed" at first, but later appeared "mollified" when the "extenuating circumstances" were told him.

Yesterday, however, Meany issued a statement declaring he was "in absolute disagreement" with the majority vote, and that, had he been in Washington when the vote was taken, he would have balloted for the union shop, supporting a motion which he made in the first instance before the Board.

Tydings Offers Plan to Achieve Industrial Peace

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday proposed a plan for industrial peace under which two representatives each of labor and industry would name a fifth representative to a board to mediate disputes, under the promise that both sides would abide by the decision.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, regarded generally as one of labor's longest friends and stoutest champions, commented:

"We can't go on as we are going now. In any argument over a closed shop neither side has the right to delay the defense program. But when labor has not had a closed shop before, then it should not take advantage of the national defense effort to obtain one and thus block that effort."

Six Men Killed As Train Hits Car, Drags It a Mile

Mineola, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP).—Six men, including a father and two sons, were killed today when the Long Island Railroad's Cannonball Express struck the truck in which they were riding and dragged it a mile.

Among the dead were Edward Kranglewicz, of Bayside, N. Y., and his sons Edward, jr., 22, and Michael, 19. Another son, Joseph, 24, who was driving the men home from their jobs as concrete mixers, was critically injured. Also killed were Joseph Oleski and Joseph Huzuski, both of Flushing, N. Y., and an unidentified man.

The accident occurred at the height of the commuters' rush hour at St. Paul's Crossing in Western Mineola. The six-car train, bound for New York from Montauk, tore up rails and scattered debris, halting inbound and outbound railroad traffic for more than an hour and a half.

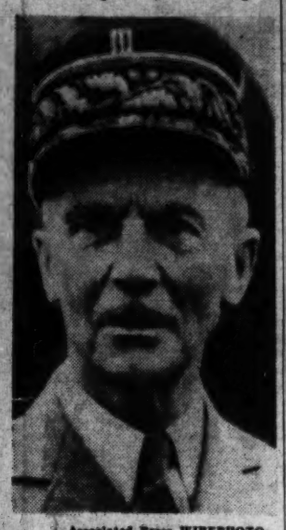
Huntziger Burns To Death in Crash

French War Minister and Seven Others Killed Returning From Tour of North Africa

By Taylor Henry
Associated Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Nov. 12.—The No. 3 man in the Vichy Regime, Gen. Charles Huntziger, was killed today along with seven other persons returning from a mission to Africa when his plane crashed and burned on a foggy mountainside after apparently avoiding a forced landing in German-held territory.

The little general, whose signature of the German armistice June 22, 1940, created the demarcation line which he apparently declined to cross today, was coming back to Vichy from a three-week tour of north Africa in his capacity of war minister and commander in chief of the army when the fog closed in.



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GEN. CHARLES HUNTZIGER,

The four-motored plane, Huntziger's personal machine bearing his device and motto, "Plus est en nous" (we are capable of more), crashed against a mountain-side 15 miles from the town of Le Vigan, in the desolate country east of the Tarn River in southern France. The wreckage was found early tonight.

In Vichy the war ministry was thrown into confusion by the news and it was believed in diplomatic circles that the general's death would have an important effect on the delicate balance of Marshal Petain's gvoernment.

Huntziger, 61, held one of the keys to this balance. He had remained minister of war even after Vice Premier Admiral Darlan had taken over his other portfolio of minister of defense. Definitely antiBritish, he had been sent to North Africa in October to confer with Gen. Maxim Weygand, who is at the head of France's untried armies on that continent.

The official announcement of the accident said that all aboard the plane were killed. It was believed the dead included Jean Labusquiere, head of Huntziger's private secretariat, the author of a strategical history of the French-German fighting of May and June, 1940. The other dead were presumed to be Huntziger's aide, Capt. De Royere; the minister's valet, and an unidentified army major, Pilot Lefevre, the radio operator, and a cameraman who filmed Huntziger's trip.

As reconstructed from brief radio messages, the plane's route indicated the pilot roamed over the unoccupied zone, desperately seeking a place to land in the fog but turning back each time he neared the demarcation line, so as not to land in German-held territory.

The plane circled the Marseille airport for 20 minutes but the ceiling there was only 100 feet, so it headed north to Vichy, then to a point near the demarcation line, back to Montpelier, then north to Sainte Enimie, from which the last message was received.

The temperature was about 25 degrees fahrenheit, and it was believed that ice on the wings may have contributed to the crash, along with a dangerously low gasoline supply.

Boys from a labor service camp found the wreckage on the thickly-wooded mountainside at an altitude of about 4200 feet.

Huntziger was head of the French commission which signed the 1940 armistices with both Germans and Italians and was named minister of war on September 6, 1940, replacing Weygand, who went to North Africa.

Army to Test 'Flivver' Planes for Use in Directing Troop Movements by Air

The Army yesterday placed rush orders for about 80 small "flivver" airplanes for testing in current maneuvers as to possible extensive use with front-line troops.

Preliminary tests already held indicate that such craft may be valuable for directing troop movements by air, for use as couriers and for local observation by small unit commanders. To determine what they can do, the Army has called on three makers of sportsman airplanes to furnish it with models from existing stocks so they may be used in the First Army war games this month.

About half of the "puddle-jumpers," as Air Force men call them, will be Piper Cubs and the others will be similar craft turned out by the Aeronca Aircraft Corporation and Taylorcraft Aviation Corporation. They are strut-braced high wing monoplanes about 18 feet long with wing-spread of 34 feet. Each is propelled by a 65-horsepower 4-cylinder Continental engine.

Chief advantage of the "puddle-jumper" over normal Army observation planes is its small size and slow landing speed. It "can land on a back lot," airmen say, and can throttle down to 40 miles an hour. Larger airplanes must have some sort of flying field to land on and take off from and cannot be slowed down sufficiently to make an efficient "aerial traffic cop" to coordinate troop movements.

Twelve of the planes were bought for the Louisiana maneuvers in September and gave so much promise that the War Department decided to buy more for larger-scale tests this month.

Officials say that during the war games the "flivvers" were landed on highways and pulled up to roadside automobile service stations for refueling. It proved possible to bring them so close to the ground at such a low speed that it was possible to talk to ground troops by megaphone.

Two-way radio sets, however, are installed on the 80 craft just ordered. The planes are cheap, costing about $3000, and contain few of the "bottleneck" materials which limit the construction of combat planes.

Some officers believe the craft may be found so useful they will be ordered in large numbers for ground troop use, perhaps partly replacing the motorcycle as a military courier and providing a method not now possible for coordinating troop operations.

Car Care

By Ed Carl

One Way to Avoid Traffic Charges

Do you know that out of the recent heavy charges imposed by D. C. Commissioners for Traffic Violations eight are for evidences of car neglect. Heavy fines are imposed for bad brakes, improper lights, no signal devices, no rear view mirror—eight charges in all amounting to $68 in fines for simple car defects all quickly correctable for only $5 by Call Carl, Washington's "Little Detroit." You may be challenged for just one of these—a Traffic Bureau brake check may cost you $10. Avoid traffic troubles and costs—have these minor, penalty-carrying car repairs made now by Call Carl. Partial Text of Churchill's War Report to Commons

Saying Invasion Now Is Impossible, He Forecasts B. E. F. in 1943

London, Nov. 12.—Following is a partial text of the speech made by Prime Minister Churchill in Commons today:

"I am able to give some information about the war at sea. The house will remember that very good reasons were given . . . for leaving off publishing monthly figures of sinkings by enemy action, and how these precise periodical statements made at too frequent intervals gave the enemy valuable information as to how his varying tactics were succeeding, but there is no objection to giving exact figures over a longer period.

I take this occasion to give figures for the last four months ending with October and comparing them to figures published for the four preceding months ending with June. In the four months ending with June we lost two million tons, or an average of 500,000 tons a month. In the last four months ending with October we lost less than three-quarters of a million tons or an average of 180,000 tons a month.

A hundred and eighty thousand tons contrasts very favorably with 500,000 tons.

I see Mr. Lloyd George there. We shared in a very humble position but with full knowledge terrible anxieties of 1917. We saw the figures mount, but we also saw the sudden fall. However, we must not count at all that the danger is past.

But the facts are more favorable than represented in the decline in the four-month period of from 500,000 to 180,000, because from the point of view of keeping alive your lines of communication and waging war you have to take in account not only of what is lost but of new building.

I do not intend to give exact figures about new building; but making allowances for the new building, net loss to our mercantile marine, apart from captures from the enemy or United States assistance, the net loss has been reduced in the last four months to a good deal less than one-fifth of what it was in the previous four months. This has been done in spite of the fact that there never have been more U-boats or long-range aircraft than are working now.

While that fact should lead us to increase our successful exertions and should in no way favor an easy habit of mind, it does give solid and sober assurance that we shall be able to maintain our sea-borne traffic until the great American shipbuilding promised for 1942 comes into service. The United States are building merchant ships on a scale many times what we could do in this island.

If we are able to get through this year we shall certainly find ourselves in a good supply of ships in 1942, and if the war against U-boats and enemy aircraft continues to prosper as it has done—about which, of course, there can be no guarantee—it seems to me the freedom-loving powers will be possessed of large quantities of ships in 1943 which will enable overseas operations to take place utterly beyond British resources at present time.

Meanwhile, destruction of enemy shipping is proceeding with even greater violence than before. During the four months ended October, there were sunk or seriously damaged nearly a million tons. In the Mediterranean, enemy losses have been particularly severe and there is evidence that he is finding it very difficult to reinforce or even supply his armies on the African shores.

This last (Axis) convoy was a particularly valuable one and its total destruction together with the devastion being wrought by our submarines in the Mediterranean is certainly very much to be rejoiced over.

There are at least 40,000 women, children and noncombatants in Abyssinia (Ethiopia). Some time ago, guided by humanitarian instincts, we offered to let the Italian government take these people home if they would send them under the necessary safeguards to ports of the Red Sea. The Italian govrnment accepted this proposal and an agreement was reached on all details.

But they never have been able so far to send the ships necessary because destruction of their shipping is proceeding at such a high rate and to such a serious extent.

All this makes me hopeful (but I would not prophesy) that the German and Italian boast that they will take the Suez by the end of May last, is likely to remain unfulfilled by Christmas.

Production Increases

But that is much more than we had the right to expect when the Italians made war upon us and the French deserted us in the Mediterranean 18 months ago.

The fact that our shipping losses have so remarkably diminished—and diminished at the very time when Hitler boasted his sea war would be at its height—must be taken in conjunction with our greatly increased production of food at home.

At the beginning of the year, when it looked as if we should have to choose to some extent between food and munitions materials, I asked the cabinet to approve a minimum food importation which should be maintained, if necessary, even at the expense of munitions material.

There is no doubt that the diet of our people has been severely curtailed and has become far less varied and interesting; but still at the rate we are now going, it is sufficient for our physical health, although I am hoping we shall be able to give a somewhat larger share of available supplies of meat to workers who need it most.

The agricultural ministers for England and Scotland are to be congratulated upon the very great expansion they have made in our home food production. In a short space of two years, the area under crops has been increased by no less than 45 per cent.

Although the corn (wheat) harvest that was gathered was not quite so good as we had hoped it would be before I left for the Atlantic meeting—here I must say I shall be as careful about abstaining from prophecy in agricultural as I am in military matters—the corn (wheat) harvest crop which has been garnered was 50 per cent greater than in 1939.

Despite all difficulties we must go on to produce still more, not only because of the ever present menace to our importations from abroad, but because it is possible as the war develops that our military operations may make much more extensive demands on our shipping than it now is possible to meet.

I mention these facts at the risk of being accused of complacency. When I spoke a month ago, I mentioned the fact that our people would have better Christmas dinners than last year and dinners which would be more justified by the food position. For this, I incurred a severe rebuke from the editor of the Daily Herald, who wrote of Spartan austerity, and I trust editorial staffs will practice as well as preach: We make war, not assail.

Well, it is a poor heart that never rejoices. I must say I do not share the opinions of those who begrudge the British people a reasonable diet and a square meal at Christmas. I trust there will not be over indulgence but that we shall not be blamed for stoking up those fires of human energy upon which success in this long struggle depends.

Some time ago we were anxious about our coal position, and it still gives us cause for concern. I am glad to say, however, thanks to the president of the board of trade and secretary for mines, the situation is better than appeared likely a few months ago. Our stocks of coal are now between two and three million tons larger than they were a year ago, and they are far better distributed.

There are good grounds for believing we shall come through the winter all right without having to derange the army by having to withdraw miners from their platoons.

There is nothing Hitler would dislike more than my recital of these unassailable but prosaic facts.

There is nothing his regime dreads more than that we should be capable of fighting a prolonged war and the proof of failure of their efforts to starve us into submission.

In various remarks Deputy Fuehrer Hess, has let fall from time to time during his sojourn in our midst, nothing has been more clear than that Hitler relied upon a starvation attack even more than upon invasion to bring us to our knees.

His hopes were centered upon our starvation as his boasts have made the world aware.

So far as 1941 is concerned those hopes at least have been dashed to the ground, but this only increases his need to come at us by direct invasion as soon as he can screw up his courage and make arrangements to take the plunge.

We must have everything working forward for the improved weather of spring so we are well prepared to meet any scale of attack that can be directed upon us.

Although we are infinitely stronger than we were six months or a year ago, yet at the same time the enemy has had ample time for preparation. I am sure if this attack is attempted upon us by the Germans it will be upon a plan that has been thought out in every detail with their customary ruthlessness and thoroughness.

I now come to the criticism of the government. Sir Percy Harris said that in war criticism is the life blood of democracy. Well, in war, it is very hard to bring about successes or very easy to make mistakes or to point them out after they have been made. There was a custom in ancient China that anyone who wished to criticize the government could memorialize the Emperor and, providing he followed it up by committing suicide, very great respect was paid to his word and no ulterior motive was assigned.

It seems to have been, from many points of view, a wise custom, but certainly I would be the last to suggest it should be made retrospective. Our universal resolves to keep the parliamentary institutions in full activity amid the stress of war has been proved.

Thorough Debate

It is a feat of enormous difficulty never accomplished in any such completeness of perfection in history. The government bases itself upon the House of Commons. They look to the House for aid and comfort amid the incalculable perils by which we are beset. We are entitled to seek from the House from time to time a formal renewal of their confidence.

This debate on the address furnishes the signal outstanding parliamentary opportunity of the year. It is the grand inquest of the nation. The fact of passing address in reply without any amendment is proof to the nation and to the whole world that the King's ministers enjoy the confidence of Parliament.

I should like to point out for the benefit of those outside the House and in countries abroad who do not realize the potency of our parliamentary institutions that any amendment, however, seductive, however, misleading, tendentious or artful, sober or wise, which the wit or other qualities of man can devise, can be put upon the paper and be thoroughly debated, and if a division takes place, then everyone can see exactly where the government stands and how far we can count upon the loyalty of the House.

I say this for the guidance of those in countries abroad: That no one voting against the government will be assaulted with rubber truncheons or sent to a concentration camp or otherwise molested. In their private lives the worst that could happen to them would be that they might have to make some rather laborious explanations to their constituents. . .

We have reached into the twenty-sixth month of this war and in some ways have surpassed the deployment of national effort at home which was not reached after all the slaughter until the forty-eighth month of the last war.

We cannot rest content with that, and if Parliament by patriotic and constructive counsel and without unduly harassing those who bear the load can stimulate and accelerate our further advance, the House of Commons will be playing its part unyielding, persevering, indomitable, in overthrow of another continental tyrrany, as in the olden time.

A STATEMENT..

Notwithstanding earnest efforts on the part of the management to negotiate a contract with our warehouse employees, the Union has seen fit to call a strike because of our refusal to agree to a closed shop.

Over 40% of our warehouse employees do not belong to the Union and we respect the right of these non-union employees just as much as we do the right of the union members.

We will not agree to discharge any employee because he does not want to join a union, nor will we force employees to pay dues against their will.

We have negotiated in good faith on wages and working conditions and we believe that without any question any point of controversy other than the closed shop can be amicably settled by negotiation.

Higher Prices In Carolinas Irk Soldiers

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Nov. 12.—The poverty of the South and the heightening drain of armament on the Nation's resources have conspired in the last six weeks to bring this most hospitable section into undeserved disrepute.

Men of the First Army, including those of the Twenty-ninth Division, were overwhelmed by the lavishness of the welcome people of North Carolina and South Carolina gave them last September. Now many of these men are grumbling that these same people are profiteering; that they are bleeding the soldiers for what they will yield in the two weeks of maneuver yet remaining.

It is true that prices on many commodities have risen since the 300,000-odd men of the First Army got here. It is true that hotel rates are higher than they were in September. It is true that soft drinks cost 6 cents in South Carolina and cigarettes 18 cents and a nickel cigar 6 cents.

The men who feel themselves being gouged by the civilians among whom they are camped overlook these facts:

That they themselves have helped to deplete retail stocks bought at prices the merchant can not duplicate today; that prices for the same commodities have risen also in Washington, Baltimore, Richmond and Pittsburgh.

Sales Taxes for 15 Years

That both North Carolina and South Carolina for 15 years or so have levied sales taxes on all "luxuries" and many necessities.

That prices of hotel rooms are bid up by the demands of the soldiers themselves and that in every room is a printed tariff above which the hotel can not legally advance its price. Previous lower rates have been below those maximum tariffs, held down by lack of demand.

Merchants in the towns of the two Carolinas, no little hurt by the sometimes abrupt resentment of soldiers at rising prices, are delighted to exhibit their invoices bearing advanced wholesale rates. These merchants more than anyone else deplore the existence of juke joints and beer parlors set up by out-of-Staters to make the soldier trade pay all it can.

There are thousands of soldiers from the North who have not yet understood the scale of prices for things and services indigenous to these States. Great luscious pecans at 20 cents a pound take his breath. He does not put himself in the market for vegetables and fruits whose prices would make a Washington housewife talk in her sleep for joy.

But he has gasped many times at tailors and seamstresses who ask apologetically if 25 cents would be too much for a job that would cost $1.50 or $2 in Washington. He has rented fine spacious rooms in private homes for 50 cents or $1 a night from nice old ladies who never before have entertained strange men in the house and whose concession in doing so now is something no money could pay for. He has become almost accustomed to paying 30 cents for $2 worth of laundry and finding his sox darned and his buttons sewed on in addition.

Whatever shortcomings the Carolinas have revealed in the face of the most overwhelming invasion since Sherman's day, lack of hospitality is not among them.

Meanwhile, tomorrow night at 6, the Twenty-ninth Division will pack up, load itself into more than 1200 trucks and start rolling eastward for its supreme test in mock battle.

By Friday morning it will be in chilly bivouacs east of the Pee Dee River ready to fling itself at H hour Sunday against the steel spearheads of the armored corps. In other bivouacs to its right and left will be eight infantry divisions and unrevealed numbers of special corps and Army units.

In the First Army line will be the First Corps with its Eighth and Ninth Triangular and Thirtieth Square Divisions; the Sixth Corps with the First Triangular and Twenty-sixth Square Divisions and Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Forty-fourth Square Divisions of Second Corps. Corps and Army troops will include artillery of all types, aviation, light tanks, cavalry and special antitank units whose size and composition are secret.

Seventy-five miles to the west, behind the Catawba River, will lie the Fourth Corps, consisting of the Thirty-first and Forty-third Square Divisions and the Fourth Motorized Division and the Armored Corps, with its First and Second Armored Division with some 1400 light and medium tanks. With this force also will be special corps units and combat aviation.

The 'Thin Red Line of 'eroes' Talk Is Bunk To British Naval Officer Who Sees War as a Job

Legion Plans Dinner For Seamen Here For Benefit Game

You're a British navy doctor and it's the kind of day in the Mediterranean when hot sweat trickles down your chest and not a wisp of wind stirs. Then the spotter planes come back with news that the enemy is coming.

You take your place quietly forward and soon the roaring bombers dive, releasing their hell of metal on your ship before the upsweep to strike again. A bomb-splinter catches a man and you work quickly but methodically in patching him up.

Men die and men fall into the sea and you keep working, of course, and don't break down because you're too blasted busy. Emotions don't crowd into your mind, understand, because there's no time for that sort of thing.

That was Lieut. Seton Campbell, medical officer in the group of men from the British aircraft carriers Illustrious and Formidable, here last night for benefit rugby and soccer games at Griffith Stadium, stringing out in strong English accent the story of what happens inside an Englishman when the world begins to fall. He was interviewed at the American Legion Clubhouse, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

"Heroism? Bunk!" he said. "We don't stand there pushing our chests out and saying, 'All right, we're in it, boys.' We go to our posts and work, simply because there's a job to be done.

"There's no glamour about it. We're working for something, sure. We want the right to live in our own way. But it's a job to be done. Mainly that."

Eighty or so British sailors, men who have been under fire and some of whom had to "swim for it," came in soon, wide-eyed and courteous. Many of them looked surprisingly young. They were told about the big turkey dinner the District of Columbia American Legion was going to give them after the game. They didn't believe it at first, but, convinced, went around with hands out measuring the probable size of the turkeys.

About heroism, the sailors had the same attitude as has Lieut. Campbell. There was Jimmie Mills, 19 years old, oft under fire but never witness of a battle because he works below decks transmitting orders to the gunners. The mental strain of hearing but not seeing bombs at sea is said to be among the worst.

But "we don't get frightened," said Jimmie, slicing into the hot roast beef. "We've no chance to be frightened. We've got the job to get rid of him." He paused. "It's a job that's got to be done. It's a job that's going to be done."

13 Women Invited To Visit Britain By Mrs. Biddle

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Nov. 12.—Thirteen women have been invited by Mrs. Anthony J. Biddle, jr., wife of the American Ambassador to the governments in exile in London, for a fortnight's visit of Great Britain to study the wartime activities of British women.

The names of the 13 will be announced at the annual friendship dinner sponsored by New York business and professional women's clubs, Monday night at the Biltmore.

In Britain, the 13 will be received by Prime Minister Churchill and members of his cabinet. The women will be selected from groups covering such diversified fields as industrial, farm and club work.

100-Ship Convoy Docks Unscathed

Liverpool, Nov. 12 (INS).—Admiral Sir Percy Noble, commander in chief of Britain's "western approaches," revealed in a speech tonight that a 100-ship convoy from the United States had recently arrived without a single loss.

"This feat," the admiral said, "is equal to a successful battle in Libya."

Bill Offered to Drop Automobile Use Tax

Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, told the House yesterday he had introduced legislation repealing the $5 use tax imposed on automobiles under the 1941 revenue act "because it would be very impractical to carry out."

Chilean and Argentine Warn U. S. to Speed Up Flow of Goods

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 12.—A Chilean government official, "speaking frankly," was joined by an Argentina labor leader here in warning that unless the United States speeds up shipments of machinery and finished goods to South America, the good neighbor policy will be considered nothing but words by the Latin nations.

The statements were made last night in addresses at a Chamber of Commerce dinner given in honor of 34 touring South American delegates to the recent International Labor Organization Conference.

Senator Isauro Torres, chairman of the committee on labor and social legislation of the Chilean Senate, gave his speech rapidly in Spanish.

"Speaking frankly," asserted the Senator, "and I think you want me to speak frankly, the United States is not living up to the good neighbor policy.

"You are sending us insufficient shipments of the goods on which South American economics depend for living.

"When the war ends, Europe and Asia will once again try to grab off the rich South American markets. It is up to you to supply it now at the time of greatest need."

Jose Domenech, secretary-general of the Argentina General Confederation of Labor, said, "The advance guard of Hitler can already be seen in South America, particularly in my country.

"Latin American unemployment, due to a United States lack of ships, priorities and other difficulties in sending goods, is only a bulwark to Hitler, playing precisely into his hands."

Both speakers praised Uncle Sam for "pioneering" in the realms of "liberty and social justice" and urged expanded efforts here to hold South American friendship by helping those countries to reach balanced economies.

Earlier, David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, surprised the visitors with a speech in Spanish in which he outlined the history of the S. W. O. C. and added that "high wages make a nation prosperous."

E. J. Bond, Maryland Insurance Head, Dies

Baltimore, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Edward Johnson Bond, jr., president of the Maryland Casualty Co., died in his office tonight of a heart attack. He was 53. Company officials said that Bond, head of the firm since 1937, died at 6:40 p. m., E. S. T., after suffering two lesser attacks during the afternoon. They described him as having been in apparently good health.

Born in Petersburg, Va., Bond graduated from the Virginia Military Institute in 1908 and joined the Maryland firm the same year. By 1920 he had worked his way up to the vice presidency, a post he held until named president in 1937.

WAS DEAFened NOW HEARS CLOCK TICK

A. M. Beitchaman, Newark, N. J., writes: "Before using Orotone Ear Drops, I was so deafened that I could not hear the clock tick. After using Orotone, I can now hear the clock tick with both ears." Thousands now hard-of-hearing would hear clearly and distinctly again, and also get relief from buzzing, ringing head noises, clogged up feeling in ears, if impacted wax that blocks ear canals and presses on sensitive eardrums was removed. Try Orotone Ear Drops as directed. They are safe and contain an ingredient especially recommended for this purpose. Month's supply only $1.00.

Bolt of Southern Democrats Threatens Neutrality Revision

crats supporting the bill held a strategy conference in the office of Chairman Sol Bloom.

Representative Luther Johnson, (Democrat), of Texas, said the consensus was that the bill would pass but the vote would be close.

Fighting to stem the revolt, Administration leaders earlier warned House members that defeat of the bill would weaken American defense in an hour of crisis in the West and the Far East.

"It will give aid, comfort and encouragement to the dictators, both in Europe and the Orient," shouted Johnson.

"The word will go out to Berlin and Rome that America is not interested in the fight against Hitler," declared Representative Poage, (Democrat) of Texas. "It will go out to Tokyo that Japan has a free hand in the Orient."

As in the Senate, where Southern Democratic ranks first broke against the bill because of Administration failure to take a legislative stand against defense labor strikes, several Southern bolters based their opposition on this point.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, who has supported every other foreign policy measure, said he would not vote to send merchant ships into combat zones unless the Government "puts a stop to the labor dictatorship," which, he said, is sabotaging defense.

The Smith speech was typical of other Southern conservative opposition, and belief spread last night that the Administration would strive to meet it with assurances of a strong defense labor policy before today's vote.

Roosevelt Move Expected

Word that the President may support legislation to curb defense strikes spread through the House after the C. I. O. walkout on the National Mediation Board.

Speaker Rayburn, who only on rare occasions steps down from the rostrum to address House members, is expected to do so today, but whether he will bring a verbal message from the President could not be learned.

First serious break in Democratic support for the bill came when Representative Richards (Democrat), of South Carolina, became floor leader of the House opposition and announced:

"These amendments I cannot swallow, in good conscience. If they are adopted, it means that the United States goes back once more to utter dependence on international law to insure peace, when international law has already been raped and stabbed and is already gasping for breath. . . . I would vote as readily for a declaration of war."

Unexpected, even by his Texas colleagues, was a speech by Representative South (Democrat), of Texas, announcing he would vote against the bill even though he knew a majority in his State were for it.

South demanded that "before we are called on to make further sacrifices, England must move in and pay greater sacrifices to save herself." He said he feared Britain might bring the United States into the war "and then would want to sit back and referee it."

Other Democrats who supported ship arming but spoke against broader action included Sasscer of Maryland, Beam of Illinois and Lynch of Illinois.

61 Votes at Stake

The House passed the ship-arming bill October 19 by a 259-to-138 majority. Administration problem was to prevent a vote shift of sufficient proportions to change 61 votes—the number needed by opponents to wipe out the 121-ship-arming majority.

Thirty-nine Republicans voted for armed merchantmen. House pollers said that if they could hold as many as 21 of the G. O. P. votes the bill would pass. Only 21 Democrats opposed ship arming, but a larger number already have declared against the Senate measure and a wide doubtful fringe left all polls uncertain. The usual "missionary work" was in progress by both sides in the uncommitted belt of votes, which holds the fate of the measure.

The liberal eight-hour debate rule was speedily adopted yesterday by the House and Chairman Bloom led off for the bill with a denial that it meant a declaration of war and deploring "such reckless statements."

It was not until the South unexpectedly spoke against the bill that leaders sensed the full extent of the Southern revolt. Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, a leading G. O. P. adherent of Administration foreign policy, was sent in to answer his criticism.

Eaton asked why opponents of the bill supported billions for defense if they thought the Neutrality Act was any safeguard against war. Opposition members opened a running fire of questions.

Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, remarked that a defensive war on home soil was quite a different thing from a foreign war, and Eaton shot back:

"You'll never convince me that it is better to permit war to come over here and destroy our cities and turn our whole Nation into a charnal house."

"Hitler . . . Uncrowned Saint"

When Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, attacked British inaction, Eaton sarcastically replied:

"Oh, of course, the British are a bad lot. Hitler is the great uncrowned saint. I say, to hell with Hitler. I get sick and tired of this inferiority complex."

Coleader with Richards of the opposition, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, led off against the bill with the charge that "this is an out-and-out war proposal." Fish argued that "if our Government-owned ships, carrying Government-owned war supplies, go into British war zones and ports they will be attacked, and the inevitable result will be that the United States will be dragged into a total war."

Before the House met, a group of Republican opponents led by Representative Knutsen (Republican), of Minnesota, conferred on opposition strategy and voiced faint hopes of defeating the bill.

In one unofficial quarter it was said nearly 50 Democrats had been counted as opposed to the bill.

Reported still in the doubtful column, because they have not yet announced commitments either way, were such influential Southern Democrats as Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Dissension in the House over the Administration's tax and price-control proposals, some observers said, has combined with labor policy resentment to complicate what otherwise leaders believed would have been a clear-cut foreign policy victory.

Fish Ignores Probe Subpena

the grand jurors ordered him summoned. It was O'Connor who then advanced the idea that Fish did not have to go before the grand jurors because he is a Congressman. O'Connor claimed the subpena affronted the dignity of the House and pressed his point in a telegram to the Speaker, in which he said he once was chairman of the Rules Committee, but neglected to say that he is the lawyer for one witness under indictment and another who appears unwilling to appear.

Chairman Sumners said the Judiciary Committee will meet again this morning to consider a report dealing strictly with the law of privilege and leaving the decision of the Fish matter up to the House.

Until the committee acts, Fish will be able to take advantage of the House Resolution directing the privilege inquiry. The resolution said he was to "refrain from responding" to the subpena until a report was made.

Fish's failure to appear having been noted "for the record," Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., proceeded yesterday with the questioning of two other witnesses, George T. Eggleston, editor, and Douglas M. Stewart, publisher of Scribner's Commentator.

The men were summoned last week after Prosecutor Maloney accused them in open court of attempting to obstruct the German agent investigation by coming here with Bessie Feagin, their promotion manager, and talking to her about her testimony.

Stewart has been ordered to return for questioning at 1 p. m. today.

Quintuplets Born In Brazil but 3 Die

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Quintuplets were born to Senora Agripina Bernes De Ulrich yesterday at Limeira, but this morning three boys died, leaving a boy and a girl living, according to Dr. Teixeira Camargo, jr., who attended the mother.

Army Recruiting Selects, Guardsmen

Carolinas. The Associated Press said that several officers and men of the armored force had been queried: "Would you be willing to serve overseas with an armored division?" Officers of the unit said that the War Department was "carrying this thing out."

Late yesterday came an explanation from department officials. The question is being asked in connection with a recruiting drive among selectees and National Guard enlisted men to join the Regular Army, it was said. The drive is a general one throughout the Army, officials indicated.

Whether the question is intended as a warning to men contemplating transfer to the Regulars that their status would be changed, or has another purpose was not disclosed. Selectees, Guardsmen and Reservists may individually waive the restriction on their being sent overseas, it is believed.

The news accounts from First Army headquarters in Carolina made no reference to any recruiting drive. They declared that officers as well as men had been queried as to their willingness to serve overseas. War Department press spokesmen, however, said they knew of no such queries going to officers.

Lecture Series Begins Tonight

The first in a series of lectures sponsored by the Holy Cross Alumnae Association of St. Mary's Academy, Alexandria, will be held tonight at 8 o'clock, in the academy auditorium. The Rev. Robert Slavin, O. P., Ph.D., will discuss "Novels and Morals."

The alumnae association has planned a series of six lectures to be arranged by its newly formed lecture guild, of which Marie Downey is chairman. Other members of the committee are Miss Rose Penn, Miss Jean Fannon, Miss Edwardina Warren, Miss Helen Nugent, Miss Marie Greene, Mrs. Robert Gaither, Mrs. Harvey Schwarzmann and Miss Mary Louise Williams.

'Hardest Hitting' Plane Built in U. S.

New Fighter Has Firepower of 15 Big Aircraft Guns

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 11.—Development for the Army air forces and the British of what it termed the "hardest hitting fighter" in the world was announced today by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

While the plane's armament was not made public, its fire power was estimated unofficially to be almost the equivalent of five .50-caliber and ten .30-caliber guns.

A .50-caliber bullet is one-half inch in diameter.

Standard equipment up to now on British pursuit planes has been eight guns of .30 or .50 caliber or a combination of the two.

Burdette S. Wright, vice president and general manager of the company's aircraft division, said the plane, the "F" series of the O-40 pursuit type, was being manufactured in large but undisclosed numbers for both the Army and the British.

British Engine Design

"Army experts agree with our engineers," commented Wright, "that the new P-40F will outshoot any combat plane of its type in the air, that it will compare favorably in the matter of speed with any other fighter in the world, and that it can go into action at a ceiling comparable with aircraft which it will meet in combat."

The plane is the first military aircraft type in the United States to be powered with the new American-built Rolls-Royce Merlin engine of British design. The engine is being manufactured by the Packard Motor Car Co.

Wright estimated the top speed of the fighter at 23 per cent greater than the obsolescent Curtiss Hawk P-36, first brought out in 1937, of which the O-40 is a development. Unofficial sources said with that as a basis, the "F" series would fly only a fraction of a mile an hour less than 400 miles an hour.

Estimate of Power

While the actual fire power of the Merlin-powered plane was withheld, some estimate of its striking force can be obtained by comparison with the old P-36, which was equipped with one .30 caliber and one .50 caliber gun.

The new fighter has six and two-thirds times that fire power, or, expressed in terms of muzzle velocity, 60 million foot-pounds of energy with all guns firing.

To Help Youth

Church Aid Urged for Chaplains

By Robert Tate Allen

Post Church Editor

By backing service chaplains' work, churches have an "unparalled opportunity" to spiritually influence "young America," contends Dr. S. Arthur Devan, director of the general committee on Army and Navy chaplains.

He was interviewed yesterday at his office in the Woodward Building as he made preparations for leaving this weekend for the Army maneuvers in the Carolinas, where he will spend two weeks studying chaplain-soldier relationships.

Dr. Devan will return to Washington for a few days later this month, then will be off again on another visitation—a task becoming increasingly important in the present emergency, it was pointed out.

"These chaplains," said Dr. Devan, "are often very young and inexperienced, and find themselves in an atmosphere not entirely congenial to spiritual development. They have to be of this world, if not a part of it, but they are eager to be close to the men. Their problems are bewildering, but there are few to whom they can turn to for advice."

Director Devan, who has received requests for visits to chaplains from Newfoundland to Hawaii, feels a great concern about the spiritual needs of men in the service, since their attitudes and experiences there tend to shape their civilian lives later.

To help churches keep in close touch with their "boys" in the camps, Dr. Devan, with the cooperation of George F. Ketchum, his assistant, has just issued the first of thousands of "cards of commendation" to churches for distribution to young men entering the service.

Mrs. Lena Clagett Dies in Hospital; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Lena Jones Clagett, 67, wife of Elbert T. Clagett, of Rockville, Md., died yesterday in Garfield Hospital. The funeral will take place at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow from St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville, and will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Thomas J. McKew. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mrs. Clagett was a daughter of the late Sylvester C. Jones and was a life-long resident of the Rockville and Potomac areas. She is survived by her husband and a brother, J. Hampton Jones, secretary of the Farmers' Banking & Trust Co. of Rockville.

Mrs. Lucille Acuff Rites Arranged For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucille Eberts Acuff, of Bethesda, Md., will be conducted from the parlors of the Pumphrey funeral home, 7005 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Acuff, wife of J. Leland Acuff, chief examiner in the classification division of the Department of the Interior, died at her home late Wednesday night.

Born in Centralia, Ill., Mrs. Acuff came to Washington in 1918 to accept a position with the Treasury Department. While here she was active in many church organizations, holding office in the Ladies Auxiliary of Bethesda Baptist Church.

Mrs. Acuff is survived by her husband and two sons: Byron, 4, and Jack, 9; and her mother, Mrs. J. H. Eberts, also of Bethesda.

Lynch Funeral Tomorrow at 2

Funeral services for Talbott Lynch, 54, of 1610 North Danville Street, Arlington, who died on Tuesday at Mount Alto Hospital, will be conducted tomorrow at 2 o'clock from O. C. Pearson's funeral chapel in East Falls Church. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Harry Baker, pastor of the Falls Church Methodist Church. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Lynch served during the World War in the Quartermaster Corps, at Camp Lee, Va. For 33 years he was an employe of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Mrs. Tomlinson, Aviator's Mother, Dies in Missouri

Mrs. Medora Gosnell Tomlinson, mother of Commander William G. Tomlinson, U. S. N., died unexpectedly Tuesday night in Kansas City where she had gone recently after spending the last year with Commander and Mrs. Tomlinson at their home, 3327 Dent Place Northwest.

Mrs. Tomlinson was widely known in Washington, having visited here frequently and having lived here for a time when her son, a naval flier, was first stationed here. She also came here in connection with her work in national organizations, which included the Colonial Dames, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the American War Mothers.

She was the widow of John C. Tomlinson, a Kansas City manufacturer; the daughter of William Gosnell, a pioneer Missouri settler, and a descendant of the Corbin family of Virginia. Funeral services and burial will be in Kansas City.

Rep. May's Sister Dies

Chairman May (Democrat), of the House Military Affairs Committee, was called to Kentucky yesterday by the death of his only sister, Mrs. Emily Ratliff, 63, of Prestonsburg. Mrs. Ratliff died Tuesday at her home following a prolonged illness.

Artilleryman Held In London Killings

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—Philip J. Ward, 31-year-old artillery gunner, was charged with murder today in a motorized shooting spree which resulted in three deaths in London's suburbs.

Ward pleaded innocent to a charge of murdering Leslie Ludford, crippled lawyer, who, police said, was one of three fatally shot by Ward during a wild automobile cruise in which he terrorized Armistice Day strollers with shotgun blasts. Two of the slain were women. Five other persons were injured.

Turkish Premier's Resignation Hinted

Ankara, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Refik Saydam has asked for and received a month's leave of absence on grounds of ill health, an official statement revealed tonight, and informed quarters considered it almost certain that he would resign.

Democratic Women's Chief Fights Attempt to Remove Her

The executive board of the Democratic Women's National Council has summoned its president, Mrs. Mary Gary Murray, of the Roosevelt Hotel, "to stand trial" today on charges of violating the Hatch Act, insubordination and failure to perform her duties as president, it was learned last night.

Mrs. Murray, outraged by the charges, produced the letter summoning her to "trial" by a special committee at 8:30 p. m. at 1144 Eighteenth Street Northwest and announced her intention of ignoring the summons.

Instead, Mrs. Murray will present her case at a meeting of the full council which she called for Monday night at 8 o'clock in the Fairfax Room of Hotel Willard and appeal for a vote of confidence.

As for the charges, Mrs. Murray said, "They (the executive board) ganged up on me because I would not jump through the hoop for them when they say so."

Charges by the executive board include failure to call or attend meetings of the board, failure to comply with orders of the board, "insubordination by arbitrarily doing various and divers things and spending money of the council without orders from the board," and procuring the services of a Government employe to perform services for the council in violation of the Hatch Act.

Mrs. Murray declared that these charges are without significance, that the Hatch Act complaint resulted from her permitting a Government employe to help her mail envelopes on her own time without compensation.

Mrs. Murray spent yesterday addressing announcements of the Willard Hotel meeting which state, "The most important meeting ever held by the council will be the next meeting."

Whether Mrs. Murray's meeting will be attended by the rest of the executive committee is open to question because the executive committee has decided to meet at 1144 Eighteenth Street at the same time to hear the report of its special committee and perhaps oust Mrs. Murray.

The council is an organization of 385 women interested in meeting to discuss affairs of significance to the Democratic Party. Mrs. Murray said that it has no official connection with the Democratic National Committee.

New Hamline Teacher

Representative John J. Sparkman, of Alabama, will be formally welcomed as new teacher of the Brotherhood Bible Class of Hamline Methodist Church at the opening fall meeting of the brotherhood tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of G. R. Wilhelm, 2124 Sadbury Place Northwest. Wilhelm is brotherhood president.

New Dionne Home to Be Built

Callander, Ontario, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Construction on a new home for the Dionne quintuplets, their seven brothers and sisters and their parents will begin in the spring and the house will be ready for occupancy next summer, it was announced today.

The 7½-year-old quintuplets will continue to live in their nursery until the new home is completed. The new home will be across the road from the old homstead and once the quintuplets move into it, their nursery probably will be converted into a school for them.

War May Take 40 Per Cent Of U. S. Income

By Frederick R. Barkley

Copyright by New York Times

The United States probably will have to devote 40 per cent of its national income to manufacture of materials of war in order to defeat Hitler, Donald M. Nelson, OPM director of priorities, yesterday told a conference here on labor legislation and the problems of its administration.

To do this "quickly," which may mean as much as a three-year job, Nelson said, may take so much raw materials that it may not be possible for the economy to supply the essential needs of the civilian population, let alone their wants.

The conference, which will continue today and tomorrow, is being attended by labor representatives of the Governors of 39 States. It is the eighth annual conference of the kind since establishment of these meetings by Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

Asks Labor's Thought

Secretary Perkins, in opening the conference, called for application of labor's best thought and experience to plan for more active labor participation in the national defense.

"We want to consider what things still need to be done to make our effort successful," she said, "and to consider how to preserve the gains in labor standards made in peacetime without impeding the production of armaments and war supplies.

"We want also to consider how to cushion the transition of communities with a balanced peacetime economy to a necessarily one-sided war economy and how to plan ahead for the inevitable demobilization of war industries and a return to a peacetime basis."

President Roosevelt sent a letter of welcome to the conference, in which he said he hoped the annual meetings would continue and that from them would come "a series of programs and practical suggestions for meeting our urgent national problems, as well as planning for the wider goal of creating a sensible and humane economy in which all nations can participate after the war."

Using 17 Per Cent Now

Nelson, in his address, sought to explain what the OPM is doing, and why.

"We are today taking about 17 per cent of our national income for defense," he said. "We are running at a rate now in payments of somewhere near $1,750,000,000 a month, but that isn't anywhere near enough.

"What is quick? I don't know; two years, three years. I don't know what the length of time is. I do know very definitely, however, that unless we are prepared to throw everything we have into this thing we cannot bring about that turn in the scales that is so necessary, and I doubt if anyone of you really recognizes just what it means to do that and how it is going to affect every one of us."

The speaker then turned to the matter of shortages, the recognition of which he said he believed, still had not come to a great many.

Needs Already Acute

America has become so used to a superabundance of all kinds of raw materials, he said, that it is difficult for people to realize there would be shortages of many important materials with the civilian economy running at its present rate, even if no defense program were under way.

"The shortages are there, they are acute, and I don't know whether we are going to be able to increase production enough to be able to take care of the essential needs of the civilians, not their wants," he added.

Fowler Upheld

6 Groups Denied Tax Exemption

Appeals by six religious and educational groups for exemption from property assessments under an earlier order placing them on tax lists yesterday were denied by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

Upholding recommendations by Walter Fowler, chairman of the real estate tax exemption board, Keech held that two structures at 1749-51 N Street Northwest, headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, are properly taxable because the federation is not "purely a public charity."

A dormitory of St. Mary's Seminary, Inc., 3901 Harewood Road Northeast, is not an educational institution within meaning of the tax exemption law and thus subject to assessment, Keech held.

He handed down a similar ruling in an appeal of the American Pharmaceutical Association, Inc., Twenty-second Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

Other appeals denied affected two lots at 1717-19 Fifteenth Street Northwest, owned by St. Augustine's Parish; part of an old frame building at First and C Streets Northeast, owned by the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Lenthall Home for Widows, 1900 G Street Northwest.

The two lots, Keech declared, have been idle for a number of years. The Christian Science building is used partly for storage of church literature and the balance is vacant. The Lenthall Home is not exempt because of charges made to inmates, he added.

Long Distance Strike Hour Set

ed to the Capital by the Associated Press, were:

In New Brunswick, N. J., officials of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers said a strike had closed the plant of the Mack Manufacturing Corporation, holding up work of 2000 men on ten million dollars in Army tank transmission contracts. The C. I. O. seeks a 15-cent hourly pay rise over the current undisclosed scale.

In Buffalo, N. Y., Hugh Thompson, C. I. O. regional director, said workers at the Bell Aircraft plants in Buffalo and Niagara Falls, at work on 150 million dollars in orders, were left with no other resort "but their economic weapon of the strike."

The C. I. O.-U. A. W. members seek a 20-cent hourly wage increase, a minimum of 75 cents hourly instead of 50, a union shop and the dues checkoff. A walkout was voted October 19 but was delayed pending arbitration. Thompson now says the Mediation Board "failed to settle" the dispute.

In Canton, Ohio, a strike by 25 A. F. of L. machine erectors at the naval ordnance plant stopped operations and forced into idleness 465 production workers and 500 to 600 construction men. The production workers are employed by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., which operates the plant. The erectors work for the Dravo Construction Co. of Pittsburgh, a subcontractor. The strike was attributed by company and A. F. of L. officials to Dravo's refusal to dismiss or transfer C. I. O. men accused of soliciting members.

Discussing the threatened long-distance tie-up, Moran said that today's meeting failed to make any progress and that no effort had been made to certify the dispute to the National Mediation Board. He announced November 3 he had appealed to President Roosevelt to authorize certification.

In Washington, an aide to Secretary of Labor Perkins, only official who can certify a dispute, said that probably no certification would result unless the conciliation service reported failure to settle the problem.

Moran announced that he had notified the Army and Navy, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Defense Communications Board, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Columbia Broadcasting System, National Broadcasting Co., and the Mutual Broadcasting System of the union's intention to go on with the strike.

Each service and organization was informed, Moran said, that the union wished to provide sufficient forces to maintain telephone and telegraph wires for national defense purposes during the strike.

Besides affecting those services and organizations the strike would halt the transmission of pictures by wire and teletypewriter news services. States where workers would not be on strike are Washington, Oregon, New Hampshire, Vermont, Nevada and Montana.

The A. T. and T. has contended that the federation refused to resume negotiations for a new contract to replace one which expired October 22 unless the management would agree in advance to immediate wage increases, "regardless of conditions in various areas."

Under the old contract wage differentials were as high as $21 weekly, Henry Mayer, federation counsel said. He said the present wage scale ran from $18 to $66 for men and from $13 to $31 for women.

5 Rail Brotherhoods Set Strike for Dec. 7

By International News Service

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The Big Five railroad operating brotherhoods today called a nation-wide railroad strike to begin December 7 and leaders of the 14 nonoperating unions tonight were considering similar action, with a decision expected tomorrow.

Together, the brotherhoods and unons represent 1,200,000 railway employes, and, should their strike become effective, every major railroad in the United States would be tied up.

The brotherhoods, demanding a 30 per cent wage increase, previously had rejected as "an insult" President Roosevelt's emergency fact-finding board's recommendation of a 7½ per cent increase.

The nonoperating unions demanded a 30-cent-an-hour increase, but the board recommended only 9 cents an hour, an increase of 13½ per cent.

Observers expected President Roosevelt to intervene to stave off the strike which would be disastrous to the national defense program, much as President Wilson did in 1917 in circumstances almost identical.

Affects All Class I Roads

Whatever the action of the nonoperating unions, it was pointed out that a strike by the brotherhoods, whose 350,000 members actually run the trains of the Nation, effectively would paralyze rail transportation throughout the country and render the 850,000 members of the nonoperating unions idle in any event.

The strike call applies to all class I railroads. These are railroads which each make more than one billion dollars a year in revenue. Those whose revenues are smaller are mostly short lines owned by industrial concerns, or lines between nearby cities used chiefly by commuters.

Announcement of the strike was made by C. J. Goff, assistant president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, who said the walkout would be in three "installments."

One-third of the membership will quit their jobs at 6 a. m. Sunday, December 7, Goff stated. Another third of the operating men will quit at 6 a. m. Monday and the remaning third at 6 a. m. Tuesday, December 9. The strike will involve engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, enginemen and switchmen.

Cooling Off Ends December 5

Those signing the strike call were Goff, Alvanley Johnston, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; H. W. Fraser, president of the Brotherhood of Conductors; A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and T. C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union of North America.

President Roosevelt's emergency board made its recommendations last week, suggesting that the increases should terminate December 31, 1942, unless extended by agreement of both parties. Two days after announcement of the recommendations 400 of the brotherhood's general chairmen met in Chicago and rejected the recommendations as "the most disappointing by a Federal tribunal" in more than 50 years of labor history.

Under Federal statutes, December 5 was the earliest date at which the strike could be called, the law requiring a 30-day cooling-off period before a strike call can be effective. This was dated from the announcement of the emergency board's decision.

Cut Housing Agency Total, Straus Urges

Cut the number of Federal housing agencies and do not attempt to decentralize them, Nathan Straus, United States Housing Authority administrator, yesterday told a House Public Buildings and Grounds subcommittee.

"The remedy for wasteful, inefficient or unnecessary housing agencies is to save space in Washington by abolishing them; not to save space by putting them somewhere else," he declared before the subcommittee conducting hearings on decentralization of Federal buildings here.

Stating that the USHA he heads is a defense agency and already decentralized, he directed his attack at other defense housing agencies "with ill-defined functions, competing avidly with one another."

Duplications Charged

Straus leveled his sharpest barbs at the Division of Defense Housing, suggesting that it be abolished with other duplicating housing agencies in order that USHA be left to solve the defense housing problem alone.

"There are now eight agencies in Washington doing public defense housing, where less than a year and a half ago there was only one," he declared. "None of the seven newer defense housing units has done the job as the one that existed in the beginning (USHA).

"Only about 30,000 families are now living in public defense housing, although the President has already estimated the need at 250,000.

"There are also four agencies engaged in the vain pursuit of defense housing through private industry. Experience in the last war has been confirmed by experience in this crisis, to the effect that private industry cannot possibly provide housing for defense workers in an adequate amount at hte right price."

He told the subcommittee that he pleaded with the Defense Housing Coordinator "against his erroneous notion that private industry could do a large part of the defense housing job."

Incomes Cited

"I told him that 43 per cent of the families of defense workers have incomes of less than $1750 a year, and can afford to pay no more than $30 a month rent. I showed him that between 1935 and 1940 less than 2 per cent of all the private residential housing produced with FHA insurance rented for $30 a month or less, and came within the means of families with incomes of $1750 a year or less.

"I literally begged the coordinator to face the thing realistically, and warned him of the consequences if he did not.

"But the coordinator was deaf to my entreaties based upon the record. Instead, he listened to the siren song of the speculators."

Straus again will come before the subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative Downs (Democrat), of Connecticut, when it reconvenes at 10 a. m. today.

Wide Program

Group Maps Plan to Ease D. C. Traffic

An elaborate, 21-point program to correct Washington's traffic evils—combining long-range highway improvement plan with suggested enforcement changes to meet immediate problems — was announced yesterday by the national defense committee of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

Contending the city's traffic worries are closely related to the national defense program, the group envisioned a future system of express highways, tunnels and underpasses similar to the 44-million-dollar Whitehurst plan.

Additional parking restrictions downtown, an improved traffic light system and elimination of left turns were offered as solutions to the immediate problem.

Copies of the proposed plan were sent to members of Congress, the Commissioners, Park and Planning Commission, Budget Bureau and Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the District Defense Council.

to share voluntarily in order to help our neighbors in distress."

Campaign leaders will hold their first report luncheon at the Willard at noon today, when the Advance Gifts Unit, headed by Richard H. Wilmer, will sum up four weeks' precampaign soliciting among the Capital's wealthier residents.

Dozens of rallies, pep talks and planning meetings were held last night by collecting units, and dozens of others were scheduled for today.

"We are within striking distance, but it is the last mile that counts," John Clifford Folger, general campaign chairman, warned the Advance Gifts Unit at the special meeting when it was indicated that four-fifths of the unit's quota had been filled.

At a breakfast rally 140 leaders of the Group Solicitation Unit were urged to obtain a generous response from every one of the 1100 business concerns in its quota. Employes of Woodward & Lothrop and S. Kann's Sons also held early morning Chest meetings.

Chest keymen at the Capital Transit Co. drew up their plans at a luncheon meeting and a pep rally was held at the National Savings & Trust Co.

Among the Federal bureaus meetings were held at Farm Credit Administration, three Department of Commerce divisions, four Coast Guard units, Maritime Commission, State Department, Railroad Retirement Board, Veterans Administration, Employment Compensation Commission, Office of Production Management and Census Bureau.

Langer Presents Picture of Self As Maligned Public Benefactor

"I don't care what the appraisal shows (by committee-hired experts)," he asserted. "The time will come when one crop off that land is going to pay for the land. I don't care whether Mr. Brunk holds it or not."

Langer was charged with obtaining an agreement for delivery of $25,000 from Thomas Sullivan, Chicago attorney, who allegedly obtained for the Great Northern Railway Co. a $150,000 reduction in State taxes, this also while the Senator was Governor.

Refers to Official Reports

Simply by referring to the official reports of the State tax commissioner, Langer was able to show that in the year referred to taxes against the railroad were raised rather than lowered. By the same method he was able to prove that in the following year the road's taxes were reduced, but by $57,947, not $150,000.

The committee's report charged Langer with taking the money from Sullivan in exchange for now worthless stock in the Land Finance Co., holder of nearly 600,000 acres of Mexican land.

In refutation of this allegation, Langer substituted an affidavit made by the man who said the stock was worthless, former Representative Lemke, of North Dakota. It was a document Lemke filed with the Agrarian Claims Commission, an agency for settlement of disputes precipitated by Mexican land expropriations.

Claim for $932,787

The affidavit made claim for $932,787.81 for a relatively small portion of the company's holdings. Langer told the committee the company was capitalized at $332,000. Then he asserted:

"There is no expectation that the claim will be allowed in full. But if one-third of it is allowed, he (Sullivan) will get his money back and half interest in 500,000 acres of land besides."

Langer was accused of passing out a generous number of $100 bills to the political creditor of the Federal judge before whom he was ultimately cleared of criminal charges. It was charged that his interests were further advanced before the judge by paying $525 to Gale B. Wyman, of Deadwood, S. Dak., the judge's son.

The Senator counterattacked with the assertion that he was convicted at his first trial partially because the jury was influenced through activities of the United States marshal's office. For that reason, he said, it was imperative that he engage someone qualified to watch jury and deputy marshals at subsequent trials, and for this purpose he hired Chet Leedom, late marshal in both North and South Dakota, and well versed in practices of the office.

Langer denied flatly that he agreed with James Mulloy, his erstwhile political lieutenant, to engage the judge's son. He said he never saw the son until he showed up one day during one of the trials and that all he wanted to do then was "to get him out of town as fast as I possibly could."

Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee, asked why money was paid Wyman, and Langer gave his reply:

"I couldn't afford to antagonize the judge's son. I'd have paid him $1000 if he had asked for it. Here I was on trial and he was asking me for money."

In support of his contention that Judge Andrew Miller, before whom he was at first convicted, was prejudiced, he declared that in his charge to the jury the judge used this phrase:

"These men are either innocent or they are cheap chiselers."

The Senator also was charged with accepting, while Governor, $4000 from a mother on the promise of obtaining a pardon for her son, sentenced to life for murder. This he denied. Four years before he ran for Governor, he declared, he agreed to accept a $2000 retainer from the mother and $2000 later if he, as attorney, should succeed in having the sentence reduced so that, ultimately, the son could go free.

The mother sued for recapture of $2000 just a few days before the gubernatorial election. Langer charged the Bismarck (N. Dak.) Tribune with engaging the attorney that filed the suit.

Langer Describes His Work

Langer told the committee how he got medical care for sick and crippled children, of his successful fight for a $12,000 estate due an Indian, how he talked a railroad vice president into giving the State a $700,000 toll bridge and how he caused the price of rust-damaged wheat to rise 50 cents a bushel overnight.

Langer, after three days of direct examination, today faces cross-examination by counsel for North Dakota citizens petitioning the Senate to unseat him.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, last night said he hope to close the hearing this week, but other committee members said they did not believe that would be possible in view of the fact that other Langer witnesses have yet to testify and counsel for the petitioners are considering calling rebuttal witnesses.

Bioff Jailed for Ten Years, Browne Eight

Judge Says Sentence Is a Challenge To Labor to Finish House Cleaning

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 12.—A Federal judge denounced labor leaders George E. Browne and William Bioff today, declared they must pay "the price of their sins," and forthwith sentenced them to prison terms of eight and ten years, respectively, and fined them $20,000 each.

They were convicted a week ago of extorting $550,000 from four motion picture companies as the price of labor peace in the film industry.

Judge John C. Knox told Browne, who until his conviction was president of the A. F. of L. International Alliance of Theatrical Employes, and Bioff, his Hollywood representative, that "right between the eyes, and upon the face of union labor" they had "dealt a blow that will leave its scar for years to come."

Green Hails Sentence

In Washington, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, commented in a statement that the conviction today "ought to serve as a warning to those who seek to use the labor movement for exploitation purposes."

Green added that the best interests of the workers were served when men "who deceived them and betray them are removed from official positions and adequately punished. . . ." Browne was a vice president of the A. F. of L. until its recent convention.

Judge Knox denied the defendants bail pending appeal. Browne was sentenced to eight years on each of two counts charging violation of the Federal antiracketeering law, the terms to run concurrently, and placed on parole for eight years on a third count charging conspiracy.

Bioff received ten years on each of the first two counts, the terms to run concurrently, and was placed on parole for ten years on the third count. Payment of the fines, the court said, was "the condition of probation."

Steeper Penalties Asked

United States Attorney Mathias Correa, asking that Bioff be sentenced to 15 years and Browne to 10, called Bioff "a labor racketeer of the typical gangster type, whose chances for rehabilitation are practically nil." Browne, he said, was the weaker character, "whose betrayal of his trust was in a sense the betrayal of the entire cause of labor."

Judge Knox termed "the wrong of these defendants heinous," and added:

"Not only have they violated the laws of the United States but they have signally betrayed the trusts that were committed to their care. Their concern, instead of being that of the members of their union, was their personal gain and advantage. Through their acts, they disregarded the welfare of the union and brought their organization into disrepute before the public.

"The soundness and righteousness of the theory of union labor has not entirely been lost, and by the sentence I am about to impose, I am hopeful that the cause of union labor may, in part, be redeemed. If this redemption should not now be brought about, not only in the defendants' union but in many others, then heaven help the cause of union labor."

Vice President of Murder, Inc., Killed 'in Attempt to Escape'

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 12.—Gangdom's "singing master," Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, known as the executive vice president of Murder, Inc., will squeal no more. Death stilled his chattering tongue early today.

Official records say he fell while attempting escape from a sixth-floor window of the Half Moon Hotel at Coney Island, where, with other material witnesses, he was being held incommunicado by police.

Reles was to have appeared as a prosecution witness against Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, president of Murder, Inc., and two others who are being tried for murder in Brooklyn County Court.

District Attorney William O'Dwyer of Brooklyn theorized that Reles had become increasingly afraid of appearing against his feared former henchman and had attempted to escaped by tying wire to a radiator, wrapping it with bed sheets, and lowering himself to the street. But the wire broke and Reles fell to the sundeck of the hotel. He was dead when police found him at 7:45 a. m.

Attempt Is Surprising

Police expressed surprise that Reles should try to escape—for his life was forfeit once he was away from his protectors. Many of his former pals would have liked the chance to meet him alone.

Murder, Inc., product of Brooklyn mobsters, was broken by O'Dwyer. It worked on a small cash-for-killing basis. More than 80 murders, not alone in Brooklyn but in various parts of the country, were traced to the Reles-Lepke combine.

Reles, self-confessed killer of at least 11 persons for trivial pay, only 35 years old, had a record of arrests for nearly everything on the crime calendar.

Testimony by Reles, once a swaggering braggart of gangdom, sent two of his former buddies to the electric chair—Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Straus, 31, and Martin (Bugsy) Goldstein, 36. Each went to his death cursing Reles.

Detectives "Looked In"

He was instrumental also in the death sentences of five other members of the mob for killing four persons. Their execution has been stayed pending appeal.

Detectives guarding Reles in the hotel said they looked in on him every 15 minutes.

Reles was visited by his wife last night. She remained with him until shortly after 10 p. m. When she identified his body she cried, "Who did it? Who did it?"

Once described by Kings County Judge George Martin as "more vicious than Dillinger," Reles thus met his death with his wife his only mourner.

Union Paid Trotzky Guard, Witness Says

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Nov. 12.—A witness testified today in the trial of 28 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy that the salary of Emil Hansen, defendant, was paid by Minneapolis General Drivers Union 544 (A. F. L.) even while he served as a bodyguard for Leon Trotzky in Mexico in 1928.

Mrs. Violet Williams, wife of Tommy Williams, organizer of the committee of 100, unit within 544 ranks, testified the money was paid to Mrs. Hansen regularly. The committee of 100 sought ouster of radical leaders in the union. The union has since been reorganized.

Mrs. Williams also testified that her husband served as a bodyguard for Farrell Dobbs, early organizer in old 544, and a defendant. The Government contends the 28 persons being tried all were members of the Socialist Workers Party and planned overthrow of the Government.

It was brought out that Williams acted as a bodyguard for Dobbs for three months beginning in November, 1937, after Pat Corcoran, secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters Joint Council, with which old 544 was affiliated, was slain.

Dobbs at that time was setting up 544's over-the-road organization in 11 States. Later he became labor secretary for the Socialist Workers Party.

The Government alleges the S. W. P. in Minneapolis maintained close contact with Trotzky in Mexico and that Trotzky was the head and front of a revolutionary movement in the United States represented by the S. W. P.

Forced Savings Sought as Curb On Inflation

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

A formula for applying the brakes to inflation and prices through a forced stamp plan system of savings was reported under consideration in Administration circles yesterday.

The plan, said to have originated with Vice President Wallace, was being studied by some Congressional leaders with the thought that it might provide not only a curb on threatened inflationary price increases but also might open a relatively untapped field for Treasury borrowing.

As reportedly outlined by Wallace and others, the scheme would require the retail purchasers of designated commodities to pay for a fixed quantity of defense savings stamps in order to obtain possession of the article they were buying.

Thus a man who desired to get a small $10 radio might be forced to buy $1 worth of defense savings stamps in order to complete his purchase. When a consumer had accumulated sufficient stamps, he could turn these in on a Government bond which would be cashable after the emergency ended.

Higher Cash Outlay

Wallace was described as contending that such a program would serve to check inflationary buying primarily by making the actual cash outlay for purchases higher. At the same time, the purchaser would be laying aside a portion of his income for expenditures after the emergency ended, thus reducing his current buying power.

While there would be no control of prices as such, advocates were represented as believing that the resulting decline in the demand for commodities on which stamps would have to be purchased would level off prices and prevent the inflationary increases that accompany spirited bidding for articles that are growing scarcer because of the defense program's demands.

Sponsors of the stamp plan argued their scheme was the most equitable yet advanced since it could be made to cover purchases of so-called "luxury" items and need not be applied to such necessities as food, clothing and shelter.

Fertile Source of Funds

In addition, they said, the stamp purchases required on certain manufactured products which compete with national defense articles for strategic and critical materials could be boosted to a point where their purchase would be made relatively unattractive.

The Treasury would benefit from the program, it was pointed out, in finding a fertile source of borrowed funds that has only been scratched by the various drives to date for the sale of defense savings stamps and bonds.

Whether the so-called Wallace plan would actually be submitted to Congress in the form of proposal legislation was said to depend largely on the reaction of legislators now studying it. Administration leaders have made it clear they are not pleased with price control legislation now on the House calendar and are seeking more satisfactory methods of curbing the growing threat of inflation.

Those Without 'Excess' Cash Protest Taxing

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

John Taxpayer and hundreds of his brothers who haven't had a pay raise in a long time poured protests into the Treasury today against tax proposals designed to "mop up" excess purchasing power.

The Treasury admitted getting a "large number" of letters from citizens who generally said "What's this excess purchasing power? I haven't got any of it?

Answers are going out that the Treasury is "aware" of the problem of the many people who haven't shared directly in the defense boom, and is trying to work out some tax system that will be easier on them than on the other workers who are making more money. But one official commented, "We can't make promises. It's a difficult nut to crack."

The thing that started the indignant flood of mail was a statistical survey by Dr. Carl Shoup, of Columbia University, a part-time Treasury adviser, which predicted that the people would have between five billion dollars and eight billion dollars of extra spending money next year, at a time when priorities and other factors would reduce sharply the supply of merchandise the people could buy. Shoup concluded that unless the Treasury soaked up some of this spare change through heavy new taxes, the people would try to outbid each other for the available consumer merchandise and cause inflationary price rises.

The Treasury subsequently came along with proposals for new "withholding" taxes running up to 15 per cent, to be deducted from pay checks, and also increases in social security taxes, likewise to be deducted from payrolls at the source. The House Ways and Means Committee has deferred consideration of this program temporarily, although President Roosevelt urged the group to take immediate action on tax legislation to combat inflation.

Today Treasury experts explained that the "excess purchasing power" which worries them exists only in the aggregate, and may not be true of any particular citizen.

One method of tapping extra earnings from the persons who actually have them is an "excess earnings tax on individuals."

FBI Combs Powder Plant Blast Ruins

By International News Service

Edwards, Ill., Nov. 12.—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents tonight combed the ruins of two buildings of the Western Powder Co. seeking the cause of two terrific explosions in which four workmen were believed to have been blown to bits this morning.

Officials said a preliminary investigation had disclosed no evidence of sabotage.

Plant Superintendent George Devault said he believed Arthur Kendall, Lloyd Dalton, Harold Honts and Harold Windish were killed in the two blasts. They had not been accounted for and authorities said that bits of clothing and human flesh had been found scattered about the site.

The two buildings were demolished. The force of the explosions was so terrific that trees within a 100-yard radius were stripped of their foliage. A truck driver who passed the plant at the time of the explosions said the buildings were hurled 400 feet into the air.

The blast was felt as far as 50 miles distant. In Peoria, 15 miles to the southeast, windows were broken and residents thought they had experienced an earthquake.

75,000 Attend Hecht's 'Open House' As New Store Building Is Dedicated

The Hecht Co. dedicated its new seven-story department store building at Seventh and E Streets Northwest last night by entertaining a large portion of the city's population with dance music, educational displays, and the "latest" in department store interiors.

According to C. B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, 75,000 persons visited the store in the course of the evening. Among the crowd which thronged in every entrance and recalled the busiest days before last Christmas were members of Congress, heads of Government bureaus, and many society figures.

Highlight of the evening was the purchase of a $10,000 series G Defense Bond by Alexander Hecht, one of the store's founders, from Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the vice president. Defense savings bonds and stamps were sold at special booths.

Twelve months of planning, building, and modernization involving an estimated expenditure of about two million dollars were culminated with the "open house" ceremonies last night, company officials said.

As a result of the expansion, the "new and greater" Hecht store has a floor area of 350,000 square feet, an increase of 100,000 square feet. Both the new and old sections of the store become one integrated unit under the expansion plans.

Purpose of the expansion was not to add new lines, company officials said, but to relieve congestion in departments which have outgrown their space. Among these departments are the men's and young men's clothing, men's hats, furnishings, and shoes, women's better grade outer apparel, millinery and shoes, luggage, radios and sports apparel.

The expanded store will be able to handle capacity holiday crowds with a minimum of discomfort, Duncan commented.

Full displays of merchandise were on view on all floors, but the only things for sale were the defense bonds.

When Alexander Hecht accepted the defense bond from Mrs. Wallace with motion picture cameras grinding, he said:

"This bond represents a personal share in the defense and security of our country, a cherished possession not only because of its value, but because of its significance to the furtherance of the democratic way of life."

In reply, Mrs. Wallace thanked him for his "token of faith" in American democracy.

During the day, a total of $6400 worth of defense bonds and stamps were purchased. The civilian defense theme was further carried out in two displays, one showing the various types of uniforms worn by women volunteers, and the other showing helmets, shells, and pictures of civilian defense volunteers at work.

Russian crown jewels, valued at $500,000 also were displayed. The gold snuff box of Alexander II, the pendant brooch of Empress Catherine, and the bridal fan of the Grand Duchess Olga were shown.

Other displays included an Egyptian manicure set believed to be over 5000 years old, a replica of the time capsule buried at the New York World's Fair, a $1000 diamond encrusted pen and pencil set, Ravca's collection of dolls in costumes of all nationalities, and a rare $200 lace scarf worn at the court of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria.

Music was provided by two orchestras under the direction of Abe Leyman and Phil Lampkin. Swing music was broadcast throughout the store, and in many corners, youths could be seen "swinging it" in time.

In planning the new building, an effort was made to handle traffic with a minimum of confusion and congestion, officials said. Wide aisles were designed to lead traffic from department to department with ease.

Maximum visibility of merchandise was emphasized in the arrangement of the showcases and displays, with modern indirect lighting used.

The Hecht Co. was founded on March 20, 1896, by four brothers, Emanuel, Albert, Alexander, and Moses Hecht. Alexander and Moses Hecht are alive and still active in the affairs of the corporation which has stores in Baltimore and New York as well as Washington.

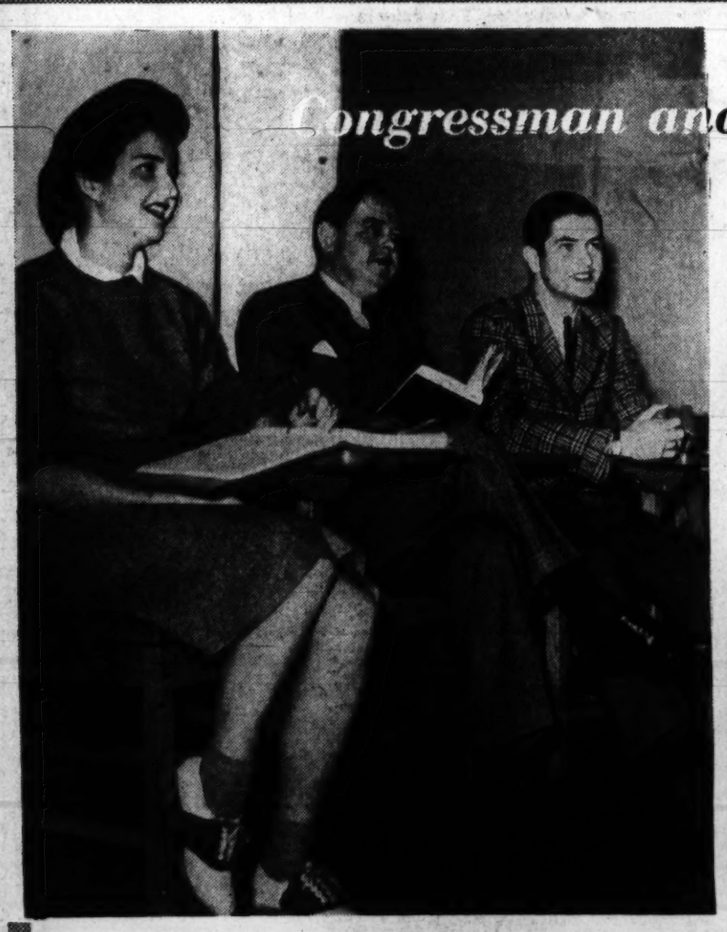
Congressman and 'Little Black Box' Enliven G.W.U. Speech Class



CONGRESSMAN IN THE CLASSROOM—Representative Chiperfield (center), of Illinois, and Warner Schreiner and Caroline George, two of his classmates in public speaking at George Washington University, listen to a classroom speech

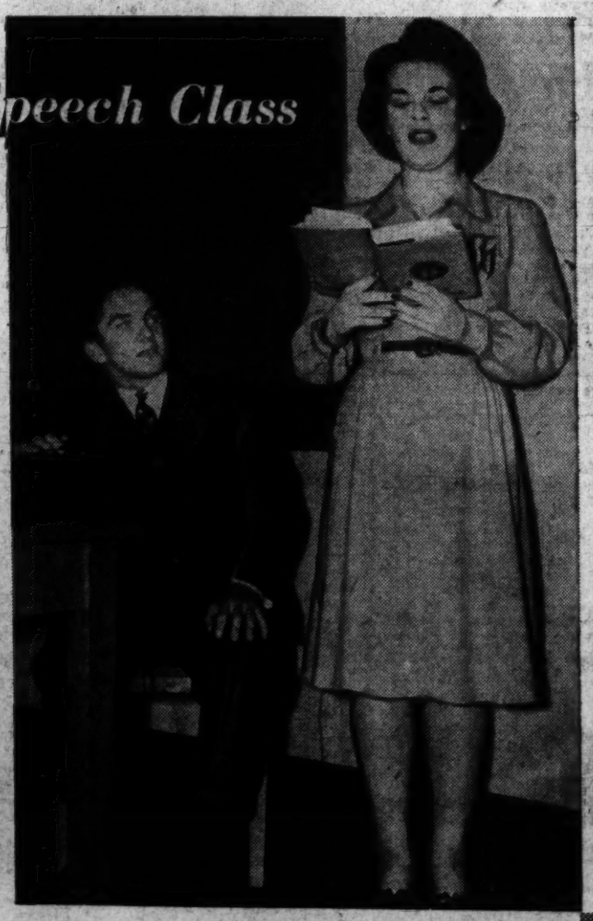
STUDENTS RECORD THEIR VOICES—Dave Mitchell operates a recording machine under the watchful eye of Dr. W. Hayes Yeager, professor in public speaking at G. W. U. Students Dan Rosa, Doris Little and John Pollock take turns reading script. The playback of the recordings is often more of a "shock" to students than the "little black box"



THE "LITTLE BLACK BOX" is a gadget, operated here by Ward Dworshak, which sends a mild current of electricity through a speech-student who hesitates. Wire from box is attached to Jackie May's wrist

By Earl J. Wilson
Post Staff Writer

Because most persons find it difficult to talk fluently before an audience, George Washington University has instituted over the years an extensive series of public speaking courses.

Even Congressmen, it seems, occasionally find the course useful. Representative Robert B. Chiperfield (Republican), of Illinois, who has yet to make his maiden speech on the floor of the House, is currently one of more than 300 students.

One of the more effective means of correcting speech faults in the elementary course, "Principles of Effective Speaking," is the "little black box," a device invented by Dr. W. Hayes Yeager, who heads the department.

This innocent-appearing gadget, in its physical makeup, consists only of a black container about the size of a shoe box, a dry-cell batttry, a switch, a long piece of wire and a metal band. The band, which is somewhat akin to a slave bracelet, is attached to the student's wrists. Dr. Yeager calls it "a conditioner" and says "it has been very effective," which none of the students will deny.

Seated in the rear of the classroom the professor critically watches and listens to the student's performance. At the first sound of an "ah," an "eh" or a grunt the button on the box is pushed and the student gets a mild shock. This method is also used to keep the orator's eyes from wandering to the floor, ceiling or walls. He gets "the works" if this happens.

Early in the course the students record their voices and listen to the playback, which is often more of a "shock" than the one given by the "black box," according to Dr. Yeager. For this particular speech students are assigned last lines from Aesop's Fables, such as, "Wicked deeds will not stay hid," and must bring out the fable's moral by citing from their own experiences.

"The purpose," Dr. Yeager says, "is to overcome any reluctance students may have to talk about themselves and to get them over their inhibitions about incidents for which they may be censured." In earlier speeches students explain advertisements to their classmates, pointing out such things as the advertiser's use of "impelling motives" in influencing buyers. Another is the "speech defining" type in which the student seeks to define such words as "democracy, propaganda."

After running the gamut of various kinds of talks, the student, during the middle of the course, is brought back to "delivery practice." That is, they are called upon to make impromptu talks on a suddenly given subject. The final speech may be any type used during the course and counts one-half of the final examination mark.

Dr. Yeager is co-author of the text used at G. W. U. in the public speaking class, as well as of a number of other books on the same subject. He is president of the National Association of Speech and has completed two years as president of the Eastern Public Speaking Conference.

After the preliminary course the student may take more specialized courses in public speaking. These cover Persuasive and Entertaining Speaking; Oral Reading; Speeches for Special Occasions; Legal Argument: the history of the Theory of Public Speaking and, finally, Congressional Debate.

Representative Chiperfield has not said whether he will take this latter subject at some future time.

Newcomers Urged to Join D. C. Defense

On this, the third day of Civilian Defense Week, you can make many national and District leaders happy by signing yourself up as a volunteer defense worker.

Especially would they like to see newcomers volunteer—if they expect to stay here until the emergency is over.

Enrollment booths will operate all day at Woodrow Wilson High School and Dunbar High School. The central volunteer bureau at 501 Pennsylvania Avenue will have some extra workers on hand to receive you, if you prefer to register downtown.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Assistant Director of the Office of Civilian Defense, will visit both schools this morning, going to Dunbar at 11 o'clock and to Woodrow Wilson a half hour later.

Also at the schools will be exhibits and demonstrations, scheduled to last from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m.

And what does the District particularly need in the way of civilian volunteers? Well, there are many vacancies yet in the ranks of air-raid wardens, the fire auxiliary, rescue squads, the motor corps, prospective first-aid courses and the like.

People with "warm hearts" for soldiers can sign up for Sunday dinners, lifts to Fort Belvoir or Camp Meade, a few weekend parties for selectees and friends.

"In fact, there are a hundred ways people can show their friendliness to soldiers, if they really feel friendly toward them," Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of defense in the District, said. "There is no reason in the world, for instance, why motorists with extra seats in their cars should hesitate to give the boys a lift—but some of them do."

Not all 20,000 persons who registered for defense in the District on R Day have been put to work—because there is so much paper work and interviewing involved. But not all who are called can be accepted, or show up. For instance, about 300 women said they would like to assist with work such as that handled by the Women's Bureau of the Police Department. Miss Rhoda Milliken, director of the bureau, interviewed about 100 of them. Most of the others withdrew their application when they learned the "emergency for them was not immediate."

Miss Milliken is arranging for physical examinations and classes for the hundred.

At the Central Volunteer Bureau yesterday it was emphasized that volunteers will in no instance be permitted to replace paid workers on the job. In some cases volunteers have been assigned to work formerly done by WPA workers. This was after the WPA work had been discontinued for lack of funds.

Also, the bureau stressed—to clear up another question—no workers have been cleared for the District school lunch program, which is a parent-teacher project and not handled through defense offices.

'Sign Up for Defense Day' Emphasizes Need

Today is "Sign Up for Defense Day" in Civilian Defense Week. It emphasizes the fact that there is a job for everyone in the civilian defense program.

Everyone is urged to find out today just what his community is doing in organizing for civilian defense and to determine what he can do to help. There may be jobs available right now in a civilian protection unit, in meeting local emergencies caused by the defense program or in helping build a strong, healthy community.

PUC Holds Routine Session; Taxi Rate Hearing Set Today

FIRST MEETING—Confronted with many problems, the long-defunct Public Utilities Commission met in its first business session yesterday. Left to right—Brig. Gen. C. W. Kutz, Elmo J. Milligan, secretary; and Gregory Hankin, newly appointed chairman

The long dormant Public Utilities Commission met yesterday and reaffirmed an earlier announcement of public hearings on taxi rates set for 10 a. m. today at the District Building.

There was no decision on the Capital Transit Co.'s application for conversion of 161 two-man street cars to one-man operation. Gregory Hankin, newly named P. U. C. chairman, preferring to withhold action until he has had further opportunity to study the record of testimony taken several weeks ago.

Today's hearing was called upon application of the Taxi Cab Owners Association for a 10-cent fare increase for a trip confined to one zone and a 20-cent charge for each zone entered on a point-to-point trip.

This would eliminate the so-called "free zone" which exists under the present 20-40-60-80-cent rate. A taxi passenger entering a cab in one zone and going to a point in the same zone, but crossing a higher-fee area, now pays only the one-zone charge.

Executive Secretary Elmo Milligan said today's P. U. C. hearing would be held either in the commission's offices or in the Commissioner's board room, depending on the number of witnesses.

Hankin also announced that presidents of the various citizen and civic associations and their public utilities committee chairman will be invited to a District Building meeting with the P. U. C. at 8 p. m., December 3.

The conference, he said, will be in the nature of a "get acquainted" affair.

Formal notice of an investigation of the Washington Gas Light Co.'s request for a stock issuance to finance capital improvements will be drafted today, Milligan reported. One minority stock holder, he added, has objected to the proposal and public hearing may be necessary later.

Authorization was granted yesterday for the Capital Transit Co. to continue for another six months the operation of its New Hampshire Avenue suburban line servicing residents in the Takoma (Md.) section. The line is known as the T-3 line. It was established as an experiment in November, 1940.

Sunday School Group Supper Set Tomorrow

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, will be special guests at a supper meeting of the D. C. Sunday School Association's executive committee, tomorrow at 6 p. m. at the E Street branch, Y. W. C. A.

Closer cooperation between the federation and the association will highlight the meeting, first of the new association year. Dr. Charles R. Resser, association president and Smithsonian paleontologist, will preside.

Yale Men Invited To Cocktail Party

Yale men in Washington, numbering around 1200, are invited to attend a cocktail party and reception today at the Mayflower Hotel from 5 to 7 p. m.

Plans for the social round-up were made by directors and committee members at a luncheon. Figures prominent in defense circles are expected to attend.

Class Opens Tonight for Raid Deputies

Instruction for deputy air raid wardens who will serve as volunteers in Washington's 60 precincts will begin tonight at 635 North Carolina Avenue Southeast with Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy in the chair of professor."

The class will be continued Friday night, and on Tuesday the general training program for air raid volunteers will open.

"Methods of Combating Incendiary Bombs" will be the subject taken up first. This is listed second in the manual prepared by the Office of Civilian Defense, but is preceding the first-aid course in the District because the Red Cross classes have not yet been organized.

If first-aid instructors are not available when the "B" course is finished, the wardens will take up the "C" section—which instructs in "Protection Against Gas."

Otto Lund, manager of the District of Columbia chapter of the American Red Cross, said the agency is planning to have the first aid classes in operation early in December. Two instructor courses are now under way, to provide teachers. Robert Duncan, first-aid director, is enlisting District doctors to staff the big program.

It is planned now to have the first-aid classes for wardens, with possibly 7000 enrolled, held in the air-raid districts at night twice weekly.

The District Red Cross has about 75 first-aid courses under way now and has been averaging about 800 graduates a month this year. This will be the first time during the emergency it has been asked to undertake so many courses for volunteers for a specific job and on an area basis. Since first aid is considered basic training for nearly all the protective defense duties, the demand for instructors is a huge one.

There is no doubt, however, that it can be met, officials say. In other cities where air raid and auxiliary forces have been organized the Red Cross has "stayed way ahead of the hounds" and no real shortage is anticipated here, it was said.

When Chief Murphy's pupils have completed all their courses they will be entitled to wear an attractive red, white and blue insignia with several stripes to signify "many duties."

Boston-New York Steamers Dropped

Boston, Nov. 12 (U.P.).—The Eastern Steamship Lines announced tonight that they would discontinue temporarily their Boston to New York sailings and the action left Boston virtually without steamship passenger service for the first time in history.

President Alton B. Sharp said the suspension of sailings was necessary because so many of the line's vessels were engaged in national defense work.

The withdrawal of the service will throw about 500 persons out of work in Boston and about 200 in New York.

D. C. and Virginia May Adjust Airport Issue

A compromise agreement between the District and Virginia over jurisdiction at the Washington National Airport may be reached this week, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee said last night.

Representative Randolph and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, the Old Dominion's champion in its efforts to retain control at the airport, will meet later this week with Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, sponsor of a bill to place the port entirely within the District.

The District Committee chairman said the decision to confer with the bill's sponsor was reached at a conference between himself and Representative Smith. Representative Nichols is expected to return to the city today.

The Nichols bill would draw the District's boundary line completely around the airport. Consensus of several surveys now places the line about midfield, leaving hangars and administration buildings in Virgina.

In a letter to Representatve Randolph earlier this month, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones approved the Nichols bill, stating it was the Federal Government's intent to keep it entirely under control and make it a model airfield for the Nation.

Representative Nichols advocates a bill which fixes the District-Virginia line at hgh tdewater mark on the Virginia shore of the Potomac.

The once idle minute now does its job, too

Time rules the present as never before. Nations strain forward in productive effort in a new tempo of must. From this urge to more work, better work and quicker work, no one of us is free. Men and machines are called to the colors of production. This busy world we live in needs its occasional pauses so it can go on being busy. Luckily, people have found how ice-cold Coca-Cola can make even an idle minute do a refreshing job of its own.

People long ago discovered that ice-cold Coca-Cola made any pause the pause that refreshes. It does something needed . . . something pleasant . . . for every walk of life. It's a little minute long enough for a big rest . . . a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things. So, you find "delicious and refreshing" Coca-Cola doing a necessary job for workers—putting its shoulder to the wheel in factory, farm, workshop, office and at home—bringing welcome refreshment to the doers of things.

Of course, Coca-Cola is only a soft drink. And its price is only five cents. But surely it is significant when enjoying a five cent soft drink becomes an everyday custom. It must have something very exceptional in the way of "delicious and refreshing" when such phrases as "Give me a 'Coca-Cola'" and "Make mine a 'Coke', too" have become familiar expressions commonly heard and used by so many people, practically everywhere.

Another Camalier

Probably the most notable improvement in the relationship between the District of Columbia and Congress since the present local government was established in 1878 has come about within recent months. For the Senate District Committee now has a municipal attorney giving his full time to legislative problems of the Capital. That official, R. F. Camalier, has amply proved the wisdom of his appointment, and a remarkable improvement in the precedure of handling District legislation is already evident.

District legislation has often been bungled in the past because busy Senators have little time to devote to it. In consequence, the contacts between District officials and our mammoth city council on Capitol Hill have been haphazard and often unsatisfactory. Now all legislative matters affecting the District are coordinated in the hands of Mr. Camalier. He attends all hearings of the Senate District Committee and holds informal discussions with District officials and civic leaders. He investigates the conditions of local institutions and in other ways makes himself an encyclopedia of information on the District. It is his task to work out all legislative problems with local officials and put District bills in proper shape before they are taken up by the committee. Senators are thus relieved of much detailed work, and the quality of legislation finally turned out is being substantially improved.

Mr. Camalier, for instance, was chiefly responsible for stopping enactment of the habitual-criminal bill recently after it had been botched by both houses. The "bugs" are now being eliminated from that measure so that it may be passed without inviting a veto on the one hand or disastrous consequences on the other. For the first time the Senate has an experienced man familiar with Washington's municipal problems devoting his full time to local legislation. That is a gain of real significance.

This arrangement is working so well on the Senate side, indeed, that it ought to be tried in the House. Chairman Randolph has an able staff of clerks in the House District Committee, and this staff should not be disturbed. But the addition of a legislative counsel would be of great assistance to the committee in handling District bills. Ideally, of course, the District ought to have representatives of its own in the House. At the very least Congress should grant the voteless Capital the privilege of electing a delegate to keep the House informed on local issues. Until that step is taken, however, a legislative council would prove no less valuable in the House Committee than in the Senate. Chairman Randolph might well request such an addition to his staff in the next budget.

Grievance In Gothic

On Monday there was a strike of some 400 janitors, porters, chambermaids and so on at Yale University. There was disorder of a sort, but no violence. The mostly middle-aged maids paraded near the campus with discreetly worded placards tied round them, which seemed to call for a union shop. Then on Monday evening the strike ended as abruptly as it had begun. So that the question of whether such a strike is to be construed as a strike against the national defense becomes mainly an—er—academic question. It occurs to us that it could be argued either way. For example, the strike afforded the students practical experience in the art of making their own beds and policing their own dormitories. Such experience, doubtless, will be highly useful when and if they are drafted into the armed forces of the United States. In this respect the strike seems to have been more helpful to defense than otherwise. However, classes in taxation had to be suspended because Prof. Rodell of the law school faculty had scruples about crossing a picket line. Taxation is certainly a vital element in defense. If you don't believe this, ask Mr. Morgenthau or just wait till 1942.

But, all that aside, there is something rather sad and incongruous about the notion of labor picketing in the Gothic shadows. John J. Clark, organizer of the C. I. O. Yale Employes Union, after agreeing to call off the strike, observed, "It's an unusual situation here." That came under the head of a conservative statement, because this was, in fact, the first strike since the foundation of Yale University nearly 250 years ago. It was the first laboratory demonstration of the struggle of labor against capital to occur anywhere on the Ivy League circuit. A few years ago a strike of charwomen at Harvard was happily averted, and as far as we know there have been no serious labor difficulties at Princeton. But it begins to look as though, Gothic or no Gothic, the day of academic sequestration from ills and cleavages of our industrial society has ended..

Unified Air Force

Proponents of a unified air force—among whom this newspaper has never been numbered—will be hard put to it to answer Admiral Yarnell's rebuttal in Collier's magazine. For the former commander of our Asiatic Fleet, drawing on the hitherto secret reports of our military observers abroad, neatly refutes some commonly accepted generalizations about the advantages of a unified air force. Perhaps the outstanding generalization has been that much of the R. A. F.'s success in the air has been due to its operation as an independent unit. That independence, according to the admiral, has sadly hampered the R. A. F.'s efficiency as an all-round military tool. To support his contention he cites numerous examples of R. A. F. "boners" when operating in conjunction with sea and land forces. Trained for duty over Britain or the Continent (where it has, of course, performed brilliantly) the R. A. F. has apparently been guilty elsewhere of accidentally bombing its own undersea craft and its own land convoys and ground forces. Moreover, because of inexperience in operating at sea, R. A. F. pilots seem to have failed in crucial assignments in or around Norway and Crete. And, it is claimed, ignorance of naval tactics and strategy on the part of the R. A. F. is still cutting down the effectiveness of the British war effort at sea.

Admiral Yarnell's sensible point, of course, is that we cannot afford to ignore the bitter lessons of British experience. Nor can we overlook the fact that the British have already turned two major branches of their air force back to the navy. If we are to profit from their experience, the inadvisability of pressing now for a unified air force ought to be self-evident. Among other things it would create a host of new administrative and material problems. And this at a time when the air services, by dint of perseverance, have built up an enviable efficiency. Worst of all, it would place an added over-all burden on our airmen, obliging them to accept missions over land or sea, for which they have not had sufficient training. At present there are no less than eight bills before Congress which call either for a separate or unified air force. Not one of them, as far as can be seen, takes due account of the fact that airmen, whether trained by the R. A. F., the Luftwaffe, or by our own air force, cannot serve with equal credit on both land and sea.

Small Business

A sample survey undertaken by the Commerce and Industry Association of New York indicates that about one-fifth of the city's half a million wage earners may soon lose their jobs because of shortages of materials to work upon. We have been hearing for a long time that widespread unemployment would result from the defense program. In many cases such unemployment will of course be only temporary. Workers will shift to new jobs or will be reemployed as plants are converted to defense use. But currently anxiety is being felt over the fate of numerous small concerns that cannot be converted to defense uses and that are threatened by severe curtailment or complete stoppage of operations. The cry goes up that small business faces the threat of extinction. Thomas E. Dewey, for instance, sounded the alarm when addressing the New York State Council of Retail Merchants. He warned that the "enterprise concept of our system must be preserved, so that businessmen and workers can have before them the essential incentive without which we would lose our heritage of freedom itself. All these things are integral parts of our defense effort, even as the production of planes and tanks and guns."

The Government's defense agencies are fully aware of the importance of keeping small business functioning amid the pressure of the defense program. Floyd Odlum was made director of the OPM's contract distribution division for the express purpose of aiding distressed small businesses. But it is rumored that Donald M. Nelson does not see eye to eye with Mr. Odlum in regard to salvage methods. Mr. Odlum wishes to assure the allocation of certain critical materials to small concerns; Mr. Nelson fears that definite assurance of access to supplies would reduce the incentive for nondefense businesses to take on defense work. Complaints are also heard concerning the alleged failure of the Government to consult with representatives of industries to determine their needs for critical materials. Now that an all-out allocations program is in the making, it will be necessary to rely heavily upon industry committees to give effect to the program. But while a comprehensive plan for rationing needed materials is being developed, a good many small businesses may go under unless prompt action is taken to save them.

Churchill On Food

In his comments yesterday on Britain's food position Prime Minister Churchill stuck to the middle of the road. He was not jubilant, but neither was he pessimistic. In estimating the chances of more and better food for Britain's workers he naturally had to take into consideration an expected stepping up of U-boat operation along supply routes and the shipment of foodstuffs from this country. At present there is no sure index of Germany's ability to harass the ship lanes in the months ahead. True, sinkings have been cut to an average of 180,000 tons a month in the last four months. And, considering the intensification of British, Canadian, and American patrol efforts, sinkings may well be kept relatively low. But, judging from past experience, there is a periodicity about the rate of sinkings which, coupled with the likely German effort to increase British losses at all cost, may spell a rise in trouble on the high seas.

The problem of food shipments from this country, on the contrary, is fairly well outlined. Britain may not be starving, but she continues to depend heavily on us for beef, pork, vegetables, and dairy products. In September, for the first time, our shipments equaled half of Britain's prewar monthly imports. Quantitively this was an excellent showing, considering that supplies only began to flow across the Atlantic in volume last spring. But Britain is still having to get along on three-quarters of her normal foodstuffs. Lord Woolton, the British food minister, and others have stressed that dietary requirements in general are being met satisfactorily. Yet our own officials returning from Britain have apparently been convinced that while the British don't complain, they actually need a good deal more food. If Secretary Wickard's ambitious plans for revamping our farm economy are even partially realized, they will get it. Until our shipments show an appreciable rise, however, the present proportion amounts roughly to 35 per cent of Britain's requirements—Mr. Churchill and his government can hardly be expected to maintain more than cautious confidence about the food outlook.

Lost Horizons

Rumors are said to be circulating in Stockholm and elsewhere that the famous explorer, Roald Amundsen, or a man very closely resembling him, has been seen alive, and presumably happy, among the Eskimos in a remote part of Greenland. It is just a little over 13 years since Amundsen made his last airplane trip into the Arctic, ostensibly to search for possible survivors of the lost airship Italia. The rumor strikes us as not necessarily implausible. We assume, of course, that it would take an experienced Arctic traveler like Amundsen something less than 13 years to find his way back to what we, from force of habit, call civilization—if he wanted to. But surely it requires no great imaginative ingenuity to think of reasons why he mightn't want to. Greenland's icy mountains are among the places mentioned in the old missionary hymn "where ev'ry prospect pleases and only man is vile." But probably it is just the other way around. Like most persons who have known Eskimos intimately, Amundsen had a high opinion of them, and one doesn't even have to be an explorer to understand why he might prefer them as neighbors to their far less temperate brethren of the Temperate Zone.

The same newspapers that published the new rumor about Amundsen also reported that Prof. Frederick S. Redfern died at Columbia, S. C., firmly convinced that his son was still alive somewhere in the South American jungles. Doubtless you remember how, about a year before Amundsen disappeared, Capt. Paul Redfern took off from Brunswick, Ga., for Rio de Janeiro and was never seen again. Nor was the wreckage of his plane ever found. From time to time travelers returned with stories that Redfern was known to be living with an Indian tribe in some inaccessible part of Dutch Guiana. On the basis of such reports various rescue expeditions were organized. The Redfern mystery has been elaborated again and again by various fiction writers. For only one jump of the imagination is required to take Redfern out of the hands of the primitive tribe and place him in some magnificent survival of the Inca civilization. It seems that the idea of a complete physical and chronological escape from the complexities and terrors of this twentieth century holds a special fascination for the contemporary mind.

THIS IS THE RICHEST FIELD

This is the richest field I know,
Bright with its sorrel and daisies,
Green with timothy, brilliant
With the ripened fruit of the wild strawberry.
These are sweet meadows, and the sun
And the rain have drawn that sweetness
From the hills, sent it through the vines
And the leaves into the strawberry,
Pure as the song of the first robin
In spring, and as red as its breast.

Superman A Seer?

Although I am not a constant follower of the comic pages, my attention is drawn to the series "Superman" of issue, November 9.

The creators, Jerry Siegal and Joe Shuster, have, to my belief, and knowledge, incorporated a principle of occult science which, is now accepted by most physicists and other men of science as being an established universal truth: the clairvoyance of theosophy and all other bodies whose realm of research and teaching is the psychic or spiritual domain.

The cartoon of above date titled "What the man of steel's telescopic vision shows him" is, to the knowledge of the clairvoyant or seer, astoundingly true to actual manifestation of this phenomena (objective clairvoyance). For example, should one possessing the much-disputed and maligned faculty of inner vision wish to view the driver's cab of a truck (as depicted in this cartoon) he would see the dead driver sloped over the wheel in a mind-picture, the form of which is faithfully described in this picture. Even to the "aura" which exudes from this man, although this aura would be greatly diminished in the case of an actual deceased person, as the vital principle of life would have departed, yet a faint aura would be nevertheless observed.

"Superman or the Man of Tomorrow" is no idle fantasy to the trained occultist. The Bible refers to many such miracles and modern science is constantly "discovering" these ancient truths.

In the next picture, Superman is lifting a gigantic motor truck with one arm—"hoisting the truck overhead." This is the levitation of solid bodies and all one need to do to investigate the many similar manifestations of levitation phenomena is to read the procedures of the London and American Psychical Research Societies. These and a vast amount of scientific literature on the subject can be found in most libraries.

Perhaps the collaborating authors of this admirable strip are merely energetic youngsters who give their fertile imaginations full play, or, as it would seem, are students of the mysteries and seers by their own right. ISRAEL SHOTZ.

Peace Terms

Because this is Armistice Day, I would like, with your permission, to outline my idea of what the peace terms of World War II should be.

1. That all peoples shall be free and have equal rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.
2. That the meek as well as the strong shall inherit the earth and the fullness thereof. That this shall be brought about by nationalization of the land and all natural resources.
3. That all production and distribution shall be organized, integrated, and streamlined by scientists entirely free from political and financial control.
4. That there shall be an end to buying and selling and that henceforth production shall be for use and not for profit.
5. That the earth shall not only be enabled but also allowed to yield an abundance for the benefit of one and all.
6. That young people shall spend the first 25 years of their life acquiring all the education for living that their mentality will permit them to absorb.
7. And that mankind in every land on the face of the globe be free to worship God or not to worship Him as his own conscience dictates.

Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin, and President Roosevelt may feel that psychologically the world is not yet ready for these terms, but I predict that wars will never cease until some very similar ones are adopted.

MINNIE FROST RANDS

Declaring War First

The smaller countries of Europe believed Hitler, his smooth promises allayed their sense of fear and the danger of attack gradually diminished. One by one they were conquered. France knew the danger but had no idea that a large country could suffer the fate of a small one. They regarded the war upon them as a natural inevitability. They little knew their enemy. America is making the same mistake in principle. Some say "Hitler says he has no designs upon us" and they lull themselves accordingly. Others say "he can't attack us across 2500 miles of ocean if he can't get to England over the Channel of only 20 miles." It sounds sane and they sleep well.

But that is not the way Hitler fights. Whatever happens has been anticipated. His policy is one at a time. If that were permitted to be carried out literally at this last chapter of his scheme, Russia could be conquered, then England, then—well, which? The answer is self-evident.

America must act quickly. She must take the initiative. She must openly declare war upon Germany before Germany appalls us by a declaration of war first.

America must never take the defensive. The blow of morale must strike Germany first.

If Hitler declares war upon America, we may staunchly rise to the challenge, but it will put us in second place. England challenged Germany and it has put her in first place. She continues to challenge. America and England united, both fixing steady gaze upon Hitler, in his every move, will keep him moving in apparent conquest but really in frantic retreat. Hitler's attack on Russia is retreat. He will be caught in the flames of his own spreading conflagration.

A declaration of war now would suddenly stop the moving picture and, in the momentary still picture, the real scene of events would be seen clearly, sides would be taken, decisions induced and the whole world of nations involved would see themselves in the picture and resolve on final action.

HERBERT YEUELL.

By Wire

Congressman Harold Knutson's attempt to create the impression on Washington that Minnesota voters are against President Roosevelt's policy of defending America by aiding the Allies is positively absurd. Minnesota voters as well as the voters of every other State know that America did not become the most powerful nation on earth through a driveling cowardly foreign policy such as has been advocated by Knutson, Wheeler, Nye, Lindbergh, and their sabotaging Hitler first cohorts. Whether we like it or not we know war has been forced upon this nation and other democracies by Hitler, an unspeakable war-crazed maniac who has already deprived the people of a dozen nations of their freedom. The World Peace Association, now cooperating with more than 300 national and international organizations, respectively, urges every Congressman to give his utmost support to our President in this hour of extreme trial and peril. Lost Animals

I am speaking from the present sad experience of a vain search for a lost dog. At present the conscientious owner has absolutely no way by which to trace a lost animal. The average person meeting one will not take it in for fear of being permanently burdened. Our police force is too small in numbers and too unorganized regarding systematic search to be able to give sufficient time to tracking down straying animals. City traffic and gangs of thieves are well calculated to prevent animals from coming home through their own volition. I therefore submit the following plan to your readers for suggestion and discussion:

First: I propose that since the dog owners will pay Washington this year $62,000 in taxes, as against $12,000 spent on animal welfare through the dog pound, including all salaries there, that the city government devote more money to the care of animals. The salaries at the pound should be raised and its services widened. This is the logical right of the taxpaying owners.

Second: I propose that out of the dog taxes the city pay a police officer in each precinct to act as an animal warden. These official wardens should tabulate all licensed animals in their districts, find the unlicensed ones, investigate outbreaks of disease, and act as clearing houses for lost animals.

Third: I propose that the official animal wardens be supplemented by volunteers in rescue work recruited among the older school children of the city. I am sure all the animal societies and many individuals would give cash prizes at the end of each year to the volunteer wardens who had found and traced the largest number of strayed animals. Children, particularly boys, are "naturals" for this work, for children notice and really "see" animals in cases where an adult is too busy or too indifferent to do so. If the city were divided into districts under official wardens the school wardens soon would be well trained, just as at present they are doing splendid work as traffic policemen. The school wardens would learn quickly which animals belonged in their districts and when strays entered they would be investigated and if wearing tags would be restored to their owners. The untagged dog of course is a more difficult problem. Either he has lost his license or belongs to people too poor to buy one. If however, more people could be taught the road to the District pound, the Animal Rescue Society, the Humane Society, and the Southeast Animal Shelter, and above all if the newspapers would give daily space to listing the strays picked up by these four rescuing agencies, more dogs would be traced by the owners.

It probably is known only to those of us who have investigated that all our city medical schools and hospitals buy for experimental purposes dogs trucked down from Philadelphia and other cities. In other words dogs stolen in Philadelphia are sold in Washington. Dogs picked up by thieves here are trucked to Baltimore and Philadelphia and sold there. This is a vicious system which animal wardens could help to break up. In time even the night bagging of cats which I personally have witnessed might be stopped.

I feel we should have also a law forbidding dogs from running the street without owners. I hestitate to suggest fines, for many owners have a hard time even feeding their animals, much less paying fines. But certainly the streets should be cleared of so many animals on the loose. I know many cat owners would be willing to pay a small tax if it brought protection. But at present the word "protection" is a mockery to the dog owners, who already are taxed.

I offer my plan in the name of Laddie, my lost young police-Scotch shepherd dog.

The Post Impressionist

Are You Listening?

There have always been too many of us in Washington, but of late, as is inevitable in times of crisis, our ranks have been increased to really stupendous proportions. You see us everywhere. We sit behind you on buses; we walk the streets beside you, wait with you at counters in the crowded stores. Usually you are quite unaware of us, would be surprised and probably a little annoyed to know how much we can find out about you as, in twos and threes, you make your busy, cheerful way through the city.

In restaurants, however, our most fruitful field, we have to be a bit careful. Obvious spying would never do, would make most of you self-conscious and silent. So in restaurants we usually hide behind a newspaper or sit with our attention ostensibly upon an open book; we even turn the pages from time to time, just to preserve the illusion that we are reading.

But do not be apprehensive. We are not agents for any foreign government. No Mata Hari glamour embroiders the dullness of our days; we use no secret codes; we get no pay for our information . . . in fact, we make not the slightest use of our findings.

Most of us are employed by the Government of the United States. Each weekday we type or file, take dictation or run machines, according to our talents. We are faithful workers, glad to have a job, but we are strangers in Washington, lone and lonely women away from home.

We are the girls who eat alone.

The majority of us have only recently left normally active small-town lives. We were not friendless waifs at home; we won't be friendless waifs forever here. But in the period of adjustment, until we find new friends of our own, until we make ourselves a place in your city, we eavesdrop on your lives. Often we really don't mean to, but the warmth of your voices or some intriguing scrap of your conversation echoes in the empty spaces of our lives and the first thing we know, there we are, all ears.

And we do hear the funniest things. Only last week I quite forgot the burning ache between my shoulders (that ache you always get at first from long hours of unaccustomed typing) because two women were talking on the homebound bus.

They were a comfortable-looking, middle-aged pair; reminded me of my ample, motherly aunts back home.

"How is Uncle Peter these days?" the one in the blue coat asked her companion.

A shadow crossed the face of the other woman. "Oh, I thought you'd heard. We had to send him away about a month ago."

"No!" Shock and warm sympathy colored her tones. "I knew he was getting on, of course, but the last time I passed your house he was on the porch in the sun. He looked right chipper, too. Mercy, that was a month ago?"

"Yes, we hated to do it, but he just got to be too much for me. He's been quite deaf for years, you know, but lately it got so he couldn't hear a thing. Every time he went out, and he would sneak out alone, we were afraid of cars, afraid he wouldn't hear them. And his rheumatism made it hard for him to get about."

Her friend murmured consolingly.

"We hated to see him go, Barbara most of all. He's been a real companion to her all her life. But kids are funny. You know what she did? She had a belt made out of his collar! When the men came for him, when they had him out in the truck, she ran after them crying and took off his collar and now she's wearing it for a belt."

"Imagine. My niece wears a bracelet made out of a teaspoon, but I never heard of a belt made out of a dog collar."

I was two stops past my destination when the women got off, but Uncle Peter was worth it.

Then there was the woman in the tearoom who monopolized the entire dinner hour of her three companions with a long recitation of her woes as an unwilling hostess. She had a "Surthern" house guest who "didn't ever offer to share expenses. Ruth didn't raise a finger to help the maid and left me all alone any time she had a date."

By dessert I was feeling only the strongest sympathy for the pretty young "Surthern" guest of this red-faced old harridan. The poor girl had evidently been invited to share a sour spinster's living expenses and leisure, but nobody thought to tell her so in advance. I was so wrapped up in her unhappy experience that I consumed a whole dish of brown betty, which I hate.

I suppose if anyone had told me a year ago that this fall would find me a confirmed eavesdropper, I'd have been righteously indignant. I'm not a gossip, really; I never went about at home poking into the private lives of my friends. You loquacious strangers are another matter. I'll never see you again; indeed, some of you I never see at all. But your voices fill my idle hours. Please don't stop talking.

JANE TAYLOR COLBORN.

Freedom Of Action

The foreign policy of the United States followed the last two years by the President with the support of Congress and the majority of the American people is not to get into this war but to keep it a long way from our shores. We must have complete freedom of action to preserve our freedom. All legislation that impedes this freedom of action must be repealed at once. We are not a Nation of cowards, to stay at home when Hitler threatens. We have not surrendered the right to go about our business and sail the high seas. Hitler, the America First Committee and certain isolationist Senators must not be allowed to stand in the way of national freedom of action. Neutrality legislation that ties our hands and helps Hitler must be repealed at once. We have the right to demand national unity in time of national danger.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

At Stake In The House

THE HOUSE will vote today as our relations with Japan and as labor relations at home are coming to their crisis. This does not mean that we are about to have war abroad with Japan or that we are to have an industrial war at home. Let us remember what the word crisis means. It is the name given by doctors to that point in the progress of a disease when a change takes place which is decisive of recovery or death; and in politics when the word crisis is used accurately, it means the turning point in affairs when a decisive change for better or for worse is about to take place.

LIPPMANN

In this exact sense of the word we are certainly at the crisis of Japanese-American relations, and very probably at the crisis of labor relations as they affect the national defense. In the immediate future there will be as respects both a decisive change for the better or for the worse.

AS REGARDS Japan the situation is extremely delicate because the time is at hand when the long unfriendly armed truce must either degenerate into war in the Pacific or be transformed into a settlement which eliminates the threat of war in that half of the world. It would be a grave mistake to assume that war in the Pacific is inevitable. War is possible. But peace, peace with honor, is also possible, and it may actually be within our grasp if by the firmness of Congress and of the people, it is made possible for the Japanese government and the Chinese government and the American Government to do what is wise.

This is plainly no moment for loose talk or for uninformed speculation. Too much is at stake. For Japan there is at stake her very existence; she is confronted in the Pacific today by great forces, now that we have by our naval patrol in the Atlantic released powerful British ships for service in the Far East. No military action that Japan can now take can relieve the economic pressure except at the risk of annihilating battles; as a matter of fact, for Japan to go to war would mean that the economic pressure would be intensified by a blockade that cut her off from all the world and threatened even her communications with occupied China.

ON THE other hand, the United States, Great Britain, and Russia also have a huge stake in the prevention of war and the making of peace in the Pacific. Those who think Mr. Churchill's speech was aimed to provoke war in the Pacific have not read it, or clearly understood it if they have read it. No one can suppose that Russia would like a war in the Pacific. And as for the President, whatever his enemies may say, the fact is that he has scrupulously avoided hostile references to Japan and has in fact been engaged for months in prolonged negotiations.

For while war with Japan would be certain if Japan moved with the Axis, a war in the Pacific, though we should win it, would prolong the European war and greatly complicate the whole problem of dealing with Hitler. That is why the Nazis are moving heaven and earth to provoke war between Japan and the English-speaking nations, and that is why for all to whom the defeat of Hitler is the paramount issue, the avoidance of war in the Pacific is, if it is still possible, of great practical importance.

WAR HAS thus far been avoided but the present stake of armed nonbelligerency puts too great a strain upon Japan, and to a much lesser degree upon the British and ourselves, to be continued much longer. That is why—with Russia apparently holding out during the winter and with great developments in prospect in the Mediterranean and the Middle East—the point of crisis has been reached, the point when Japan must either become the ally of Hitler and our enemy, or end the alliance with Hitler and become once more our friend.

It is easier for Japan to become again the friend of a victorious America and Britain than to remain the friend of a victorious Hitler. All sensible Japanese know this, and in the highest places there are very sensible Japanese. For they realize that in the Nazi ideology there can never be a place of equality for them, and that a Hitler who was master of the British Empire, the Netherlands Empire, and of Russia would be an infinitely more dangerous neighbor than Great Britain or the United States.

Thus it is by no means certain, now that we are strong in the Pacific and therefore able to be wise, that war is inevitable or that we cannot by a great action of constructive diplomacy bring peace to the Far East and the Pacific. But if this is to be done, the American Government must speak for a united people, and any harum-scarum "victory" for irresponsible agitators like Mr. Hamilton Fish would play straight into the hands of the conspirators in Tokyo who are seeking to provoke war.

THE ACTION of the House today is bound also to have a profound effect upon whether we are to have industrial war or industrial peace. A defeat of the Senate bill will mean that a majority of the House of Representatives do not accept the estimate of the external danger upon which our national policy is based. How after such a vote in the House would it then be possible to ask labor unions to forego their normal right to strike, or how would it be possible for Congress, as now seems inevitable, to legislate about industrial relations? If a victory of the isolationists in the House would be, as they profess, a victory for peace and noninvolvement in war, if by defeating these amendments to the Neutrality Act, the House would be guaranteeing peace, then why should Mr. Lewis not call a coal strike, why should Congress presume to pass extraordinary laws? If a vote against this bill is a vote for peace, then if the opposition were successful, we have no right to deny to any man the normal rights of peace.

A substantial vote in support of the Senate bill is, therefore, of deep importance to the future of industrial relations and indeed to all the other measures of taxation and price control and priorities which the national defense requires. There is great truth in the complaints of men like Senators Byrd and Tydings that our internal affairs are by no means well in hand. But the practical conclusion they have drawn is a fallacy. For not until Congress recognizes fully the existence of the emergency will the Administration or Congress or public opinion be in a position to call for the complete dedication of all men and of all their special interests to the national defense.

THE LEAST important aspect of the vote in the House is its bearing upon the issue of war or peace with Hitler. That issue cannot be decided, or even much affected one way or the other, by the vote to retain or abolish the combat zone. The hostilities between Germany and the United States have taken place outside the combat zones, well within the waters of the Western Hemisphere or in the case of the Robin Moor and the Lehigh on the open seas where no provision of the Neutrality Act applies.

The removal of the combat zone will considerably increase the operating efficiency of the naval patrol: it will not necessarily mean the dispatch of many American merchant ships to the British Isles and, if it did, it is now certain that American policy toward Hitler is not going to be determined by incidents but by the vital and general interests of American security. With the full approval of Congress we declared our opposition to Hitler before there were any incidents at sea, and if there were no further incidents, we should still be resolved to oppose him. So as respects Hitler, and except as the isolationists succeed in inflating its symbolic importance, the vote on the combat zone will not bring us nearer to or further away from the conflict which is already joined.

The Once Over

The Redskin And Inflation

(Salamanca, N. Y.—The 5 to 8 yards of calico formerly paid to the New York tribesmen of the Six Nations each year under a treaty of 1794 with the United States has been cut to 3 yards, due to rising costs of cotton, etc."—News item.)

By the shores of Gitchee Gummee
Sat the Red Man waiting, waiting
In the frosts of early winter
For his payment from the white man,
For the payment as by treaty—
For the calico he asked for
As the price of his surrender.

* * * *

Sat the ancient Tuscaroras,
Onondagas and Cayugas,
And the Senecas once mighty
With no menace to their freedom,
In the bright November morning,
With no war to aggravate them,
With no crisis near their wigwams,
Free from all the white man's worries,

* * * *

Westward toward the mighty forest,
(Eastward, Northward also Southward),
Passed the newsboys shouting "Wuxtry!"
Passed the planners and commissions,
Passed the boards and mediators,
Agents from the far Potomac
Crying of their wars and troubles,
Crying of their plans to meet them,
Warning of the threats and perils.

* * * *

Level spread the lake before them;
From its bosom leaped the sturgeon—
Leaped the sturgeon U-Shud-Worry
Saying in the sturgeon language,
"This is all a Palaface matter,
"For the civilized ones only."

* * * *

From the brow of each big Injun
Gone was every trace of worry;
Soon he'd get, by ancient treaty,
All his fathers had agreed to—
Calico from the Potomac.
Ample for his clothes and bedding,
All sufficient for the winter . . .
No priorities, no ceilings,
Not a word from Frank or Leon.
(This at least was how he doped it).

* * * *

Through the shining mist of morning
Came a birch canoe with paddles—
(Not so many paddles this time)
Due to needs by Mr. Knudsen)—
Rolls of calico it bore them,
But the rolls looked demi-tasse.

* * * *

Asked the tribesmen, "Say, what's doing?
"What's the lowdown? Is this kosher?
"This should be for winter clothing—
"Are the Tuscaroras midgets?
"Must the Senecas go Minsky?"

* * * *

Then the Great White Father gently
Spoke and said "It's 3 yards this time—
Only 3 yards have you coming—
The commodities are rising!"

* * * *

Then the tribesmen echoed sadly
"All the blessings of the white man,
Of the civilized age have we!
"We have economic problems,
"We have systematic planning,
"We are aided by commissions,
"We have radio orations,
"We have crises fresh each morning,
"We have wars just like the White man . . .
"Now we even have inflation!"

* * * *

"The State Department has been handling the Far Eastern matter very carefully, but we have no cause to be concerned."—Mayor LaGuardia.

The Irish Consider Loyalties

YOU HAVE by your editorial "On Loyalties" in The Post of November 11 (Armistice Day), struck a high note for unity that will reverberate from one corner of the country to the other and will affect for good all racial origins in the United States. I trust it will receive the publicity throughout the country it so well deserves and merits.

The American citizens of Irish extraction are indebted to you for voicing so clearly and forcefully their exact sentiments with respect to their loyalty to the American Government. They can, as a matter of fact, accept and adopt this editorial as their very own in this respect.

The great wonder is that anyone should be found in this day and age to attack, by implication or otherwise, the loyalty of Irish American citizens after the very many proofs the members of the Irish race have given of their loyalty in the past. If any such person exists he is indeed a rarity.

There is no race of people on earth whose sympathy and resources go out more freely to the oppressed people of all lands, including England, than that of the Irish and I feel you are well within the mark in your estimate of the percentage of the Irish people who want Britain to win this war. The help the Irish nation is contributing to England toward this end is by no means a small one. Were it not for the food supplies shipped to England from Ireland daily and often many times a day, the story in the early part of the war might be an entirely different one.

There is no Irishman outside a lunatic asylum who favors a Nazi victory, but who, on the contrary, wishes and prays for their complete destruction as a force so evil and destructive of all that man holds dear as to merit the favor of none except it be Satan himself.

The Irish American citizen will ever be loyal to America and her great institutions to a degree approaching religious fervor and the man or woman who would try to convey any different conclusion would be doing his or her country a great disservice at this moment when unity of thought and purpose should be uppermost in the minds of all our people for the gigantic task that lay ahead if we would protect our sacred institutions for ourselves and our posterity.

The Irishman has always been loyal to the land of his adoption, whether it be America, Bolivia, Australia, France, Russia or England. It is only necessary to instance the recent feat of Lieut. Paddy Finucane, of the R. A. F., who is credited with bagging 22 Nazi planes. Was his heart in the fight? You bet it was—his heart and his soul, too.

Wasn't it an English monarch who said, when his forces were being defeated on Flanders fields by the French aided by several battalions of Irish warriors, "What stupid laws that have deprived me of such gallant warriors."

The Irishman has found in America the land of his hopes—the land of his dreams—the land which because of its wide range of freedom and elemental justice and opportunity for all, can readily command his loyalty, his devotion and his deepest respect. He will never be disloyal to that land. JAMES T. McCARTHY,
Chairman United Irish Societies of Washington, D. C.
Washington, Nov. 11.

WE OF THE American Irish Defense Association expected brickbats from Wheeler and the isolationists. We were proud that our work had nettled Wheeler into attacking us in the Senate on Monday. But we were surprised to see The Post join Wheeler in throwing a brickbat of its own in its editorial columns on Tuesday.

Senator Wheeler's brickbat tried to discredit our work because he recognizes how dangerous our association is to his campaign to split and divide Americans. The America First Committee is exploiting the old arguments against the British and for this purpose has special Irish and special Catholic propaganda sections. Wheeler and Lindbergh hope that their Irish minority can be pawned off as a majority voice. They want to use the justifiable feelings of the Irish against British imperialism and the Catholic feelings against Soviet atheism to prevent Americans from uniting behind our declared policy of destroying Hitler's imperialism and Hitler's paganism.

Senator Wheeler accuses our association of being the instrument of some Government officials. The informal meeting to which he referred, where a few Government officials sat and listened to our story, was held long after we had organized. At this meeting we merely raised the technical question whether it would be appropriate to launch our national roll call on Navy Day. We discovered that other plans for the celebration of Navy Day made it unwise to launch our roll call on that day. Now if that be treason—let Senator Wheeler make the most of it. The Post will be pleased to know that at least we did not ask the Government to frank out our material!

We are perplexed that The Post should editorially depreciate our work for national unity after Senator Wheeler had just demonstrated that he is concerned over our effectiveness. Had The Post editorial been written by a columnist, for whom the paper expressly declines responsibility, it would not have been so bad. But an editorial implies that The Post vouches for it. Apparently The Post does not keep in touch with the news which it publishes, for this editorial misconstrues the clear statements about the association which have appeared in The Post on several occasions. The editorial is particularly dangerous at this time because it implies that people of Irish descent should not sign the national roll call putting themselves on record in support of our foreign policy.

In this time of national emergency there are some Irishmen and women who are opposing the expressed policy of our elected representatives. We know that most of the Irish-American papers—the Brooklyn Tablet, the Irish World, the Gaelic-American, the Irish Echo and others—are creating the impression that we of Irish descent are in the isolationist camp.

Our association wants the country to know that people of Irish heritage and of religious faith recognize and oppose the real enemy of this country and of religious freedom. We do not want to be split away from the main stream of American unity. We want it understood that we are not a group that puts old antagonisms above loyalty to this Nation.

We want the President to know that the nobodies with Irish names who attack our national policy are recognized by the Irish-Americans for what they are—duped conveyors of Nazi propaganda. As Francis M. Shea, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, recently pointed out, none of the Irish names such as James A. Farley, Alfred E. Smith, Edward J. Flynn, Edward J. Kelly, etc., is listed among the isolationists.

We have a right and duty to provide a rallying place for Americans of Irish descent—an organization that will voice their true loyalty to this land of liberty. Practically all groups, of whatever national origin, have loyalty organizations—to make clear to the world that the members of the group, regardless of where they or their fathers were born, are Americans.

Therefore, it seems curious to us that The Post should single out for adverse criticism the one organization among many Irish groups which has gone on record in support of the entire defense program. Surely The Post is not ignorant of the fact that the Nazis are quoting certain Irish separatists and isolationists all over the world as if they represented American Irish opinion. This Nazi propaganda is intended to mislead the Irish in Ireland and to weaken their determination to defend themselves, for, says German short-wave propaganda, if Eire's friends in America are not behind their promise to help attacked nations, on whom can they depend?

Nazi propaganda misrepresenting Irish opinion in America, with quotations from the Irish-American press, certainly does not improve the morale of the British people or give comfort to the conquered nations.

As long as the Nazis claim that our President cannot depend on the Irish in America we have need of an organization that says "you can count on the Irish, Mr. President."

We of the American Irish Defense Association have begun a campaign for national unity and we intend to mobilize the majority voice to shout as loudly as possible to the Irish in Ireland, to the British, to the oppressed people everywhere and to the people of our own country, "You can count on the Irish, Mr. President."
ROSSA F. DOWNING.
National Chairman, American Irish Defense Association.

Grangers' Challenge

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Staff Writer

All-Out Production

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 12.—Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, urged Americans today to "stop the struggle for prices, wages and profits" and help the Government achieve unlimited defense production and redeem its pledge of material aid to those fighting Hitler.

"The Grange," he said, "challenges labor, business and finance to join with agriculture in unlimited production."

Earlier, a message from President Roosevelt was read to the Grange delegates, asserting it was the Nation's supreme task to make the ideals of "a proper equality, equity and fairness" prevail through democratic action, and to make America "strong and free and neighborly in a changing world."

"We can do it; we must do it; we are doing it," the President said.

Mr. Roosevelt added that he had been a member of the Grange for more than 25 years, and continued:

"In the course of my membership I have often thought of the creed and purposes which members of the order adopted and announced at their national organization meeting in 1873 at Georgetown, D. C.

"'We desire,' said the founders, 'a proper equality, equity and fairness; protection for the weak, restraint upon the strong. These are American ideals, the very essence of American independence.'"

"All of us subscribe," the President added, "to these ideals and principles. Our supreme task is to make them prevail through democratic action.

"I know that Grange members, as well as all other American citizens, will continue to do their part to make and keep America strong and free and neighborly in a changing world."

Taber, in a keynote speech prepared for the opening session of the seventy-fifth annual meeting of the farm organization, added:

"No person has the right by word or deed to slow up production in national defense, or to check the flow of materials that our Government has solemnly promised to Britain and her allies."

Devoting much of his address to the international situation, Taber said that, until Congress declares war, every citizen has a right to use his influence to try to prevent the Nation from becoming directly involved.

"Yet it is time," e said, "for all Americans to realize that we have not been acting as a neutral. They are against Hitler and for the democracies."

The national master declared he believed the country's safest course "is along the lines of unlimited defense production, requiring sacrifices on the part of all, redeeming our pledge of material assistance abroad and preserving the Monroe Doctrine at all costs."

The Grange, an organization said to represent more than a million farmers in 37 States, "hopes and prays," Taber said, "that we may follow the honorable way of peace, but we are not unmindful that the dangers are greater now than they were in 1916." A year ago the Grange declared against sending an army abroad.

Pledging agriculture to abundant production of food, Taber said all that farmers asked in turn was that they receive the same treatment on prices, income and taxation that is accorded others. He said current farm prices were not too high, but that recent advances merely represented "long-delayed parity and justice."

"The farmer," he asserted, "has actually been subsidizing the American consumer."

Declaring his opposition to Government price-fixing, Taber said, however, that unless the people themselves acted to prevent inflation by investing in defense bonds and dropping new price and wage demands, such action might become necessary.

Fair Enough

Honest Unions Deserve No Medals

HERE WE ARE back on topic A, but no subject interests more people than the union thing just now, and, anyway, I have been wanting to clarify and emphasize the fact that unions aren't sacred, as some of the professional unioneers would have us believe, and deserve no medals from the public for conducting themselves in a reasonably honest and orderly way.

PEGLER

My revered employer has often urged me to protest that I am not antiunion, and last week I had a talk with a big unioneer, and one of the better ones at that, who thought I convicted myself of antiunionism by neglecting to hang out a sign in these essays every so often to the effect that unions are jake with me.

I keep telling my revered employer just what I told the unioneer, to wit, that I certainly am antiunion when a union places its own interests above and against those of the whole community, as in the case of the mine workers in the captive mines, or when a union is a racket or an agency of the Kremlin, as the Newspaper Guild was for years. You bet your sweet life I am antiunion then, and you can tell it to the C. I. O. or the A. F. of L., or Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Everybody ought to be antiunion in such cases, because if you are pro union then you are anti-American and antilabor, too.

A FEW WEEKS ago Harry Van Arsdale called up, he of Local 3 of the A. F. of L. Electricians, and said some of his boys thought I was antiunion, and I said he could tell them they are dead right in the case of Local 3, because this one takes the position that its own interests are more important than the interests of the whole community of New York and should be served first, and at the expense of the common interest for the advantage of the comparatively few citizens who happen to be members.

This Local 3 is a terrible thing. It blockades certain building materials out of New York, even though these materials be union made, and in that respect is antiunion itself, and it goes into huddles with manufacturers and contractors to run up prices which have to be paid by the other people of the city in the form of higher rents and retail prices and so forth, so that Van Arsdale can hold his power over his crowd and the members can enjoy a scale of wages established through artificial and, I say, extortionate restraints.

And, by the way, notwithstanding the adoption of another one of those fake resolutions against racketeering in the recent convention of the A. F. of L. in Seattle, the electricians went right down to St. Louis and reelected as one of their vice presidents one of the most notorious crooks in the whole racket, no less than Umbrella Mike Boyle, of Chicago, who was denounced years ago by the United States Circuit Court as a blackmailer, a highwayman, a leech on commerce and a betrayer of labor. That is how much those resolutions mean.

VAN ARSDALE won't even say a word against this dirty crook, although Mike is his superior officer in the electricians, and he, as a loyal unioneer, certainly has a moral obligation to throw out vermin who louse up the house of labor. Van Arsdale just looks at the ceiling, turns up his palms and says he isn't interfering with any other local, but he knows as well as I do that Boyle is a crook and joins the other unioneers in beefing because the records of these grafters are exposed to public view.

And my revered employer and some of these unioneers also keep on saying I ought every now and again to point out that not all unions or unioneers are crooked, but that some of them are very well behaved.

To that I just say I'm too busy and remind them that the cop on the corner doesn't rush up to the square guy without provocation, pat him on the back for not hoisting a payroll or shooting the old lady and congratulate him on his excellent citizenship. The cop takes it for granted that you are behaving yourself and you hear from him only if and when you get out of line and violate some law. Then you hear from him plenty and nobody yaps at the cop for neglecting to issue little mash notes of praise to the thousands of people who just go along minding their own business.

WHY should anyone have to praise unions for going straight, when they do? They ought to go straight, unless it is admitted that honest conduct by unions and unioneers is so rare as to deserve special mention. Did anyone ever give you a piece in the paper praising you lopsided just because you do your job, pay your bills, raise your kids right and keep out of crime?

The trouble is that the unions have had too much of this recognition and praise for years and years, most of it undeserved and in violation of the provable facts of felonious and otherwise antisocial conduct. When they straighten out and behave they will hear a loud silence, which is all the recognition that any of us get or deserve for decent citizenship.

British And Indian Troops Rehearse War in Malaya

By F. Tillman Durdin

Wireless—Copyright by New York Times

Singapore, Nov. 12.—The most extensive maneuvers yet held in northern Malaya began today in the jungles and ricelands of Selangor, Kedah and neighboring Malay states. The maneuvers are designed to perfect methods of warfare in the tropics, test the effectiveness of mechanized equipment under Malayan conditions and generally familiarize the forces with battle problems in their fighting areas.

Indian and British troops, including a number of famous English and Scottish regiments, will engage in the war games, which are under direction of Maj. Gen. Sir Lewis Heath, leader of the British troops that defeated the Italian armies in East Africa last year.

Hull Expresses Appreciation of Brazil's Attitude

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Cordell Hull expressed gratification yesterday over the declarations of President Getulio Vargas and Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil in support of the policy of common defense by the American republics of the Western Hemisphere.

"I have read the reports," he said at his press conference, "of the recent speech of President Vargas and the subsequent press interview of Dr. Aranha with the deepest appreciation. They constitute a further striking demonstration of the fact that the governments and peoples of all of the American republics are fully aware of the dangers to the Western Hemisphere inherent in the present world situation. The position taken by the government of Brazil is one more proof that, in accordance with its traditional policy, Brazil strives always for the advancement of inter-American solidarity and for the taking of all measures necessary to secure the security and freedom of the New World."

State School Heads To Study Problem Of Teacher Lack

Richmond, Va., Nov. 12 (AP).—State school superintendents at their annual conference here next Monday and Tuesday will consider losses of public school teachers to defense industries offering higher salaries.

Dabney S. Lancaster, State superintendent of public instruction, said these losses had resulted in a teacher shortage which has been a subject of serious consideration for many school administrators.

Lancaster said the superintendents also would discuss the questions of transient pupils, the distribution of State school funds, schools and national defense, proposed and expected legislation, supervision of instruction in high schools, and illiteracy.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Objectors May Not Get U. S. Jobs Back

Conscientious objectors won't be reinstated in their former Government jobs under the mandatory provision of the Selective Service Act. This ruling was made yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. The commission, however, pointed out that conscientious objectors could be reinstated if the departments wanted to take them back. There's no law against it. The commission, in fact, advised the departments to adopt a "liberal attitude" toward reinstating the boys who conscientiously object to military training and who are drafted nevertheless and assigned to civilian work under civilian direction.

A 73-year-old Midwesterner applied for a defense job under Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt. He was rejected because of his age. The elderly man argued that he was really younger . . . that he had been given a blood transfusion from a young man . . . and that, he insisted, reduced his years and made him eligible for the job.

The need for competent stenographers and typists in the Federal service is becoming critical. The commission revealed yesterday that the requirements for steno and typists tests would be lowered in an effort to supply the demand from defense agencies. Dropped from the usual exams are the general test, questions on English usage and the like, and the requirement to copy from rough draft. All a typist has to do now is copy from correct copy. And even the rating standards have been lowered so that applicants who make a larger number of mistakes may be certified. Steno tests also have been simplified.

Requirements have been lowered to such an extent, an official said, that a 16-year-old who studied typing in high school can pass a test. The commission is desperate. More than 100,000 persons have taken steno and typist tests within the past six months. The exams are being given twice a month and the number of applicants is becoming increasingly smaller. And the demand is greater. More than 50 per cent of the eligibles refuse jobs in Washington. Maybe Washington isn't as glamorous as it's pictured.

Training on the Job

What's the answer? The commission believes in training on the job. In fact, it has officially informed department heads that future typists and stenos won't be up to past standards. It suggests that "eligibles will need additional training after appointment in order to enable them to meet satisfactory standards of performance." Several personnel experts have suggested that stenos, typists and other machine operators be brought here by the hundreds and be trained for Government work before they are assigned to regular duty. This plan was considered but it can't be done now . . . for lack of space, furniture, typewriters, and other office machines.

Public Buildings is getting flossy. It has hired Gladys Miller of New York City to make defense homes bright and attractive places in which to live . . . GAO has banned all transfers. The ruling is hard and fast as 500 employes have made application for transfers and officials say if they were all granted it would wreck the place. Nevertheless, the no transfer ban isn't a morale builder to employes who can get better-paying jobs elsewhere.

Floyd Odlum has taken complete control of OPM's Division of Contract Distribution. He has severed all connections with the Federal Reserve Banks which are carrying on a contract distribution service. On December 1 Federal Reserve employes connected with this work will be transferred to OPM . . . An interesting Washington rumor is that Postmaster General Frank Walker will be appointed Ambassador to Mexico. Walker has the necessary qualifications, he's able, wealthy, and a devout Catholic. Paul McNutt also has been mentioned, as has Justice Frank Murphy.

Office of Price Administration needs executive sales engineers. The jobs pay from $3800 to $5600. They are open in OPA's Agricultural Machinery Section. Applicants should send a resume of their experience to Joel Dean at OPA . . . Dr. Victor E. Watkins will be retired November 30 as chief of the Central Disability Board at Veterans Administration. He has served the Government 47 years.

Fire Station Picketed

Saginaw, Mich., Nov 12 (AP).—A fire station was picketed here today. The Trades Council (A.F.L.) did the picketing as firemen—members of the International Association of Fire Fighters (A.F.L.)—were fitting steam pipes preparatory to restoring a former hose house. Chief Frank Bender explained that since the depression firemen have done all the repair work.

Reward Is $30

Cabby Gives Back $4350 Gems, Cash

ROBERT E. HOFFMAN
Discovered Gems in Cab

It's not unusual for a cab driver to find a forgotten purse in his taxi and return it to the loser.

But $4350 is a lot of money, and $4350 in valuables is what Robert E. Hoffman found and returned yesterday.

Hoffman, who'd rather draw cartoons or sing than drive a cab, took Mrs. Francis A. Boyer, wife of OPM's air production chief, from Connecticut Avenue and M Street to her apartment at 2100 Connecticut Avenue, then wheeled down the avenue and picked up another fare.

"Look what I've found!" exclaimed the passenger.

"Oh, no," responded the fare. "Finder's keepers."

Whereupon Hoffman halted the cab, an argument ensued and—well, Hoffman got the purse.

Mrs. Boyer had just finished calling police headquarters about her lost purse when Hoffman phoned. He had learned Mrs. Boyer's identity from a card in the purse.

"Who's this?" asked Mrs. Boyer. "Santa Claus," Hoffman replied. And within a matter of minutes he had brought the purse to its owner.

The purse, Mrs. Boyer said, contained $4150 worth of jewelry, $150 in cash and $100 in American Express checks. She gave Hoffman $30 in reward.

Hoffman, who is 30 and father of two young children, lives with his family at 3625 Eleventh Street Northwest. He draws cartoons for "Taxi-Go-Round," the cab drivers' publication, and sometimes sings over WMAL.

Newest D. C. Radio Station Opened At Georgetown U.

Radio Station GBS, Washington's smallest radio station, began operating last night at Georgetown University as part of a growing Intercollegiate Broadcasting System. The program was heard by 800 students in dormitory rooms and an invited group in the auditorium of the Speech Institute.

The station will broadcast coming events at Georgetown in the mornings from Monday through Friday at 8:40 o'clock. Special broadcasts are planned for Sundays from 10:30 a. m. to noon. The station is an adjunct of the University's Speech Institute under the direction of Prof. Albert A. Austen. Both the institute and the radio station were provided by an alumnus who has asked to remain anonymous.

The opening program included a wartime drama produced by Jack Coleman, Robert Napier, Vincent Mulvancy, Grover Whalen and Frank Hartnett, and talks by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., and the Rev. John E. Grattan, S. J., of the Georgetown faculty.

Rent Bill Slated for Senate Today

Measure Calls for District Rates To Be Pegged At Jan. 1941 Level

The District rent control bill, pegging local rent rates at the January 1, 1941, level, is scheduled to be acted upon by the Senate today, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, announced last night.

The District Committee approved the measure Monday, striking from it the widely criticized Patman amendment, which would have hinged a rent administrator's decisions on the investment value of a landlord's property.

In amendments to the House-passed measure, the Senate group incorporated a provision requiring hotels to post publicly their rates on the January 1 freezing date, and confined selection of a rent administrator to residents of the District for the past three years.

Would License Child Agencies

The "baby broker" bill, which would license local child-placement agencies—legislation prompted by articles in The Post and advocated by numerous civic groups—will be introduced to the Senate today by Senator McCarran. It was introduced to the House last month and is awaiting District Committee action.

The bill would create a committee of eight members to formulate rules and regulations for carrying out the licensing act.

Also to be introduced to the Senate today by the District Committee chairman are bills which would fix a penalty of $300 fine or 90 days in jail for individuals convicted of selling impure food in the District; require the licensing of foreign cooperative organizations existing here; and necessitate that future employes of the District Board of Public Welfare take competitive Civil Service examinations.

Two Bills Reported Favorably

Renah F. Camalier, Senate District Committee municipal adviser, announced yesterday that a subcommittee has reported favorably on two local bills aiding child welfare work.

One measure, giving additional powers to the Board of Public Welfare, would authorize the board to assume responsibility for the care and support of needy children at the request of parent or guardian without the requirement of a commitment from the juvenile court.

The other bill receiving a favorable subcommittee report would give more adequate home care for dependent children in conformity with standards of the Social Security Board and the District Board of Public Welfare.

A special Senate District subcommittee will continue hearings on the off-street parking measure and the House passed two-cent increase in the District gasoline tax at 9:30 a. m. today.

The subcommittee hearing under the chairmanship of Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, was postponed from yesterday when it originally was scheduled to begin its third week of meetings.

Pi Kappa Alumni Name Rep. Grant New President

Representative George M. Grant (Democrat), of Alabama, last night was elected president of the Washington alumni of Pi Kappa Phi, national social fraternity.

Others chosen were Dillard B. Lasseter, deputy administrator of the NYA, vice president; James Heinz, attorney, treasurer, and Olin Wilkins, businessman, secretary. Grant succeeds Edward L. Tolson, jr., of the Department of Agriculture.

Plans were discussed for the fraternity's national convention, to be held here next August, and for a Founders' Day dinner, to be held December 10.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

LaSalle Spier's Compositions Highlight Guild Concert

Chamber Music Guild presents its string quartet (Frank Gittelson, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher), LaSalle Spier, composer-pianist; Abrasha Robofski, barytone, and Evelyn Swarthout, pianist. Program: Quartet in C major, Op. 74, No. 1 (Haydn), A Cycle of Five Songs, from the poems of Edgar Allan Poe, for barytone, string quartet and piano (LaSalle Spier), Piano Quintet in E flat major, Op. 44 (Schumann).

Of primary interest in last evening's Chamber Music Guild concert in Almas Temple was the presentation of LaSalle Spier's cycle of five songs for barytone, string quartet and piano, with the composer at the keyboard. Had it not been for this novelty, emphasis would have fallen upon the appearance of the accomplished young pianist, Evelyn Swarthout, a recent acquisition to resident talent, in the Schumann piano quintet. New music, however, takes precedence over old in the attention of the critic, who hears too little of the former and too much of the latter.

BROWN

Mr. Spier is not only a versatile but an unpredictable composer, turning up in the most unexpected musical places. From none of his works that I have heard would I have deduced his liking for the poems of Edgar Allan Poe, yet it was five of them that he chose for an ensemble setting. His treatment of four of them was appropriately romantic, and in only one was the approach somewhat Freudian. The style of "To Helen" was suave and swaying as "the perfumed sea," with the piano mainly playing the arpeggio part of a harp.

"El Dorado" was in the ballad tradition, sturdy and rhythmic in its narrative march, save for the third verse where a legato langour indicated the failing strength of the adventure. "A Dream Within A Dream" had some piquant harmonic touches in its fantasy, and "To One In Paradise" conveyed an Elysian atmosphere in the opening stanzas. The handling of "Annabel Lee," which one would have expected to be as simple and iterative as the poem itself, was surprisingly subjective and involved. Its harmonic bitterness, its almost morbid polgnanvy, was attuned ot the tortured soul of the poet.

All of the songs have character and melodic profile, but the most striking and memorable is "Annabel Lee" because of its intensity. Abrasha Robofski was the singer, and his resonant voice was put to effective use.

Miss Swarthout was an admirable exponent in the Schumann quintet, equally capable when the piano made its dominant assertions and when it retreated into accompanying comment. She has an excellent surety in dynamic stresses, and a touch that can be crisp and positive or lingeringly lyric. One would like to hear her in a less hackneyed work—say the quintets of Dvorak, Faure and Widor, or one of the forty-odd American quintets resting on the silent shelf.

Plan to Admit U. S. Lawyers To Bar Sent Back to Committee

A proposal to permit Government attorneys engaged in the interpretation and administration of the law to practice before the District bar, was overwhelmingly voted back to committee by members of the Bar Association of the District, at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

In a report by the committee on legal education and admission requirements, whose chairman is Guilford S. Jameson, it was proposed to admit Government attorneys to practice here if they have been actively engaged in the profession for not less than seven years immediately preceding application.

Harryman Dorsey, however, took the floor and denounced the proposal.

"Such a rule," he said, "would open the gates to unqualified applicants and sundown lawyers."

Dorsey said Government attorneys engaged in the "interpretation and administration of the law" at their desks were, in his opinion, not qualified as trial lawyers.

Redrafting of the rule to admit any applicants to the bar after they have been actively engaged in practice five years immediately before application, also was sent back to committee for further study.

Milton S. Katz, associate general counsel of OPM, spoke on priorities in the defense program.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, was a guest speaker at the first informal dinner this season of the Women's Bar Association last night at the New Colonial Hotel.

McCarran said he was heartily in favor of the court reorganization bill and added:

"Such legislation now pending in Congress will expedite to a great measure justice in our courts. Justice delayed is justice denied and if I have anything to do with it, there will be no delay of justice."

Paul Cromelin, chairman of the general committee on relations with the courts for the Bar Association of the District, also spoke on the proposed merger of police and municipal courts here.

To Walk or Not to Walk? That Is the Question

She: "Don't."
He: "Don't what?"
She: "Just don't anything."
He: "Why?"
She: "I don't know."
He: "Then I don't see why we shouldn't."
She: "Neither do I, but the sign still says 'Don't.'"

The discussion took place at Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest about 5 p. m. yesterday as hundreds of pedestrians milled around trying to decide whether to cross the streets.

The "walk light" was temporarily out of kilter with merely the stubborn admonishment, "Don't" to guide walkers.

Site for FBI Building Up For Action

Approval Forecast To Cut Down on Congestion at Justice Department

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission tomorrow will be asked to approve the site and size of a proposed new home for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Opening its two-day monthly meeting this morning in the new Interior Department Building, the commission will take up several public building projects, but chief interest will be focused on the FBI proposal.

Acutely overcrowded in the Department of Justice Building, though it occupies more than two-fifths of the total space, the bureau reportedly has chosen an unrevealed site for its new home. FBI now has 3500 employes in Washington alone and is still expanding, due to extra duties imposed by the defense program.

Working Three Shifts

Congestion is severe in the Justice building, federal officials said yesterday, despite the fact that the FBI is working three shifts. The Washington field office is housed in rented space on downtown K Street. It is the bureau's aim to bring all sections and divisions under a single, exclusive roof.

Plans for the proposed structure will be submitted to the planning body by W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings, and Louis A. Simon, supervisiong architect.

On the commission's agenda for today are:

Consideration of plans for development of recreational uses of the reservoir tract at Forty-fourth and Warren Streets Northwest, Harrison playground at Thirteenth and V streets northwest and Francis Junior High School recreation center, Twenty-third and N streets northwest.

Study of the plans for the following housing projects: A 70-unit community for Bolling Field officers and enlisted men to be erected on farm property of St. Elizabeths Hospital; a 300-dwelling community on Stanton Road Southeast, sponsored by the Alley Dwelling Authority; the bachelor girls' dormitory for defense workers only, to be built at Sixteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, and the huge Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. housing program in Alexandria.

This afternoon the planners will discuss two proposed zoning changes. One would authorize the District Commissioners to require, if they chose, builders of new apartment houses and business structures to provide off-street parking facilities. The other would liberalize present regulations to permit dwellings in single family residence districts to accept more than two roomers or boarders.

Highways to Be Considered

Highlighting tomorrow's session, next to discussion of the FBI building, will be a joint meeting with the Fine Arts Commission on highway changes incidental to use of the new War Department building under construction in Arlington County, Va.

The two groups will give particular attention to proposals to extend Independence Avenue westward to Arlington Memorial Bridge, alter the Lincoln Memorial roadway plan and build a new system of approaches on Columbia Island.

It was learned yesterday that the War Department is preparing contracts for purchase of all land on the south side of Columbia Pike for a depth of 400 feet and extending from U. S. No. 1 Highway to South Lynn Street.

The new acquisition will be utilized for the War Department building network of approaches, connecting with the Arlington County highway system. Part of the property also would be used for auto parking.

Firemen Disturbed But Diners Aren't

About 100 guests went peacefully on with their dining at 8 p. m. last night while fire apparatus and scout cars reared up in front of O'Donnell's Sea Food Restaurant, 1209 E Street Northwest. It turned out there was no fire. Someone who saw smoke coming from the chimney apparently turned in the alarm.

Voice of Experience

Miami, Fla., Nov. 12 (AP).—When policemen stopped an auto, seemingly without a driver, they found a 10-year-old boy behind the wheel, his father asleep. The boy told the judge he couldn't see the road but drove "by watching the telegraph wires." When the judge remonstrated, the father argued: "He's a good driver. He's been driving five years."

Excess Baggage

BERYL ANN BOWEN
Found in Neighbor's Trunk

Three-year-old Beryl Ann Bowen is convinced now that an old trunk collecting dust in a basement is no place to hide in the game of hide-and-seek.

Beryl Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bowen, 1719 Lincoln Road, yesterday afternoon spent two unhappy hours in a trunk in a neighbor's home, while neighbors, police on foot and in scout cars searched in vain for her.

She might have been there longer if Capt. Walter Storm of the Twelfth Precinct hadn't heard a scratching noise from the trunk as he started to leave the basement after a search.

Beryl Ann's father, Merrill W. Bowen, a clerk in the Interior Department's Office of Indian Affairs, isn't sure why his daughter got in the trunk in the first place but thinks she must have been playing hide-and-seek.

The child was considerably upset when released from the trunk and was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where she was released after examination.

D. C. May Get $3,537,500 For Projects

10 of 17 Items Proposed by City May Be Financed Under Lanham Act

A partial turnabout by the Federal Works Agency yesterday virtually assured the District's participation in defense funds under the Lanham Act up to at least $3,537,500.

At a District Building conference with the Commissioners, FWA officials agreed to alter their earlier stand and support certain "eligible" items before the House District Committee.

Commissioner John Russell Young, on Monday, lodged indignant protests with the committee when it was disclosed the FWA had excluded Washington from sharing in the 150-million-dollar Lanham fund which it administers.

The Commissioners had sought six million dollars and yesterday's conference was in line with Young's announced determination to "leave no stone unturned to get it."

10 of 17 Items Approved

At first holding that proposed local projects were not closely enough associated with defense activities to come under the Federal allotment, the FWA changed its mind yesterday to the extent of approving 10 of 17 items proposed by the Commissioners.

Sanctioned by the Federal officials was a sum of $1,102,150 for new water mains, filters and pumps to meet expanding demands on the city's water supply because of an ever-increasing population.

Only one of six suggested school projects, however, was approved by the FWA authorities. This is an eight-room elementary school at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast to cost $213,950.

Expenditures of $684,400 for a new maternal and child ward at Gallinger Hospital; $846,750 for a storm sewer and three public convenience stations; $114,000 for fire alarm extensions and $85,300 for a sewage treatment plant at the District Training School, Laurel, Md., also were approved.

$490,750 for Contingencies

In addition, the FWA agreed to O. K. an item of $490,750 for "contingencies."

The Commissioners indicated, following the meeting, they are not satisfied with the apparent compromise and will continue efforts to obtain the entire six million dollars orignally requested.

'The Rivals' Was All-Star Away Back Yonder, Too

Mrs. Fiske Had a Nice Cast in 1925; Variety Club Elects Its Head Men; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE THEATER GUILD, under the administrative guidance of Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner, is no producing group to fly in the face of precedent or violate tradition in the matter of casting such an honorable comedy as Sheridan's "The Rivals." In sheer self defense, it was compelled to assemble an all-star company of players to bring the ancient piece into the National Theater next Monday night. It has always been done.

JESSE L. LASKY

Take Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske's revival of the play in 1925, for instance. It seems to be as recent as any that can be recalled by ardent devotees of the theater and one of them, Mr. Mannix Walker, of 3035 Dumbarton Avenue, has been thoughtful enough to drop by with a program of that presentation as it was seen in the Hollis Street Theater, Boston, the week of January 12, 1925.

With Mrs. Fiske as Mrs. Malaprop, of course, we find Thomas A. Wise in the role of Sir Anthony Absolute, James T. Powers as Bob Acres, Chauncey Olcott as Capt. Jack Absolute, Lola Fisher as Lydia Languish and Marie Carroll as Lucy. These are the roles that will be played here next week by Mary Boland, Walter Hampden, Bobby Clark, Donald Burr, Haila Stoddard and Helen Ford.

Except in their eminence, there is precious little resemblance between Mary Boland and Mrs. Fiske and still less between Walter Hampden and Tom Wise. Bobby Clark and James T. Powers find a little more in common. Both long were almost exclusively identified with vaudeville and musical comedy, before they discovered congenial outlets for their antic talents in nonmusical assignments. Chauncey Olcott, as everyone wearing enough years must remember, was the favorite Irish tenor long before he decided to become a popular Irish actor, although he always combined a bit of both.

Not that any of this matters, but Mr. Walker unwittingly awakened a long chain of memories that needed a little exercise. Their heaviest weight to lift is the seemingly bizarre idea that either Jimmie Powers or Bobby Clark could fit himself so snugly into a role that the late Joseph Jefferson numbered among his best—when he wasn't out on a fishing trip with President Grover Cleveland.

So the Washington Variety Club held its annual election of officers and after the count was over found Vincent Dougherty, veteran of the Paramount forces in the Capital, perched up there in the chief barker's chair. The English slang word for "chief barker" is "president." Mr. Dougherty, as anyone who knows him will testify, will wear the plug hat symbolic of the office jauntily. Sam Wheeler, of Twentieth Century-Fox, was balloted into the first assistant chief barkership and John Allen, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, into the second. Eddie Fontaine, also of Paramount, is the new secretary and that highstrung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, division manager for Columbia, was reelected treasurer, a post he has occupied with signal something-or-other ever since the organization of the club. The new board of governors is the social register of show business. All nice boys.

Dots and Dashes

Simultaneously with the opening of Robert Milton's "R. A. F.", at the National on Monday night, November 24, the Maryland Theater, in Baltimore, will be breaking out Molnar's "The King's Maid" . . . Oscar Serlin's first production since "Life With Father" and Ferenc Molnar's first play since his arrival in this country a year and a half ago . . . Mail orders now being received for both . . . The Molnar play, incidentally, will go straight into New York and not be seen here until after the Broadway run . . . Next season—they hope . . . Both ballrooms of the Willard are in the hands of the wreckers—pardon, carpenters, electricians, decorators and artisans—rebuilding for Saturday night's annual Variety Club dinner and dance, at which Abbott and Costello will be guests of honor . . . There'll be a sideshow and everything . . . Not meaning the cash customers . . . Emlyn Williams, author of "Night Must Fall," "The Corn Is Green," etc., and currently on the screen in "The Girl in the News," "Major Barbara" and "The Stars Look Down," also is star and part-author of "Dead Men Tell No Tales," opening Sunday at the Hiser Theater . . . Besides all that, he is helping Britain win the war . . . A little late getting around to it, perhaps, but the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for October was bestowed upon "Sergeant York" . . . The last Jesse L. Lasky had to say about it was that "York" would gross about six million dollars its first year . . . Nice if it would turn out to be a hit!

Armageddon-Approaches Note

Columbia

A late change in booking switches "Weekend in Havana" into the Columbia Theater this morning direct from its week at the Capitol.

This musical film is the latest of the vacation-travel folder films from the Twentieth Century-Fox Studios, adding the Cuban capital to an alluring collection that includes Rio, Buenos Aires, Sun Valley and Miami. Like its even more Southern counterparts, "Weekend in Havana" is in Technicolor and also boasts the warming personality of Carmen Miranda. That colorful creature is one of the truly vital portions of the musical.

Alice Faye, with songs to sing herself; John Payne, Cesar Romero, Cobina Wright, jr., George Barbier and Billy Gilbert are among the principals. The song numbers include "The Man with the Lollypop Song," "When I Love I Love," "Tropical Magic" and "The Nango."

A Seagoing Hedgehopper Bids His Gal Goodby!

BRENDA MARSHALL AND JAMES CAGNEY

believe it or not, manage their adieus in this fashion in a scene from the Warner Brothers production of "Captains of the Clouds," in which they are costarred. The caption writer insists that it is Miss Marshall up there waving and Jimmy piloting the ship. But we are publishing this picture solely for its technical value as a so-vivid contrast in horsepowers!

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Nov. 12.

Twentieth Century are feeling pretty friendly toward the Marine Corps at the moment. The picture "To the Shores of Tripoli," which is in Technicolor, calls for a whole Marine sequence, and they've been given the go-ahead by Washington to send a camera crew to Honolulu, with carte blanche for shots of the Marines on duty with the fleet. Taking no chances on trouble breaking loose in the Pacific, the studio's flying the crew over this week.

MARLENE DIETRICH

Producer J. R. McDonough certainly has a winner in that little Joan Carroll, who will fit perfectly into the role of Honesty in "Angel Face," Jean Beckett's swell story which Mary McCarthy has adapted for the screen. Joan plays the daughter of a doctor in a small town where George Washington once tied his horse up to a post—and put his stamp on the whole community. Can't you just see little Joan swinging down the street, living up to her name where she says to an old grouch-back, "My papa says you'd be a better man if you'd pay your doctor's bills!"

Metro have been making sheep's eyes at Director Arthur Lubin, who's made such a hit with the Abbott and Costello pictures, but he's true to Universal, and will direct Marlene Dietrich there in her next, "The Spoilers." . . . What goes on with all these virile stories being used as starring vehicles for women? Dietrich in "The Spoilers," Connie Bennett in "Wild Bill Hickock"—looks as if our "he-men" are folding up on us.

Which reminds me, there's a bunch of red-blooded cowboys in Victorville who're in a tough spot. Daily on her vacation up there Gale Sondergaard took her 6 a. m. dip in the ranch pool, so-o-o-o-o—two of the boys got their dander up and braved the icy pond with her. One got cramps, and the other is bedded with a terrible "code."

Time Marches on Department: Gangster Cesar Romero has to get rid of rival Dick Derr in "Gentlemen at Heart," but instead of taking him for a ride, merely gives him a free trip to Europe . . . Incidentally, Cesar has his new dressing room done to the teeth in red gin, jam trappings. Claims it was Alice Fay's idea, not his—all right, hiss . . . . Making the most of a bad thing, Carole Landis, between scenes on that picture, borrows the Klieg lights for an artificial sun bath.

Buddy Ebsen, second only to Step'n Fetchit in slow motion, is Hollywood's ace boat racer, took the prize at Santa Monica last Sunday. Says it's the only sport in which you can win lying down.

Director Robert Stevenson is in the doghouse. His wife, Anna Lee, had a special moth-proof closet built for her clothes, and during her absence, hubby cut holes right through the walls to make a tunnel for his miniature train!

RKO-Keith's

It was, to be sure, a shrewd bit of casting which put Deanna Durbin and Charles Laughton into the costarring roles of a film comedy. That this not exactly expected combination has caught on at RKO-Keith's is hardly surprising, however, where "It Started With Eve" begins a second week this morning.

This thoroughly charming Cinderella tale is wittily handled, thanks to the increasing comic gifts of Miss Durbin and the unbeatable cinema-sense of Laughton. She is the music student in New York haled into service by a likable young chap to impersonate his fiancee so his dying father can have a look at his son's bride-to-be. Son reckons without a vigorous father whom a pretty face can titivate and a determined young girl who has a way with her voice.

While the story may sound familiar in outline it is beguilingly played by all involved, but by Miss Durbin and the Messrs. Laughton and Robert Cummings in particular. Henry Koster's direction is swift and witty; the company further includes Margaret Tallichet, Guy Kibbee, Walter Catlett and Catherine Doucet.

Also on the Keith screen is a diverting "Information Please," with Boris Karloff being particularly civilized as the guest expert.

"Ice Follies"

With the ticket wickets working hard, "The Ice Follies of 1942" is bringing forth the oohs and aahs these nights at the Riverside Stadium. Only four nights and a Saturday matinee remain before the pretty gals and stalwart lads pack up their skates and clatter away.

While the current edition—the sixth—is in the traditional style of the series, comics vieing with a dashing chorus, the revue reveals once more the variety it's possible to pack into an ice show. Comedy, both whimsical as in the "Three Kittens" number, and slapstick in the sure style of Bobby Widholm's "Miss America;" brave derring-do in the fire leaps of Harris Legg; floating beauty in the waltz and conga numbers of the chorus, and general all 'round excitement in a nautical finale.

Among the favorites you'll find Evelyn Chandler, who, if ever anyone did, deserves the adjective "incomparable;" Frick and Frack, whose routine as completely new and quite as humorous; Heinie Brock's comedy; the Galbraith Brothers' suave soaring and the McKellen Brothers' neat football turn; Fran Claudet and her smart partner, Colton, and that smooth Swiss duo in the next-to-closing spot.

It's at Riverside for you to relish through Sunday evening.

LEONARD LYONS

Words to the Wise

New York, Nov. 12.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: Michael Redgrave, who was the leading man in your film, "The Lady Vanishes," and who also starred in A. J. Cronin's, "The Stars Look Down," is in New York now, wearing an ordinary British seaman's uniform. The movie star is a sailor aboard a warship now here . . . DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: Recently in referring to his defense assistant, Eleanor Roosevelt, Fiorello LaGuardia described her as "a part-time First Lady" . . . ABBOTT AND COSTELLO: Georgie Hale, now is negotiating with your agents about your returning to Broadway in the musical, "What This Country Needs," by Eddie Davis . . . MAURICE MAETERLINCK: Jules Bache, who is one year your senior, has just celebrated his eightieth birthday. His cake had the legend: "Eighty Years Around the World," by Jules Bache."

JOHN BARRYMORE

LORD HALIFAX: The reports concerning the termination of one-man-rule in Sarawak, after the current reign of the white rajah, are untrue. The Ranee of Sarawak, who just returned from her homeland, was in Leon and Eddie's the other night. She said that she's leaving for England, to ascertain whether Lady Inchcape, her daughter, will allow her 7-year-old son to be designated as heir-apparent . . . MAYOR LAGUARDIA: Mayor Tobin of Boston, is coming to New York this week to inspect your defense recreation set-up. He will try to create in Boston a similar theater-pool system of inviting uniformed men to occupy otherwise empty seats in every theater, stadium and auditorium . . . JOHN BARRYMORE: If you're well enough, you and Rudy Vallee will be costarred in a movie.'

OSCAR SERLIN: The newly reelected controller, Joe McGoldrick, offered a job to your general manager, Walter Fried, who once had been his pupil. Fried declined. "You were elected for only four years," he explained. "I'm working for 'Life With Father'" . . . ED FLYNN: After a long absence the team of Tommy Corcoran and Ben Cohen lunched with the President last week . . . JUDGE SAM LEIBOWITZ: The first issue of the new crime magazine, Confidential Detective Cases, will feature the story of District Attorney O'Dwyer, who once was a policeman. The O'Dwyer story will be illustrated by a series of posed photographs. The model in those photographs is "Lawrence Dunstan," your son.

BROADWAY ASSOCIATION: When Jack Dempsey was separated from his wife, the former Hannah Williams, she signed an agreement that she would not work in night clubs. Jack believed that singing in cafes is not commendable work for a mother of two children. The Dempseys now are happily reconciled. Last weekend Hannah brought their two young daughters to Dempsey's Broadway cafe. When the band played "I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire," the youngsters rushed to the microphone and accompanied the band . . . SIR GERALD CAMPBELL: The Duke of Windsor sent $600 to the Waldorf for distribution as tips to the help . . . DARRYL ZANUCK: Louis Golding, the noted British novelist, is going to Hollywood to write about Dunkirk.

COL. JAY C. FLIPPEN: Olsen, your predecessor in "Hellzapopin'," was given a quiet birthday party by his partner, Johnson, at 4 a. m. in Boston. After due complaints, the hotel manager finally moved the party to a large padded room in the building . . . EQUITY: After November 20, no actor will be permitted to entertain—even for a minute—in any night club in America without pay. This will terminate all "Celebrity Nights" throughout the country . . . DONALD NELSON: The jewelry manufacturers are pleading that 4700 tons of brass are all they need to keep 175,000 laborers from losing their jobs.' But the signs in Knudsen's outer office—which discourage the pleaders for priorities who must wait there before entering—supply one answer, "Will It Make More Tanks? Planes? Ships?"

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS: Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy, who will be costarred in M-G-M's "Women of the Year," were invited to broadcast for the Screen Actors Guild program—which is sponsored by a gasoline company. The stars decided that the broadcast would be a playlet in which they'd portray the roles of Gen. and Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant . . . The script was written for them—the story never touched upon before this by the historians of Broadway and Hollywood. At the last minute the sponsors sent a wire to Miss Hepburn, notifying that they had decided against broadcasting the story of the Grants. "It might offend our customers in the Southern States," was the explanation "Please wire alternate suggestion" . . . "Alternate suggestion," Miss Hepburn wired, "let's do story of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Lee."

Pix

Although since John Steinbeck wrote "The Grapes of Wrath" American eyes have been turned to troubles of wider magnitude, his luckless Oakies were so compellingly filmed by the masterful John Ford that their story remains a soundly human and moving one. The masterpiece of two seasons ago is being revived through Friday evening at the Pix Theature.

Henry Fonda plays the wandering Tom Joad, and never before or since has that actor approached the quality of understanding he brings to the role. Those hours of driving the truck from Oklahome to the promised land of California are splendidly moving, never slipping into that quag of monotony so likely in a story of this nature. Jane Darwell, as the questioning, dazed Ma Joad, too made hers a superlative characterization, having received an Academy Award for the finest supporting role of its season.

Anyone who missed this one won't want to let it get by again.

Civic Revives Satirical Hit

By Richard L. Coe

Miss Clare Boothe's trenchant and frequently unprintable remarks on our American Fascists (and who are they, Mrs. Luce?) serve the Civic Theater exceeding well in its current revival of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." While too many bombs have fallen since her satire first appeared, the laughs are loud and many and last evening's first nighters at the Wardman Park patently had them a merry time. What's more, there was a goodly lot of them.

The Civicers' production is, on the whole, a happy one, smooth running and speedily paced, commendable virtues in view of the rapidity with which this comedy replaced Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock" on its playing schedule. Their version, naturally, is the original one, a piece which has none of the obvious whitewashing of the screen musical it spawned. The story of the Bethany-Culpepper girl determined to right the wrongs done the Confederacy by appearing as Velvet O'Toole in the screen telling of That Book, may veil too thoroughly the author's attacks on Fascism, as she complains in her printed remarks on the play, but it's still a devious tale deftly handled.

Nancy Walker does an able, if not brilliant, job as the celebrated Cindy Lou. Of her associates, unquestionably the finest is William Zuckert as the scheming producer, complete with Brooklynese and suave "Hollywood" manner. Dorothy Faris is more than credible as Myra, and that's not the snide remark it might be taken for. Like Mr. Saroyan's Leone, she looks good. Selma Klein and George T. Buchan are surprisingly successful as the loquacious servants, always an awkward bit of casting whose reason lies in Miss Boothe's thesis of the play.

Leon Askin's direction is in the clipped spirit of the satire and Henry C. Pearson's settings are admirable, chiefly because it doesn't take all next week to change them. Others in the cast include Dick Sykes, Jerry Hess, Edward Stevlingson, Betty Rice, Austin Gattis, Cort Steen and Dudley Sadler.

"Kiss the Boys Goodbye" will remain on the Civic's playbills for three weeks, playing the Wednesday-through-Saturday schedule until the 29th.

Little

With uncanny timing, that admirable film of the Welsh mining injustices, "The Stars Look Down," again comes into the news at a time when our own coal situation is a major defense headache. Yesterday the picture began its second week at the Little Theater.

Dr. A. J. Cronin, who was so fortunate in the success of the film's treatment in his earlier "The Citadel," is equally blessed in this adaptation. Like his earlier dissection of the medical profession, "The Stars Look Down" is again concerned with the wrongs of a greedy management. The ambitious son of a long line of miners determines to study law, to win a seat in Parliament from which he can legislate for the people he calls his own. An unfortunate marriage complicates this yearning, but doesn't quash it.

Resourcefully directed by Carol Reed, who did such slick service for "Night Train," the Cronin picture is excellently cast, with Michael Redgrave outstanding in the leading role. Margaret Lockwood, Emlyn Williams and Nancy Price are the principals.

House Concurs In Increasing D. C. Police

The White House today will receive the bill adding 100 police to the District force December 1, following speedy House concurrence late yesterday in a Senate amendment to the measure.

The President's signature to the bill will permit increase of personnel to 1816 men at a cost of $120,333 to the District government for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The Senate amendment to the measure which originated in the House under the sponsorship of Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, merely reduced the cost from $130,625 to $120,333 due to the passage of time while the bill was under Senate consideration. It was unanimously passed by the Senate Monday.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, which conducted hearings on the bill in the Senate, said on the floor Monday that increased District revenues for this budget year will more than compensate for the amount spent in increasing the force.

The bill provides that $103,708 will be drawn from the District's general revenues and $16,625 from the local gasoline tax and motor vehicles fee to make up the cost of the increase.

First introduced in the House by Representative Cochran last August, the bill was an outgrowth of the Congressional investigation of the Metropolitan force which resulted in a shake-up of command. Superintendent of Police Edward Kelly has repeatedly requested more men, saying the present number is insufficient to protect District citizens effectively.

How Pictures Get Into The Post

Steps involved in getting a picture into The Washington Post will be portrayed in detail in an F Street window of the G. C. Murphy Co. store starting today and continuing until November 19.

All phases of the procedure will be illustrated in large pictures that will provide complete visibility for spectators. The "Big Bertha" camera used by Head Cameraman Hugh Miller in taking panorama shots of baseball and football action scenes will be on display in the window.

Adjoining this display will be a group of pictures taken from the Post Sunday magazine, Parade. Action shots, portrait studies and unusual shots will be on show.

Between the windows a United Press teletype machine will clack out news of the moment from 8 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., exactly as it is received in The Post wire room. The teletype machine will be arranged to permit full reading by those in front of the window.

The G. C. Murphy Co. store is on F Street between Twelfth and Thirteenth.

Bishop Freeman Leads Minnesota Service

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday delivered the sermon at services consecrating St. Mark's Episcopal Church as the Cathedral Church of the Diocese of Minneapolis, Minn.

Bishop Freeman was pastor of St. Mark's from 1910 to 1921, then became rector of Epiphany Church here. He was consecrated Bishop of Washington in 1923. He expects to return here during the latter part of the week.

6 More Circus Elephants Ill After Death of 10 From Poison

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 12.—Six more elephants were stricken ill today in the circus herd which already has lost ten by poisoning, and a private detective said it was a "clear case of mass murder" of animals.

Danville, Va., police reported detention of a former employe of the circus, Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey, but there was no apparent link between the arrest and the arsenic poison death of the elephants valued at $100,000.

The show played in Danville prior to the deaths of the ten elephants in Atlanta last week. The former employe, living in a shack near the city dump, was booked merely as "held for investigation."

Herbert Duval, circus business manager, said officials attached some significance to the fact that six of the poisoned elephants were "lead animals" in acts. He said some held this indicated a possibility the poisoning was deliberate.

Trouble plagued the show in another quarter today when one of the trains en route here from Macon, Ga., was delayed by a wreck in the Augusta rail yards. A switch engine bumped into the train, injured two employes slightly and knocked over two wagons.

A Macon, Ga., dispatch to the New York Daily News quoted Detective Edward Mullin on the "mass murder" statement and added he said it was an "inside job" and that an arrest would be made "within 48 hours wherever the circus is." Mullin is a Burns Detective Agency investigator.

Mullin said from 5 to 10 grams of arsenic were found in the bodies of four of the dead elephants. He said feed and drug stores were being checked in Danville, Charlotte, N. C., and Greenville, S. C., where the circus played before going to Atlanta, attempting to learn who may have bought arsenic in sufficient quantity to poison a herd of elephants.

Woman's Party Opens A Feminist Library

A feminist library—books on, by and for women—was opened and dedicated by the National Woman's Party yesterday afternoon on the 126th birthday anniversary of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, pioneer suffrage leader, with her granddaughter in attendance.

Mrs. Nora Stanton Barney, of New York City, the granddaughter, spoke briefly at the ceremony in the library which is located in the old coach house of the Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the Woman's Party, 144 B Street Northeast.

Luther H. Evans, chief assistant librarian of the Library of Congress, bringing a message from the librarian, Archibald MacLeish, pointed out the significance of a library "dedicated to placing the light of knowledge and wisdom upon injustices done and still being done to one-half of the human race."

In his talk Dr. Evans said that when a library is dedicated to the battle for progress in basic human relationships, there is the assurance that another stone is being laid to form the abode for the good life.

Among other special guests who spoke were Dr. St. George L. Sioussat, chief of the division of manuscripts, Library of Congress, and Dean Grace Hays Hiley, of the Washington College of Law.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, national chairman of the Woman's Party, presided and introduced the speakers.

Many Messages Of Greeting Received

Among messages received in connection with the dedication were greetings from Senator James M. Mead, of New York, Mrs. Stanton's State; Mrs. Emmeline-Pethick-Lawrence, noted suffragist leader with Emmeline Pankhurst and now the president of the World Woman's Party; Christobel Pankhurst, the daughter of Emmeline Pankhurst; Inez Haynes Irwin, Jeannette Marks, until recently holding the chair of English at Mount Holyoke; Representative Albert L. Vreeland, of New Jersey; Mary E. Wooley, president emeritus of Mount Holyoke College; Miss Alice Paul, founder of the National Woman's Party, and of the World's Woman's Party.

The library of 3000 volumes is built around a nucleus of books bequeathed to the Woman's Party by the late Mrs. Alva Belmont, who was its president for many years.

Oldest volume in the collection is dated 1720. It is "The Power of Love," a group of novelettes by a Mrs. Manley, published in England.

Dedication Timed For Anniversary

Dedication of the library was timed for the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Stanton because she was joint originator with Lucretia Mott of the "equal rights" movement. The National Woman's Party is working for an equal rights amendment to the Constitution.

Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, chairman of commemoration days of the Woman's Party, and a group of other leaders received the guests in the drawing room before the ceremony. Miss Mary Downey, who will be in charge of the new library, was introduced at the program.

B'nai B'rith Women Pledge Civilian Defense Cooperation

The Women's Supreme Council of B'nai B'rith has pledged the 50,000 membership of its 480 women's auxiliaries to cooperation with the Office of Civilian Defense, it was announced yesterday after the two-day council meeting at the Shoreham Hotel.

Action of the council followed an address by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., on the role of women in local, State and national civilian defense activities.

In adopting a national defense program, the B'nai B'rith women called for an intensification of cooperation with local defense councils and the United Service Organizations' welfare activities for men in the armed services, a broadening of B'nai B'rith service to the American Red Cross, continued cooperation with and contribution to responsible agencies engaged in providing aid to war victims and refugees, and an intensive program of citizenship education and Americanism.

Mrs. Lenore D. Underwood, of San Francisco, was reelected president of the council. Named to serve with her were: First vice president, Mrs. Rose Turner, Chicago; second vice president, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, Washington; third vice president, Mrs. Abram Orlow, Philadelphia; secretary, Mrs. Ida Cook Farber, New York City; treasurer, Mrs. Albert Woldman, Cleveland.

Expenditures of $126,000 during the past year for war relief, refugee aid, scholarship loans, community welfare, Red Cross and educational projects were reported.

Membership in the B'nai B'rith women's auxiliaries tripled in the last three years, growing from 17,000 in 1938 to 49,750 in 1941.

Attending the meeting in addition to the newly elected officers were: Mrs. Pat Roth, St. Louis; Mrs. Francis A. Winer, Boston; Mrs. Bessie Copland, Spokane; Mrs. Sol Goldstrom, Miami; Mrs. Ethel Osri, Chicago; Mrs. Morris Steinhorn, Buffalo, president district No. 1; Mrs. Rebekah P. Hyman, Cincinnati, president district No. 2; Miss Etta R. Berry, Newark, N. J., president district No. 3; Mrs. Helen Smook, Oakland, Calif., president district No. 4; Mrs. Jennie Rotfort, Miami, president district No. 5, and Mrs. Benjamin Samuels, Chicago, president district No. 6.

Soroptimists Name Nominations Head

Mrs. Marie Rogers was appointed yesterday by Mrs. Loraine Leese Good, president of the Soroptimist Club, to head the committee for nominating 1942 officers of the club.

At its luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel, it was announced that Miss Agnes Cady had been appointed to the same committee by the board of directors, and Mrs. Vesta Eales was named to the committee by the membership.

The club voted to send packages of tea to Soroptimist Clubs in England as Christmas greetings. Miss Helen Barnhart, chairman of the civics committee announced plans for the club's Christmas party, for which arrangements will be completed at a committee meeting Tuesday evening at the Willard.

Chief of Chaplains To Address Chapter

The Very Rev. William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains, will address the Duchesne Chapter of the Chaplains Aid Association at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, 1719 Massachusetts Avenue, Monday at 4 o'clock.

This organization is sponsored by the Children of Mary of the Convent of the Sacred Heart. Members of the chapter meet at the convent three times a week for work in connection with the chaplains' aid.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Conduct Nov. 27 Meeting

Herbert Agar, editor of Louisville Courier-Journal, will make the principal address and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will preside at the open meeting of the Conference on Public Discussion Methods to be held in the Department of Commerce Auditorium on the evening of November 27 on the theme, 'Our Democratic Freedoms—How Can We Protect Them?"

The conference November 27-29 is under the sponsorship of the women's college clubs of Washington and the international relations committee of the Washington branch of the American Association of Uniersity Women, in consultation with the Office of Civilian Defense.

A group of panel speakers will take part in the open meeting.

Junior Women Sponsor Dinner

The Junior Women's Society of the First Congregational Church is sponsoring a birthday dinner tonight at 6:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Glenn Witherspoon as general chairman.

Know Designers' Tricks In Selecting Your Hats

Headgear Expert Tells How to Shop for Shapes That Flatter

By Ida Jean Kain

UNLESS you happen to be among the minute feminine minority who think nothing of paying $35 to have a hat especially made to flatter your face and shape, you will no doubt be keenly interested in knowing some of the high priced designers' tricks. Then you can shop for them—and maybe get the same effect for $4.98.

My source of this exclusive information is a leading hat designer, maker of headgear for leading stage and film stars and some of the more substantial members of what is called cafe society.

First law of shopping for millinery, I'm told, is to try the hat on before a full-length mirror. Stand up and study the lines to see how it jibes with your silhouette. Forget about the color and trimming. It's the shape of your hat, face and figure that matters most.

What You Can Wear

If you have a broad pair of shoulders but your head is fairly small, you probably can't go in for the skull caps favored by the Duchess of Windsor. You need a hat that makes your head look larger and will give you better proportion. If you have a good size head and narrow shoulders, a small hat is fine.

In case you are short, stay away from the giant brims that make you look wider and from the top-heavy effects. Stick to hats that are neither exaggeratedly large nor small, the ones that are in keeping with your own size and carry the eye upward. You have to be tall and slim, and have almost classic features to get away with straight severe wide brims.

If your face is round, don't try to wear a closely wrapped turban or a hat with a brim that has no break. For you, soft malleable materials that allow for a crush brim or a strategically placed dip in the brim are best. They tend to detract from the width and roundness of your face.

Oval Faces Are Lucky

But if your face is long, keep away from the lines that will emphasize its length—the conical crowns and high center focal points. Your turban should have either heaviness on top or side interest. Nose veils are especially good on the long face. Besides, they are intriguing.

You may be so lucky as to have an oval face. Then focus attention on it, the designers say, with a parachute beret, draped down in back, and let your widow's peak show.

There are more fine feathers in evidence than at any time since the Gay Nineties and they are as flattering as veils. They can be used to suggest height for the wide face or width for the long face. The only point about feathers is that they demand no fuss in the hairdo.

With all those tips you ought to be able to go out and find a hat so well suited to your face and figure that it will look as though it had been made for you and it may even please your husband!

BEANIE—To wear this skull cap type favored by the Duchess of Windsor, you must have a normally proportioned head.

CLOCHE—Beware of this type if you have a long face. It is for the round, regular featured type of countenance.

PARACHUTE—If you have the ideal oval face, play it up by wearing a beret, low swooping in back. The turban also fits this type.

Treasured British Foods Offered by Relief Society

CHRISTMAS is seven weeks away yet the cheery atmosphere of the approaching season prevails at the British War Relief Society Shop at 1217 Connecticut Avenue, Northwest. The Queen Elizabeth Chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Roy Lowe, is holding a sale which includes many a food dear to the heart of all true Londoners.

In front of a wall strung with gay red stockings is a counter spread with Christmas cookies made from treasured British recipes. The cookies include the jumbles so dear to the heart of all true Londoners, sand tarts, Scotch short bread, South African cookies, cheese straws and a number of kinds more familiar to our American palates. There are also marmalades, jellies, South African mustard pickle and a special condiment sauce guaranteed to be as hot as the hottest English mustard.

The Society is not only offering the foods for sale but also a number of British recipes. Typical of the recipes they are offering are the following ones. Mrs. Frank Halliday has contributed her recipe for Scotch Short Bread. The recipe follows:

Scotch Short Bread

Combine 2½ cups flour, sifted three times, with 1 cup butter, ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix well. Roll out about ¾ inch thick and bake for about 30 minutes in a high sided pan to prevent the bread from browning.

Mrs. James Thorpy has made jumbles from the following recipe. These cookies are crisp and spicy and make an excellent tea cake and children too delight in having them for snacks with their milk.

Jumbles

Put ¾ cup butter, ¾ cup sugar and ½ cup molasses in a saucepan and heat slowly until blended. Remove from heat and add 2 teaspoons ginger, then stir in 1½ cups sifted flour, blending until smooth. Drop by small spoonfuls on greased baking sheet in moderate oven, 375 degrees, and bake 6 to 8 minutes or until they stop bubbling. Remove from oven and let cool a little. Then roll each cooky around the handle of a spoon as it is lifted from the baking sheet. Place them on baking rack and let stand until crisp. Approximate yield 5 dozen jumbles.

Sixtyish Widow Is Marrying Old Family Friend In Private Wedding; As They Possess Household Goods in Quantity, What Gift Should Her Son Give?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A young man of my acquaintance has asked advice on the following problem, which I am referring to you for answer: His mother is to be remarried soon. (His father has been dead for some years.) She is marrying an old family friend (they are both in their sixties); and the wedding will be quite informal and private. Only a few close relatives will be present.

The son is at a loss to know what to do about a wedding present. Should he give a personal gift to his mother? Or personal gifts to both the bride and bridegroom? Or would it be better form to give an impersonal gift to both? Household things, such as linen and silver, they have in quantity. However, they will travel a good deal, and I am wondering if something along that line would be suitable. What suggestions can you make as to a gift? And to whom should it be given? An early reply will be appreciated. SANDRA C.

DEAR SANDRA C.: Sentimental tradition decrees that wedding gifts be given the bride (and not the bridegroom!) and such is the practice usually followed. However, because many newlyweds launch their home making undertaking on the proverbial "shoestring," the custom of contributing gifts of a "household" character developed. This was the method chosen by kind friends to signify their benevolent interest in the success of the enterprise. It was their thought to ease the financial burdens of the newlyweds, by adding some bit of luxury or creature comfort to their household supplies, that would be equally useful to, and mutually enjoyed by, bride and bridegroom. Which explains the preponderance of linens, silver, crystal, china and expensive bric-a-brac seen in the typical bridal array of wedding gifts.

Because your friend's mother has no need of such things, and probably would prefer (womanlike) to personally choose the paraphernalia she will want for consistent traveling, it seems to me the most appropriate gift her son could give her would be a piece of jewelry—as valuable and handsome as he can afford. And that the most sentimental and gallant gesture he could make would be to signify his approval of the bridegroom by giving him a similar gift—such as expensive cuff links or a set of shirt studs.

About the mother's gift: It might be matching clips,—made of precious metal set with precious or semi-precious stones; and so designed as to be worn as a brooch. Or a pair of earrings, (if she favors such adornment), set with her favorite stones. Or (if money is no item) a necklace of real pearls,—supposing they would "become her type." Or a solid gold or antique bracelet, with a filial tribute inscribed inside the band.

Whether the son lives apart from his mother or with her, his gift should be personally handed to her, some time before the wedding. And he should present his gift to her husband-to-be in the same manner. One evening when Mr. Blank is calling on his mother, he (the son) might drop in on them with the simple explanation, "Here is a little wedding present I got for YOU, sir. Can't have mom stealing the whole show, you know." M. H.

How One Wife Restored "Accord" to Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been reading with great interest the recent series of articles published in your column, on the subject of maintaining zestful compatibility in marriage. And now, I would like to add a few words of my own.

During the last year, the complete accord which had previously been maintained between my husband and myself, during our several years' marriage, started to wane. My husband became cross and irritable. Nothing I did seemed right. Everything we did and said was at cross purposes. My every attempt to get to the root of our difficulty, by talking things over with my husband, proved useless.

Since attempts to "talk things right again" failed, I decided to try a new tack,—which would either renew our former accord or else give me a defense against the hurt which the existing state of affairs was dealing me. Putting aside my naturally warm, friendly, chatty, "forward" manner,—which my husband was accustomed to,—I became cool and remote. On drives, and when sitting around in the evening, I let him start all conversations. And my replies were brief and quiet.

Since he had been impatient with all my suggestions for entertainment, etc., I just passively went along where he wanted to go. And, whereas, I had previously got angry and gone places alone when he growled about going with me, I now laughed and made him come with me anyhow. Our personal relationship which had once been exceedingly sweet and close, was tending to become a source of mutual frustration. Perhaps this was because I had always yielded, regardless of my mood. Now, I quietly repulsed him when I felt like it. In other words, my whole attitude underwent a complete about-face.

It was a difficult performance, and my husband never guessed it was deliberate. Within a few days, he was asking me what was wrong. And in a few weeks, we were enjoying a second honeymoon. I attribute the success of my experiment to the fact that we are very sensitive to each other's moods; and that I didn't wait until he was "set" in his "take-you-for-granted" attitude before attempting a drastic remedy.

I hope that my experience may benefit some other wife, and I would like to add a few words of warning. 1. Never take your husband completely for granted. Let him know you think he is grand; that you are proud to be his wife; and that you are positive he is going to be a great success. 2. Defer to your husband's wishes whenever possible,—without sacrificing personal identity or honest convictions. 3. Keep family problems to yourself, or take them to an impersonal consultant whose business it is to advise. Never discuss family quarrels with friends or neighbors. A family quarrel privately settled is dead and buried; whereas one confided to an "intimate" outsider often rises again to haunt you.

4. If you have children, let your husband participate as much as possoble in the children's care from their earliest infancy. My husband, for instance, studied infant-care books with me; learned to bathe, dress and even feed our infants; and occasionally did the "baby wash" while I was still convalescent. His interest in his children grew in proportion as he took "first hand" care of them. And he plays "rough house" with his sons today in a manner they adore. They dash laughing and shrieking to greet him with hugs and kisses when he comes home at night. And can any wife or mother conceive of a sweeter sight than a bond of perfect accord between her husband and their children? Sincerely,

YOUNG MOTHER.

George II of Greece To Visit Capital Soon

Title Loving Members of Society Are Looking Up His Background

By Hope Ridings Miller

With King George II of Greece expected to be in Washington soon—before the end of this month, in fact—title-loving members of Capital society have spent a lot of time lately studying up on the background of a man who is sure to be widely feted during his visit.

Hope Ridings Miller

My special diplomatic spy tells me that members of the Greek Legation staff will announce, almost any day now, the exact date of the King's arrival; that he is due here week after next, and that accompanying him will be the Greek Prime Minister, Manuel Tsouderos, and Prince Paul, the king's brother and heir apparent.

King George is still in London, so probably he will be coming to this country by clipper; but whether from Lisbon, or directly from London, I don't know. Anyway, with his arrival imminent, there's no time like the present to tell about all I know about the man who styles himself "King of the Hellenes," and has had his royal hands full for more years than he would care to count.

Now in his early fifties (he was born in July, 1890, at the royal villa near Athens), he has been in the thick of violent turmoil for as long as he can remember. His grandfather, George I, was slain by an assassin at Salonika in 1931; his own father, the late King Constantine, was twice deposed, and finally died in exile, and his brother, King Alexander, who succeeded to the throne before him, was killed by the bite of a pet monkey. No wonder the throne of Greece has been called "the unluckiest in Europe," particularly since King George himself also was banished from his country, and spent a pinch-penny exile in London from 1923 to 1935.

Then, however, he won the dictinction of being the only post-war European monarch who staged a "comeback" after having once been deposed; and the fact that he is once more in London is at least not a repetition of the chain of incidents leading to his 12-year exile.

He Was Son-in-Law of Queen Marie

At the age of 32 he became King, after his brother had died and his father has abdicated. Eighteen months earlier he had married Princess Elizabeth, daughter of Queen Marie of Rumania, and the two-faced a difficult job from the moment they became crowned heads. A strong-armed cabinet had formed a virtual dictatorship, and the new King was neither permitted to resign nor accorded any of the powers of a sovereign.

Refusing to be merely a puppet of the cabinet, King George tried to stage a counterrevolution. It failed, and on December 17, 1923, the National Assembly ordered him and Queen Elizabeth out of the country. But even though Greece was proclaimed a republic, the deposed King refused to sign a formal deed of abdication, and in a parting letter to the council he stated significantly that he was going away "for the time being."

Curiously enough, while the King was gone, his popularity increased amazingly. The new order changed . . . yielding place to old; the republic was abolished by a proclamation of Field Marshal eorge ("The Thunderbolt") Kondylis, who declared himself Regent and telegraphed George to fly back to Athens by the next plane. But the King was not one to leap into another hopeless turmoil. He refused to return unless there was a national plebiscite demanding his restoration. Kondylis negotiated that in record time, and King George headed homeward. Not, however, with Queen Elizabeth. Shortly after his exile in London began, she told her husband that she prefered life in Rumania to a mere existence in London, and a few years later a Bucharest court granted the divorce.

"Equality . . . and Justice for All"

"Let the past be relegated to oblivion. There should be absolute equality and justice for all," said the King in his proclamation of gratitude to his people; and then he set to work restoring order to his country. Announcing a general amnesty freeing political prisoners, he soon discovered that he had aroused the ire of Marshal Kondylis. But the King pursued his policy, and when Kondylis resigned ina rage, Gen. John Metaxas was given the three key posts in the government and became virtually vice king. The two working hand in glove managed to bring order out of the chaos of supercharged Greek politics.

Then came the current war, and King George soon found himself in the dual role of monarch and premier, calling upon his countrymen to defend their nation "to the very end." A few weeks later, the Greek government-in-exile was established in London, and there it is today.

Washington hostesses, hoping to entertain the Greek King during his visit needn't bother one minute about which wines they serve. His Majesty is a teetotaler, and his favorite beverages are tonic water, ginger beer and ginger ale . . . A great favorite in London society back in the days of his exile, King George today is a busy man who prefers to spend his few spare moments reading and listening to radio short wave broadcasts . . . A bit on the gayer side is Prince Paul, who is fond of dancing, takes a drink occasionally and was quite a favorite with the ladies before he decided to marry and settle down as the husband of Princess Fredericka, granddaughter of the former German Kaiser.

Envoy and Mrs. Scotten Are Guests

Dominican Republic's Minister and Wife Are Hosts to Couple

By Carolyn Bell

"We have 10 acres, you know—and that's quite a job," chuckled Mrs. Robert Scotten, wife of the United States Minister to the Dominican Republic, yesterday afternoon. Having moved into the new, rambling Legation in Trujillo City last spring, the Scottens are now busy landscaping the place. "And if you have ever tried to make flowers grow on coral reef, you know what we have to contend with," she continued.

Party Honors Her And Minister

Mrs. Scotten (who looks like a miniature Lynn Fontaine) discussed her plans at the party given in her honor as well as the Minister5s at the Dominican Legation yesterday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock. Hosts were those two attractive additions to the Diplomatic Corps, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Troncoso. Wearing an upswept coiffure, Senora de Troncoso was turned out in a chic floor-length black frock with a peplum of black sequins. A cluster of orchids completed the ensemble. Mrs. Scotten wore a trim black ensemble and a tiny matching hat with a snood. Up here on a brief visit, the Scottens will leave shortly for the Dominican Republic.

An early arrival at yesterday's party was Senora de Espil, who wore a mink coat thrown casually over her black ensemble. She chatted with Mrs. "Larry" Duggan, who has just returned from Florida, and sporting a tan to prove it. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson came in dressed for dinner in a long kelly green frock. She stopped to talk with Col. Winant Johnson who was towering above the throng. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, wore a silver fox jacket over her black outfit.

Busy as a bee all afternoon, seeing that guests were happily situated, was Senora de Vega, and not far away was her husband, the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation. Senora de Vega wore a cluster of robrum lilies on her black frock. The specialty of the house, daiquiris frappes, were popular during the afternoon vying only with the piping hot empanads.

Senorita Peden Wears Red Frock

Up from the Dominican Republic on a visit, was pretty Senorita Hilma Pepen, who wore a bright red frock at the party yesterday. She chatted with the Second Secretary of the Legation, Dr. Horacio Vicioso, whose mother, Senora de Vicioso, also was there.

An impromptu bar had been set up in the sunroom and the table in the dining room, laden with all manner of sandwiches and cakes, was centered with a huge bouquet of Easter lilies. Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, was accompanied by her daughter,

Landscaping Found To Be Big Problem In Trujillo City

Senorita Cristina Michels, who wore a pale green frock. A lovely silver fox jacket was worn over Senora de Michel's ensemble. Mrs. J. J. Mack, in a burnt orange feather hat, chatted with Senora de Munilla, who reports that her husband, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, is observing maneuvers in South Carolina.

Dr. Rowe Among Those Present

In deep conversation on the peppermint striped couch were the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, and Senora Amelia de Castillo Ledon, who is here to attend the meetings of the Inter-American Commission of Women. She wore a turquoise turban wrapped about her head, the color being repeated in her brown frock.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, of the Pan American Union, was there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Daniels, of the State Department; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Minister of Guatemala, Adrian Recinos; Dr. and Mrs. Charles McEnery; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras, she wearing a hat decked with red feathers; the Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. Leon DeBayle; the Minister of Haiti and Mme. Dennis, Mme. Espaillat and several dozen others.

Mrs. McCreery Given Dinneer By Percy Blair

A dinner for 66, which is a large private party, even in Washington, went on the calendar last night, when Percy Blair entertained in honor of Mrs. Richard McCreery, who has come from her home in California to spend the winter here. The party took place at 2118 Massachusetts Avenue. Guests were seated at two large flower-bedecked tables, which ran the length of the dining room.

Among those present were a number of Philadelphians, old friends of the host, who had come to Washington especially for the party. Several others from out of town also mingled in the distinguished gathering which was accented with diplomatic, official and residential celebrities.

From the Diplomatic Corps came the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, and the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom. Former Ambassador William Bullitt was there; also Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, wife of the retiring Minister to Sweden; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, and Provost Marshal General, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion.

Still others there included Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Perrin, Donna Julia Brambilla, Mme. Kaathovan, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Clarence Hewes, Myron Hofer, Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair and many more.

Party Follows Guild Concert

With the Baron and Baroness van Boetzelaer, of the Netherlands Legation climaxing the evening by a supper party after the Chamber Music Guild Concert last night and numerous others entertaining at dinners beforehand, many of the audience found themselves caught up in a whirligig from early evening until the wee small hours this morning.

Among those who entertained at dinner before the concert, which took place at the Almas Temple at 8:30 last evening, were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, whose guests included Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Elliott Felkin and Winthrop Crane. Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams were also hosts before the concert, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger.

Last evening's concert was the second in this season's series and featured Evelyn Swarthout, wife of the manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, as soloist. LaSalle Spiere played his own compositions of five songs taken from the poems of Edgar Allan Poe, which were sung by Abrasha Robofsky, baritone.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Minister of Paraguay, Dr. Juan Jose Soler, addressed Latin-American diplomats and outstanding Government officials last evening at the Pan American Union, on the subject of "Neutrality in America."

The Swedish Counselor and Mme. Tor Hugo Wistrand entertained at an informal dinner last evening.

Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies entertained at a luncheon yesterday in her home on Massachusetts Avenue in honor of her two house guests, her sister, Mrs. Knight Cochran, of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Arthur Rand, of Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege have moved into a Georgetown house which they recently remodeled at 1235 Thirty-third Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warner are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Barry, on November 11 at Doctor's Hospital. Mr. Warne ris vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Mrs. Gray Zalinski, of Atlanta, Ga., is in Washington for a two-week visit with friends here. She has made it a habit to visit Washington each spring since her husband retired here several years ago and they went to make their home in the South. Her present stay is just an extra "in between visit." She is staying at the Mayflower, where she and Mr. Zalinski lived for several years.

Col. and Mrs. Francis A. Englehart are here from Memphis, Tenn., and are stopping at the Martinique.

Mrs. Pauline Sharp announces the marriage of her daughter, Pauline Downer Hagood, to Charles Robert Bast on February 9, 1941. The bridegroom is stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Hillis Morris' Parents to Give Tea in Her Honor

Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris have issued invitations to a tea in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Hillis Reid Morris, on Saturday, November 22. The party will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock at The Lindens, the Morris home at 2401 Kalorama Road.

Miss Morris will also make a bow to society at the Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillion on December 1, and she will be feted at a dance to be given by her parents on December 22.

Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun Hosts at Dinner at Embassy

If there wasn't a bit of confusion around the Turkish Embassy last evening, it is probably because there never is when the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun are entertaining. Certainly, when you have two couples by the same name—and that name is Diamantopoulos, you might expect some slight misunderstanding as to who was who, and where each one was to sit.

The pair involved were the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos and the former Greek Minister to Russia and Mme. Diamantopoulos, who are making an extended visit in Washington. Given name of the envoy here is, as you probably know, Cimon; while the former envoy is Christo, but since first names rarely go on place cards—and didn't last night—you can't depend on them to clear up any such puzzle. There is the little matter, however, of current members of the Diplomatic Corps outranking those who are former members; so at an embassy party, when all guests are diplomats, there is not much danger of confusion—no matter how many guests have the same name. So last night's party went off with the usual smoothness guests expect at the Turkish Embassy, and the fact that four people by the same name were present caused only amusement; certainly no confusion.

The Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante were ranking guests at the dinner. Others there, in addition to the four already mentioned, were the Colombia Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; the British Counselor and Mrs. A. K. Helm, the Greek Counselor and Mme. Depasta, and Thomas Burke, of the State Department, and Mrs. Burke.

Mrs. Fulton Fetes New Arrivals

Mrs. Harry R. Fulton entertained yesterday at the Army-Navy Country Club in honor of Mrs. James MacFarlane, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Mrs. J. Clyde Marquis, who is making her home in Washington, having recently arrived from Rome, Italy, where Mr. Marquis was chairman of the International Institute of Agriculture.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Lorain Anderson, Mrs. Wesley Buchanan, Mrs. Charles Cairns, Mrs. J. Clifford Duer, Mrs. Donald Earll, Mrs. William Foster, Miss Eleanor Fitts, Mrs. E. B. Gibson, Mrs. H. A. Haywood, Mrs. Grosvenor Jones, Mrs. S. M. Kraus, Mrs. R. E. La Force, of Kansas City; Mrs. E. L. Myers, Mrs. T. A. Wadden, Mrs. Mark Allen Watson, Mrs. Clyde Warburton, Mrs. William T. Willett, Mrs. Carroll L. Mann, of Raleigh, N. C., and Mrs. Warren R. Garrett, of New York City. The latter two were weekend house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fulton.

Cappels Honor Carlos Salzedo And Wife at Reception

By Martha McLean

How he can be the world's leading harpist and still list practice as the thing he does least is a mystery left unsolved by Carlos Salzedo who was guest of honor at a reception yesterday afternoon at the charming Georgetown house of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cappel.

But how practice could be one of the things he has time to do least is more easily explained. Mr. Salzedo himself has that dynamic kind of personality which makes dark, small, artistic men so sought after, and he also has a very pretty wife who also plays the harp and whose clothes he always helps select. But to top his manifold extra-curricular activities, his fingers cannot only pluck the harp strings but can make pictures with a typewriter, too.

He is particularly proud of an armory scene with flags and guns and red roof which he turned out one rainy afternoon.

The Salzedos arrived yesterday especially to attend the Cappel reception and are staying on tonight, of course, for the Salzedo ensemble performance in Constitution Hall, which is the third in the Cappel Concert Guild series.

With a bit of the license party conversation allows, Mr. Salzedo declared there is nothing he would rather do than select his wife's clothes. He really enjoys it. He got started soon after they were married, he says, when she came home after a shopping trip one day and displayed her loot. Some, he magnanimously let her keep, but the others "had to go." She asked why. "Because they are awful," he said. If the simple black gown she had on yesterday with its full taffeta skirt and very high-necked velvet bodice was an example of his taste, it must be admitted it is good. For contrast she wore a single large brooch of brilliants and a tiny lace handkerchief peeked out at her wrist.

To picture her seated at a harp was a pleasant thought, and as Miss Evelyn Davis suggested, "all she would need would be a halo." Theatrical-minded Miss Davis said this would be easily arranged with a single spot—amber.

There was no time to ask Rene Le Roy, who came in later, to share honors with Salzedos, why a flautist is not a flutist, so that puzzle over the instrument he plays so well must remain another mystery.

The Cappels' home is one of the Christmas card kind. As such it is small, and there were many guests, which only made it all the cosier. Helen, the Cappels' young daughter, looked fresh and sweet in a white bouffant dress, and acting as doorman was young Dan, who's cheery young "Good night!" sent the guests on their way into the brisk evening air.

Among the guests invited were Albert Rogers, Miss Mabel Turner, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Dr. and Mrs. Karel Chermenke, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittal, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lambe, Richard S. Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Barnes, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Spinache, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tyler, Mme. Tamara Dnetrieff, Mr. and Mrs. Millard Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Heine, Capt. and Mrs. Taylor Branson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Water, Mr. and Mrs. George Blackwell, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. George Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Paulin, John Thacher, Miss Mary Cryden and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richards.

Air Honeymoon Of Browns Ends Today

Ensign and Mrs. Thaddeus H. Brown, jr., will return today from a flying honeymoon to Columbus, Ohio, following their marriage in Warrenton, Va., on Monday, a marriage that came as a surprise to their many friends here. The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth Simpson Kampmann, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson Kampmann, of Philadelphia. She has been making her home at the St. Regis in New York City for several years.

Mary Gruman Only Attendant

Ensign Brown is the son of Mrs. Thad Brown, of Wesley Heights, and the late Col. Brown, who was for many years a member of the Federal Communications Commission, serving part of the time as chairman. He also served as secretary of state of Ohio.

It was a simple ceremony and the bride had as her only attendant Miss Mary Gruman, of this city, a room-mate from Smith College. James J. Davis, jr., served as best man.

Bride Graduate Of Smith College

The bride, who made her debut in Philadelphia, is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Heilsley Weaver, of Maroeve, near Philadelphia. She attended Knox preparatory school and was graduated from Smith College. She is the sister of Robert Simpson Kampmann, of Philadelphia.

Ensign Brown, who is with the public relations office of the Navy Department, was graduated from Princeton and Harvard Law University. At Princeton he was a member of the Charter Club, and at Harvard he was associated with the Holmes Club.

Visitor to Leave Soon

Miss Mary Spunt, who is being widely entertained here, will leave on Sunday for New York with her mother, Mme. Maurice Elzear. They came here several weeks ago from Shanghai, China, and plan to return to the Orient late in December. Mme. Elzear's husband is a French banker. While here they are the guests of Commander and Mrs. Charles Windsor at Wardman Park Hotel

Embassy Staff Fetes Fragosos

Honoring the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, A. Boulitreau Fragoso, and Mme. Fragoso, the staff of the Embassy, headed by the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham last night.

Mr. Fragoso will leave with his wife for Rio de Janeiro November 23, sailing on the Argentina for the Brazilian capital. He will be assigned to the staff of the minister of foreign affairs for a two-year tour of duty. Tonight, the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Pardo will fete them at a dinner and Saturday the Embassy staff led by the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins will entertain at a luncheon in their honor.

Mrs. Barbey Fetes Sister-in-Law At Luncheon

Mrs. Daniel E. Barbey entertained at a luncheon at the Army-Navy Town Club yesterday in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry Barbey, of Portland, Oreg. The visitor is a house guest of Capt. and Mrs. Barbey and has been here about ten days. She will leave sometime today to return to her home on the West Coast.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Randall Jacobs, Mrs. Kelly Turner, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. Edmund Pendleton, Mrs. E. S. Earnhardt, Mrs. Paul Hylant, Mrs. Ralph Dodge, Mrs. Thomas Watson, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Mrs. G. A. Seitz, Mrs. John Mahoney, Mrs. James Twohy, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Brent Young, Mrs. Frederick Weigester, Mrs. Curtis Shears and Mrs. James Ord.

Guests Plan Bazaar at Tea

It was definitely a gathering for a cause when Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in the second-floor drawing room of the legation on Sixteenth Street. Conversation centered around one subject—plans for the Yugoslav Bazaar which will be opened December 1 by Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice.

Mme. Fotitch, wearing a casual aquamarine cardigan over her black satin dress, pointed out to her guests samples of the articles that will be sold at the bazaar—cunning gingerbread figurines, beautifully embroidered peasant blouses and gay pincushion dolls, to mention only a few. Mme. Burya, wife of the Military and Air Attache of the legation, who is making a number of the articles herself, assisted Mme. Fotitch at the tea table which was set up in the hall.

Mrs. Charles McNary was the first guest to arrive and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman brought with her Mme. Grouitch, widow of the former Yugoslav Minister to London and Washington. Mme. Grouitch fascinated the group around her with harrowing tales of her experiences during the bombing of Belgrade. Miss Pauletta Guffey, all in black, chatted with Mrs. Frank Simonds, who was wearing a green hat with her black suit. Mrs. Frederick Merrill, who matched her light blue wool suit with a downswept felt hat, discussed benefit plans with Mrs. Howell Moorhead, who set off her black tailleur with a leopard muff and tippet. Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, whose bright blue chapeau matched the insets in the sleeves of her black frock, and Miss Alice Dodge, chairman of the American Friends of Yugoslavia Committee, saw that everyone met Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, who is chairman of the coming event.

Dr. Jacquelin's Party Honors The Potters

Most of the guests at a cocktail party given by Dr. Dorothy Grant Jacquelin at her Chastleton apartment had once lived or worked in Geneva, Switzerland, and have names prominent in international work. And, ironically, in these troublous times the date Dr. Grant chose for the gathering was Armistice Day.

Honor guests at the party were Prof. and Mrs. Pitman Benjamin Potter, who were recently married here. Mrs. Potter, who has many friends in Washington, was Miss Margaret Hardy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles O. Hardy. Dr. Hardy is on the staff at the Brookings Institution. Prof. Potter, who is an authority on international law and organization, resided until a few months ago in Geneva, where he was professor at the graduate school for international studies and director of the Geneva Research Center. He is now doing research at Brookings.

Both Dr. Jacquelin and Mrs. Potter took their doctor's degrees in economics at the graduate school in Geneva. Among the guests were Prof. and Mrs. Carl Remer, he heads the Far Eastern division of Col. Donovan's information office, and Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, who is a prominent speaker here and abroad and who is now working on a project for world organization after the present war. Dr. Gustav Rohen y Galvez, who is connected with the International Labor Office in Geneva and the Pan American Union here, was there with Mrs. Rohen y Galvez. Also present were Prof. and Mrs. William Elliott, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Piquet, Dr. and Mrs. Harold V. V. Fay, Dr. and Mrs. Allen Buchanan, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Gettell, Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Egbert, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Conn, Mrs. Helen Hay Greeley, Miss Wilma Lester, Miss Martha Marine, Miss Daphne Fay, Miss Emily Ericsson, Miss Marjorie Ericsson, Miss Jane Braucher, Dr. Benjamin Wallace, Dr. Edward Dawson, Gardner Youngman, Earl Lee Kelly, Ira B. Cross, jr., and Frank Gonet.

Mrs. Bromwell Gives Luncheon For Mme. Grouitch

Mrs. Charles Bromwell entertained at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mme. Grouitch, widow of the former Yugoslav Minister to London and Washington, who is visiting in the Capital.

Among the guests were Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. Alexander Legare, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Sydney Trowman, Mrs. Sterling Lacy and Mrs. Randolph H. Miner.

Mrs. Stewart Home, Gives Party Today

Mrs. Gustay L. Stewart, jr., has returned from New York and will be hostess with Mrs. English Gordon, at a party this afternoon at her home on R Street after 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Stewart, who is the former Ruth Hitchcock, is the daughter of the late Senator Gilbert Hitchcock.

Mrs. Van Deusen Will Be Honored

Mrs. O. W. McNeese will present Mrs. Donald Van Deusen as her guest-author at the Friday forenoon book reviews held every week at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. Van Deusen, who was Delia Champlin, a well-known journalist in Grand Rapids, Mich., has moved from her home in Hudson, N. Y., to be here in Washington, where her husband has been called "for the duration."

"Murder Bi-Carb" and "The Garden Club Murders" are two of her best-known mystery stories and she is now working on another. Mrs. Van Deusen is also one of the founders and promoters of the Berkshire Musical Festivals at Stockbridge, Mass.

Daughter Is Born To the W. A. Todds

Capt. and Mrs. William A. Todd, jr., announce the birth of a daughter, Anne Lee, on Friday, November 7.

Mrs. Todd and her son, Billy, were one of the first evacuees from the Philippine Islands. For several months they have been making their home with her parents, Col. and Mrs. A. F. Dannemiller, at Tilden Gardens. Capt. Todd, who is stationed at Fort Mills in the Philippines, will return in the near future to take up new duties at Fort Meade, Md.

Dr. Cooper, Wife Leave for Her Home in Georgia

Dr. and Mrs. R. U. Cooper left last night to spend two weeks at Mrs. Cooper's home in Manchester, Ga. Mrs. Cooper, who is the former Miss Carrye Johnson, has been invited again to sing for the President's party when he is in Warm Springs.

Mrs. Cooper, who was a professional radio artist before she came to Washington, has had the opportunity to sing before Mr. Roosevelt since she was a child, and she remembers when her selection was "East Side, West Side," befitting his office then as Governor of New York. An occasion doubly momentous was the banquet by her parents when her engagement to Dr. Cooper was announced and she sang for the President.

Mr. Rotter to Wed Miss Lichti Dec. 27

Mr. and Mrs. John Lichti, of Cambridge, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Elizabeth Lichti, to Sanford Louis Rotter, jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. S. L. Rotter, of Mathews, Va. The wedding will take place on December 27 at East Newmarket, Md., with the father of the bridegroom officiating.

Miss Patricia Lichti, sister of the bride, will be the maid of honor, and Benjamin Pollard Alsop, jr., of Richmond, Va., will be the best man. The couple will make their home in Washington.

Miss Lichti attended George Washington University, and Mr. Rotter was graduated from Episcopal High School and the University of Virginia. He is a member of Chi Phi fraternity.

Girl, 7, Has Chance to Live After Near-Fatal Auto Smash

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

CHILD'S PLEA FOR LIFE ANSWERED—Seven-year-old Audrey McNamara's plea "Don't let me die" was answered yesterday when her name was taken off the danger list. Here, she shows her dolls to Dr. F. J. Wixted in New Haven (Conn.) hospital

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—It appeared today that Audrey McNamara, 7-year-old county ward, would survive serious automobile accident injuries, and nobody was happier than Dr. Lawrence Tierney, of West Haven, to whom she pleaded, "Please don't let me die."

It was to Dr. Tierney's office that the little girl was brought last week suffering from a brain concussion, fractured pelvis and ruptured bladder after an automobile knocked her down.

He rushed her to a hospital, and the child, who never lost consciousness, turned to him just before being taken to the operating room and siad, simply, "Please don't let me die."

Dr. Tierney promised she would be all right, and has been praying since that his promise could be kept. Hardboiled West Haven cops, to whom accident reports are part of the day's routine, have been praying, too.

And today came welcome news from the hospital that Audrey, on the danger list since the accident, no longer was considered in critical condition.

Contract Bridge

♡ Q
◇ K J 7 5
♣ 10 9 8 6 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	?	—	—

"What, in your opinion, should South do after North's three-heart bid?"

South will be wise to pass. A bid of one, two and three of the same suit is a "sign-off." Only if South held some sort of help for hearts, with, perhaps, a doubleton in a side suit, would he be justified in going to four. Three no trump is out of the question.

Ted Williams' Unspoken Query Is Answered

Ted Williams, who hit .406 for the Red Sox, may be asking what a guy has to do to win the American League's most valuable player award, and the answer is simple enough: Get out of Joe DiMaggio's league.

POVICH

In the season when Williams was the first American League since 1922 to hit .400, and in the same year when he outhit DiMaggio by 49 points, he is not the league's most valuable player. That honor went to DiMaggio by the vote of 24 baseball writers representing the league's eight cities. And it was a clear-cut margin for DiMaggio in the voting.

How come DiMaggio was rated over Williams? Well, the Yankee Clipper wasn't exactly idle in the season that Williams was having his greatest year. DiMag broke a record which, as a feat, surpassed even Williams' .406 batting average. Williams chose an untimely season for his heroics. He chose the season when DiMaggio was breaking a 50-year-old record for hitting in consecutive games.

The evidence is that the grand jury of press box inmates weighed Williams' .406 average against DiMaggio's 56-game consecutive hitting streak and found that DiMaggio's was the greater achievement. Of course, DiMaggio was pounding out a neat .357 average for himself during the season, which ranked him as the league's third leading hitter.

There was another phase of the Williams-DiMaggio rivalry that probably came in for profound consideration and that was that DiMaggio's performance was highly instrumental in winning the pennant for the Yankees. Williams' .406 won no pennant for the Red Sox.

It Doesn't Take a Bat to Tell

It all adds up to an amazing sort of tribute to DiMaggio, this business of being outhit by 49 points and still being rated the most valuable player in the league. The guy must be quite a ball player even when he doesn't have a bat in his hand. That, of course, is the nub of matters, in any comparison of Williams and DiMaggio. DiMag can do everything better than Williams except hit, and even that latter concession to Williams can be debated in DiMag's favor and with some plausibility.

Clark Griffith, who has seen them come and go in the big leagues for 55 years, is in complete agreement with the award to DiMaggio over Williams. "That DiMaggio does more things a lot better than Williams," the 71-year-old owner of the Nats commented. "I doubt if a better ball player ever lived."

Tris Speaker, a name that has been accepted down through the years as the last two words in outfielding skill, had no talents that DiMaggio can't match, says Griffith. "That DiMag can go as far for a ball as Speaker ever did and he has as good a throwing arm. Maybe he plays ground balls a little better than Spoke. Sure, Speaker used to play closer to the infield, but he didn't have the lively ball to contend with. When you consider DiMaggio is a better hitter than Speaker, you'd have to call him a better ball player."

Griffith declared that DiMaggio was the only center fielder in baseball history who could make the play he did make in the first World Series game against the Dodgers last month. "It was that blooper into centerfield by Reese in the seventh inning. How DiMaggio got to that ball for a one-hand pickup I never will figure out," said Griffith. "And then he made a throw to the plate that would have kept a run from scoring if Dickey had held onto the ball. That was the best fielding play of the series."

Griff Settles the 'Clutch' Issue

With all due respect to Williams' .406 average, the Red Sox slugger is not as dangerous a hitter in the clutch as DiMaggio, as the Nats' owner sees them. "I don't want to take it away from Williams, because if he improves much more the pitchers in this league won't be able to get him out, but he can be pitched to easier than DiMaggio by good pitchers. They can bait him on curve balls that DiMaggio will hit. I'd say that both DiMaggio and Taft Wright are harder for a pitcher to fool than Williams, despite the averages."

No man in baseball swings a bat in the same manner as DiMaggio unless it's his little brother Dominic, of the Red Sox, Griffith observes. DiMaggio brought the flat-footed batting stance into the big leagues," said Griffith. "Watch his left foot. It moves only a couple of inches. He takes no stride at all. By gum, Lou Gehrig ended up hitting with that same stance after DiMaggio joined the Yankees. He was smart enough to copy it after being a great hitter all his life with his own stance."

Williams' chief trouble, it seems, is, as we were saying, being in the same league with a guy like DiMag.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Consider the Case of the Rangers' Henry

New York, Nov. 12.—If you can imagine a sandlotter being tossed into Bill Dickey's job, at the start of a critical baseball season, then you can imagine what's going on within the New York Rangers.

CONSIDINE

They've come up with a kid named Jim Henry who is being given every opportunity by Lester Patrick to make good as the team's goalie. No goalie has jumped from the amateurs to the big time and clinched a regular job since another Ranger, Lorne Chabot, did it 15 years ago. All the other goalies in the league had the solid foundation of minor league experience. Frank Brimsek, of the champion Bruins, played a year with the Providence Reds. Turk Broda of the Maple Leafs served with the Detroit Olympics. Bert Gardiner, of the Montreal Canadiens, prepped with the Philadelphia Ramblers. Sam Lopresti, Black Hawks goalie, was with the St. Paul Saints. Johnny Mowers, one of last season's rookie sensations, was polished up with the Omaha Knights before catching on with the Detroit Red Wings.

Charley Rayner, one of the five New York Americans who have not been granted passports to leave Canada (because they are in the Canadian equivalent of Class 1-A in the draft) didn't have much grooming for his job last year as Americans goalie. But he did play with the Springfield Indians for half a season. Henry hasn't had even that.

Not an Easy Job—By Long Shot

Patrick is putting quite a burden on the kid, for no hockey team is stronger than its goalie. The kid has a pair of enormous shoes to fill, too, for he is following Dave Kerr, one of the great all-time goalies. Kerr, you know, voluntarily retired not long ago. But "Sugar Jim" looked great in his debut. He was as cool as the ice he was standing on, in the face of the first assault of those high-scoring Maple Leafs he met last week in Toronto. He's got class.

Henry is just 21 and lives in Winnipeg. He was judged the best junior amateur in western Canada, when he starred for the Brandon (Manitoba) Elks. He went senior last season with the Ranger farm team, the Regina (Sask.) Rangers. It was a new club, hastily tossed together, but it wrote a kind of Grade D hockey history by ploughing through to win the Allan cup, the Stanley cup of amateur hockey. The credit went mostly to Henry who was a human red traffic light around those nets.

The New York Americans—who may be forced into the embarrassing position of actually using native-born citizens if Canada doesn't release some of the team's players—open the Garden hockey season tomorrow night. The opposition, and considerable, will be furnished Red Dutton's team by the Black Hawks, who incidentally seem to be the only team in the National Hockey League that has taken more than a passing interest in developing native-born players, not that it will be especially noticeable tonight.

Despite wartime restrictions, which for a time threatened to keep the bulk of the Canadian boys from crossing the border to turn an honest dollar, this may be a record-breaking hockey season. The game was said to be losing its hold last year, yet when they totaled up the figures at the end of the campaign it was found that 1,522,272 customers had paid to see the 168 regular season games—and, of course, another big block of fans took in those involved and, to us, slightly ridiculous play-offs.

Openings thus far in Montreal, Toronto and Detroit have drawn 50,000 clients. Boston and New York will swell that number, and New York will settle into the groove of adding to the total sum when the Rangers make their bow Saturday night.

Pitt Isn't Joining the Big Ten—Yet

Any rumor that Pitt will become a member of the Western Conference and "take the place left open by the University of Chicago" is a little premature. At this late date we have discovered that Chicago is still a very active member of the Big Ten. All it gave up was football. It competes in more Big Ten athletic events than, for instance, Michigan.

When and if it ever drops out completely—which is hardly possible,—there will be a mad rush to fill the vacancy. Michigan State, for instance, has been in line, waiting for the first vacancy, for years. Nebraska has wanted in for a long time, too. We think that few of us now alive will see Pitt admitted to the Big Ten, unless inflation sets in and it becomes the big something bigger.

Alsab 'All Out' in Gaining Pimlico Victory

Bradley Colt Gives Juvenile Champion Battle in Walden Stakes

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Alsab, 2-year-old champion, scored his tenth straight victory in the Walden Stakes at Pimlico yesterday but not before he was driven out to stave off the bid of E. R. Bradley's Bless Me (No. 7, on the outside). Fair Call (No. 4) was third. Jockey Vedder was up on the winner

Fair Call Finishes Third; Double Pays $3,320.40; Bradley Colt Is Bothered

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 12.—Alsab paraded into the winner's circle after the thirty-sixth running of the $7500 added The Walden this afternoon but his 2-year-old crown had slipped down over one eye and his hind quarters were stinging from Jockey Robert Vedder's whip. Instead of the runaway effort anticipated, the gallant son of Good Goods and Winds Chant was "all out" in every sense of the phrase to defeat Col. E. R. Bradley's Bless Me by a neck margin. In fact, Alsab had to have luck on his side for he had clear sailing all the way in contrast to Bless Me being shut off entering the stretch.

A length and a half behind the battle for first money came the Mill River Stable's Fair Call, the pacemaker most of the mile and a sixteenth of the historic test. Sweep Swinger, Trelawny and Sir War were the others in the field but they might as well have stood in their stalls.

Alsab's effort, however, equaled the record for the Walden since it has been run at the present distance. He gave away 9 pounds to Bless Me and went the route in 1:44 3-5, the same time that Chicstraw registered in the 1933 renewal. The track record is three-fifths of a second faster and is shared by Watch Him, Infantry and Tempestuous.

Returns $2.20 Pay-off

As a betting proposition, Alsab represented little more than interest. He paid $2.20 to win, 2.10 to place and $2.10 to show. So much was bet on Alsab in third position that the pool did not contain enough money for the $2.10 required by the State law and the Maryland Jockey Club made up the difference.

From a monetary angle, however, the day's feature was a $3,320.40 payoff in the daily double. Six persons held tickets on the combination of "7 and 12" that produced the third longest price in "double" history in Maryland.

One of those who collected was W. Riggs Mahoney, son of Mort Mahoney, the mutuel manager here and at other tracks. Mahoney, employed as an assistant to his father, explained the novel way in which he arrived at his selections. He said he notice that the ticket had "P-16" in the lower left-hand cor-

Fighter to Get New Manager In a Raffle

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 12.—Art Conn, sports editor of the Oakland Tribune, recounted in his column today the plan devised by K. O. Janic, a manager, to sell the contract of his fighter, Jimmy Duffy, jr.

Janic had 1000 tickets printed and will raffle them off at $1 per. The winner gets a fighter, who weighs 180 pounds, and a 20-pound turkey thrown in for good measure.

Miss Cotter's Rocksie Wins Open Jumper Title in Garden

District Girl 1st Woman Rider to Win Title; United States Army Takes International Crown

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 12.—Bringing unprecedented honors to the District of Columbia, Margaret Cotter tonight piloted her consistently great Rocksie to the open jumping championship as the eight-day National Horse Show came to a close at Madison Square Garden.

The first woman rider ever to win this title, Miss Cotter boosted her earnings for the show to nearly $1400, highest won by any individual.

Victory came to the handsome bay gelding currently called "wonder horse" by those who have seen him jump here—when he scored only one light tick for ½ a fault in the $1000 jumper stake that found only three of 32 entries able to compete with less than three knockdown and thus won the blue ribbon and $375 in the event.

Seven points for the stake class added to the 8 points he earned last night when he captured the knockdown-and-out championship made him open titlist with 15 points to nose out his nearest competitor, F. H. Taylor, jr.'s Birdwood Hazard, of New York, who was close behind with 14 as a result of second places to Rocksie in both big events.

U. S. Army Wins

The United States Army's horse show team wound up with its best performance of the entire week of showing as its members, Maj. Henri Luebbermann on Smacko, Capt. Frank Wing on Democrat, Capt. Frank Henry on Louisita, and Capt. Marshall Frame on Dakota jumped off against Cuba and made a perfect score to win the International Military Perpetual Challenge Trophy for the third successive year.

The Cuban representatives, Capt. Rene Chipi on Habana Club, Lieut. Luis Canton on Marques, Lieut. Gerardo Padron on Barcardi, and Lieut. Angel Fajardo on Condes, outpointed their neighbors, the Peruvians, who took third money.

Last horse to go in the stake, Rocksie was faced with the necessity of outfencing Taylor's amazing leaper, who had made one fault in the face of other entries' knockdowns, refusals, runouts, and similar mishaps. Miss Cotter, feeling that the prospect was past worrying about, gave him a ride that, for many horsemen, would be a once-in-a-lifetime achievement.

Touches First Bar

Ordinarily given to touching fences with the brush of a hoof, Rocksie was not even close to any pole except a 5-foot red and white barber pole, first fence of a 14-foot in-and-out that had been the Waterloo of many fine jumpers. That he rubbed lightly, but a yell from his

British Rugby Match Here Ends in Tie

Crew members of the British aircraft carriers H. M. S. Formidable and H. M. S. Illustrious introduced ruby football to 2000 spectators huddled in Griffith Stadium last night, and they seemed to like it.

England's football, played without such gridiron standbys as the huddle, substitutions, time out, blocking and interference, and with 15 players on each side, ended in a 13-all tie in the fourth match between the rival outfits since their ships have been in Portsmouth, Va., for repairs. Formidable won the soccer game, 2 to 0.

Lord and Lady Halifax were among the few who thoroughly understood the proceedings although the soccer game between the English ship crews which preceded the rugby found an understanding audience.

A casualty marred the evening as Stanley Ormond, 33-year-old Marine on the Illustrious soccer team and goalie for his team, was kicked in the head and after playing through the game collapsed in the dressing room and was admitted to Emergency Hospital in a fair condition.

Knocked Unconscious

Ormond was knocked unconscious in a scrimmage around the goal but he was revived and, holding his head much of the time, completed a busy evening in the loser's goal box.

On the way to the dressing room he was taken sick, collapsed and was taken to the hospital where he remained overnight for observtion. In the rougher rugby game, there were no injuries and each team completed the match with the starting 15 players.

The rugby squads, dressed in light shirts, shorts, heavy socks, cleated shoes, despite the fact the game is played from August through the winter and into April in Eng-

Louis to Meet Buddy Baer On January 9

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 12.—Joe Louis will defend his heavyweight boxing title against Buddy Baer in a 15-round scrap at Madison Square Garden here January 9, with the proceeds to go to Navy relief.

Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Commandant of the Third Naval District and commander of the North Atlantic coastal frontier, announced tonight that Promoter Mike Jacobs, of New York, arranged the championship fight.

Admiral Andrews said Louis would receive only his expenses in return for risking his title, which he defended successfully against Buddy in a previous fight.

All Profits to Charity

The bout will be for the benefit of the New York Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society, of which Admiral Andrews is president. All profits will be given to the Navy Relief to provide for emergency situations encountered by officers and enlisted men of the United States Navy and their families.

The New York office of Promoter Jacobs made no comment on the fight except to confirm the Navy's announcement.

It took the champion the same number of rounds to dispose of Buddy in their meeting last spring.

Earlier today, the bulky brother of former Champion Max Baer predicted in Sacramento, Calif., that he would win the title the next time he crawled into the ropes with Louis.

Instead of framing up something fancy like the cosmic punch that failed for Nova, Baer plans to wade in and match the champion blow for blow.

Buddy weighs 224, just ten pounds over his fighting weight. He will train at Lakewood, N. J., for five weeks.

Former Browns No-Hit No-Run Pitcher Is Dead

St. Louis, Nov. 12 (AP).—Ernie Koob, who pitched the St. Louis Browns to a no-hit, no-run win over the Chicago White Sox in 1917, died in a santiarium here today. He was 48 years old.

Koob's classic was followed the next day by a similar performance by Bob Rroom, another Brownie pitcher, against the White Sox. Koob retired from active play 11 years ago.

Sunday Shooting of Migratory Fowl Still Illegal in Virginia

Chairman of Game Commission Cites 1936 Law; Violators Will Be Hailed to Court

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 12.—Carl H. Nolting, chairman of the Virginia game commission, declared today there was no question that Sunday shooting of migratory waterfowl in the State was illegal and that game wardens had been instructed to summon Sunday hunters to court.

There was some confusion among duck hunters after a meeting of the game commission last month at which it was voted to permit shooting migratory fowl on Sunday, if there were no State statute forbidding it. Nolting pointed out today, however, that a 1936 law was found banning Sunday hunting and that sportsmen also had called attention to a 1919 statute making it unlawful to shoot or hunt any game in the State on the Sabbath.

The commission rescinded its original action and consequently Sunday hunting now is banned not only by State law but by the commission's own regulations, Nolting reported.

The game commissioner said duck hunting had not been as good as had been expected thus far, probably because the weather had not been severe enough to drive the migrants Southward.

The season, under Federal regulations, runs from November 2 through December 31, but under the Virginia restrictions shooting began legally Monday, November 3.

Jockey Merritt, Two Others Suspended

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The Illinois racing board today indefinitely suspended Jockey Robert Merritt, Brad Brodsky, a Philadelphit horse owner, and his trainer, Harry Baker, for "practices detrimental to the best interests of racing."

All three had appeared at the board's hearings into a "ringer" case in which Hasty Notion, racing under the name of Rapid Bone, won at Hawthorne, September 23, under the ownership of R. V. C. Van Cleve.

Van Cleve, of Abilene, Tex., and several others alleged to have been connected with the "ringer" case, were ruled off the turf for life by the board two weeks ago.

Brodsky, who at one time owned Hasty Notion, testified that he sold the horse to a William Rafferty, of Philadelphia, for $9500. Brodsky said that he understood Rafferty had purchased the horse for his aunt.

Merritt rode Hasty Notion to victory a month ago at Laurel and had identified pictures of Rapid Bone and Hasty Notion as the same horse.

Injuries Hamper Hoyas and Colonials for Games This Week

Georgetown Team Loses Gyorgydeak

Falcone, Reiges, Pavich Ailing as G. U. Prepares For N. C. State

By Jack Munhall

Barring unexpectedly rapid recuperation, Georgetown will face North Carolina State Saturday at Griffith Stadium minus two of its regular backs, it was learned yesterday.

Joe Gyorgydeak, sophomore fullback, is definitely out, Coach Jack Hagerty declared, while Lou Falcone, senior quarterback, is on the extremely doubtful list owing to an injured hand and a touch of grippe which sent him to the college infirmary yesterday.

Making matters worse for the Hoyas, three other key players are not in the best of shape as the result of last week's battle with Maryland. They are Benny Bulvin, halfback; Benny Reiges, alternate regular wingback, and Chris Pavich, end and the District's leading individual scorer.

Pavich donned uniform yesterday for the first time since Saturday, while all of the rest have yet to practice this week. The assorted injuries are: Gyorgydeak and Bulvin, bad ankles; Reiges, strained shoulder, and Pavich, bruised knee.

Not in Top Shape

Bulvin, who was out of the Boston College game and played only a few minutes against Maryland before his injury was aggravated is expected to be ready for State, as are Reiges and Pavich, but none is counted on to be in top condition.

Yesterday the Hoyas had a long passing drill and Frank Dornfeld continued to display the sensational form that saw his throwing produce three direct and one indirect touchdowns against Maryland. Praising Dornfeld who he declared was looking as good as he did last spring, Coach Hagerty also was pleased with the protection that Dornfeld and the other passers were being given.

With Gyorgydeak considered lost for North Carolina State and Falcone an uncertain player, Georgetown can be expected to emphasize an aerial attack Saturday when it will seek its fourth victory against three losses.

Coach Bewildered

Hagerty did not have North Carolina State scouted in its surprising 13-14 loss to V. P. I. last week, so the Georgetown coach was very much bewildered by it all.

"George Murtagh (the end coach) and I saw North Carolina State beat North Carolina, 13-7, two weeks ago, and they were very impressive," said Hagerty. "I can't understand what happened to 'em last week after leading V. P. I., 13-0. And after you fellows saw us lose to V. P. I., you'll never believe that State really has a pretty good club."

North Carolina State, which features a couple of former local high school stars, will enter this game with a record similar to Georgetown's in that both have won three and lost three.

Also marring the Wolfpack's record are two tie games.

Art Faircloth, a tailback, and Flash Gordon, a wingback, both from Anacostia, are the two erstwhile local scholastic stars holding forth with State. Both are sophomores and both are very highly regarded down at the West Raleigh school.

Georgetown Coach Hagerty says Faircloth is a wonderful kicker. "In the North Carolina game he out kicked Carolina's Harry Dunkel, who was about the best punter in the country last year."

E.B.C. and G.B.C. 105-Lb. Teams Play For Title Saturday

Fresh from its 12-0 Armistice Day victory over Alexandria Boys Club, B. C. W., Eastern Branch's 105-pound football team will meet the Georgetown branch Saturday. The game will decide the league title. Both teams are undefeated.

In another Armistice Day game the 120-pound team of Georgetown Branch and Police Boys Club No. 4 played a scoreless tie.

Tarheels to Defend Harrier Crown At Md. Monday

By the Associated Press

North Carolina, defending champion; William and Mary, V. M. I., Duke and Maryland have entered full teams in the Southern Conference cross country title meet to be decided at College Park Monday. Richmond will send three harriers.

The North Carolina Tarheels are favored to retain their team crown, with second place and the individual title wide open.

Bill Chewning, of V. M. I.; Dick Van Wagoner and Doug Moody, of North Carolina; Phil Thomas, of William and Mary; Hank Profenius, of Duke, and Stirling Kehoe, of Maryland, are seen as the leading contenders.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lewisburg, Pa., Nov. 12.—Twenty-five Bucknell gridmen and their coaches and managers tonight awaited the all-aboard signal for their trip to Washington, D. C., to meet George Washington's football team Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

The Bisons will entrain at noon tomorrow and upon reaching the Capital will make headquarters at the New Colonial Hotel.

Gudmundson Lost, Suffers Broken Hand

4 G. W. Gridders On Sidelines With Injuries; Meet Bucknell Tomorrow

George Washington's chances of beating Bucknell tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium for its first victory since September 27 were given a jolt yesterday when it was learned that Scott Gudmundson, junior tailback, suffered a broken hand as a result of Tuesday's scrimmage.

Gudmundson's injury brings to four the number of players on the G. W. casualty list. The others are End Johnny Picco, who has a trick knee, and Tackle Dan Snyder and Guard Ellis Hall, both of whom were hurt in the Furman game last week.

Meantime Coach Bill Reinhart and his assistants were mapping strategy for what they believe will be a hard ballgame. Impressed were the Colonials coaches with what they saw as Bucknell routed Western Maryland, 26-7, in the mud a couple of weeks ago.

Have Good Offense

In that game the Bisons rolled up a total gain of 252 yards, despite the slimy underfoot, and that Reinhart declared proves they have a pretty fair offense.

Costars of the Bucknell attack are cocaptains Mel Knupp and Fred Gore. Knupp is a passer of note and Gore, an end, is his favorite receiver. Rounding out the starting backfield with Knupp are Walter Wenrick, Chet Podd and Fred Fahringer. All are seniors except Podd, a junior.

Frankel Signs With Brewers

Nat Frankel, of New York, voted three years ago the outstanding player in the American Professional Basketball League, yesterday became the first cager to sign with the Washington Brewers, Mack Posnack, coach-manager, announced.

The 25-year-old Gotham athlete, purchased last year by the Heurich club from Kate Smith's Celtics, attached his signature to a contract in New York while Coach Posnack was on his ivory-hunting expedition to round up players for the team.

Frankel, who alternates at forward and guard, was considered one of the Brewers' most valuable players last season, and his decision to cast his lot again with the D. C. team came as good news to Posnack and his associate, Whitey Wilson.

Lear's 413 Set League Mark; Carver Stars

Earl Lear's 147 and record 413, set in the Friendship League at Silver Spring last night, topped the individuals, but his Wakefield Dairy team dropped two games. "Hump" Bryan, Stewart Bros., had 136-382, but Johnny Stewart was the star of the team with a triple-header strike in the last box to help take the third game by a single stick and chalk up three wins over T. L. & W. Brick. Hodgson's 158-403 helped Grotto Grill take two from Silver Spring News and high team set of 1690 as well. The News boys, however, totaled 593 for high team game. Ed Behnoke, Willis Builders, posted 135-361 to spark Willis Builders to a sweep over Herzog's Men's Shop.

Arcadia

Rip Carver proved the best financier in the Banker's League at Arcadia, for he had both individual highs, a 162 game and 439 set, to spark his National Savings & Trust No. 1 boys to team highs of 624 and 1757.

Takoma

"Dutch" Sherbahn, popular old timer in the Takoma Duckpin League at Takoma Recreation, showed the kids how it was done last night when he posted a 146 single and 390 set to lead Youngblood Hardware to a whitewash of Raines Plumbers and high set of 1743. Party House, Manager Bill Gartrell's quintet, won high team game with 634.

Penn

Eddie Joyce, of the Indian team in the IDRA League at Penn, led the boys with his 144-364 that helped win three from St. Elizabeth's. Bituminous Coal Commission rolled top team game of 608 while a 1,683 total took set honors for Reclamation No. 1 and three from Miscellaneous as well. Wildlife scored a sweep over National Capital Parks while the Engineers were whitewashing the Cartography lads.

Dave Singer topped the Hebrew League at Penn with a 157 game and the league's first 400 set this year, a count of 413, to help his Youdie's Men's Wear teammates garner high team set honors of 1768. Milton's Service won high team game after a 613 pinfall. Abe Roffeld led York Liquor to a sweep over Phalanx with 130-372, and a 157 game and 380 set by Sam Bordnick topped Stephen's All-Stars in a three-game win from Hofberg's. Jack Gordon's 132-376 for Bassin's led to three victories over Al Ash's and Charley Kotzin's 140-360 was what Rosenblatt's needed to white wash the Olympian Club.

Silver Spring

Betsy Jago, of Kenwood No. 2, and Polly Ford, of Kenwood No. 1, shared individual honors in the Country Club League at Silver Spring when the former rolled a 127 game and the latter a 321 set. Mrs. Jago's team, however, snared the honors for quintets when it posted a 499 high game and 1440 set.

Ossie Solem, Creator of 'Y,' Retained as Syracuse Coach

Relations Between School and Coach Hit Happy Note

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Ossie Solem, creator of the football season's most radical innovation—the Y-formation with its reversed center—was retained today as head coach at Syracuse University for an indefinite term.

The announcement by Lewis P. Andreas, director of athletics, coming three days before the traditional Colgate encounter, was regarded as a vote of confidence for the 48-year-old, mild-mannered mentor who came here from the University of Iowa in 1937.

Andreas said the length of Solem's new contract, his third here, would be determined at a later date, and added, "The association between Syracuse University and Coach Solem has been excellent and we are happy that he will continue to be with us."

Solem, voicing appreciation, expressed "pleasure in being associated with a university with such a sane and broad attitude toward intercollegiate athletics."

He was reported to have received $9000 annually under his present three-year contract, which expires this season. His first contract, also for three years, was renewed after two seasons.

Solem's Y-formation, a modification of the "T" in which the center faces his own backfield on offense, has carried Syracuse to five victories in seven games, one of them a 27-to-20 win over Wisconsin. A 6-to-0 defeat by Cornell and a 34-to-19 drubbing by Penn State are the only setbacks.

The site of the annual meeting and election of officers of the District Women's Golf Association has been changed to the Army War College Officers Club, Mrs. W. L. Weible, president, announced yesterday.

The election-meeting will be held Thursday, December 4, according to the association by-laws. Mrs. Weible will be installed as president for a second term. This is the first time the affair has ever been held at the War College.

Cobra Clutch Vs. Bear Hug On Mat Tonight

Nanjo Singh, the turbined Hindu who employs what some of the grapplers claim is a modified strangle—only it is legal—will pit his "cobra" against Milo Steinborn's bear hug in what promises to be the real test for Singh.

The co-feature bout will bring together Pat Fraley, the Pacific Coast champion, and Rowdy Rudy Dusek, chief of the notorious "riot squad."

Singh will be wrestling at the Arena for the seventh straight week, and thus far no one has been able to break his "cobra." For that matter Steinborn claims that once he clamps his hug on his opponent that can't be broken either.

The Hindu is offering $500 to any outsider who can free himself from his grip.

Fraley has had one engagement with Singh. That was a few weeks ago, when the Hindu was disqualified for using what Referee Casey Berger called a strangle—not a "cobra."

Big Jim Henry, better known as the Green Hornet, will meet Lou Plummer, Baltimore villain, in a special 30-minute return bout by popular demand. Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber, will engage Frank Judson, former Harvard mat coach, and Herbie Freeman will scrap with Fred Carone.

140-Pounders Open

ONLY 2 Days TO SELL A HOME!

"Plenty of good prospects from my POST advertising," reports Gary H. Smith, broker.

BIG things happen when you place a Want Ad in The Post.

For example, look what happened to Mr. Smith! A short while ago he offered an $8,000 home at Silver Spring, Md., under "Suburban for Sale" in The Post. Second day the ad appeared . . . a buyer appeared! Just like that (snap!) the deal was closed. Says Mr. Smith: "We had several good prospects during the two days. But then, we've come to expect good things of The Post. We've always had a swell response from your paper."

Thank you, Mr. Smith.

Real estate men throughout the Washington area are getting used to the really amazing results from The Post's classified pages . . . week in, week out. Why don't you try this model medium for meeting a large buying public? You'll soon be adding your praises to the others, some of which go like this:

"ARLINGTON, VA. $6,500 home sold in two days. Many prospects."—J. A. Baker.

"TAKOMA PARK, MD. Bungalow sold for $5,5800. Marvelous response."—Kay Realty Company.

"BETHESDA, MD. Home sold for $6,950. Several eager to buy."—L. B. Johnson.

Right now—if you have a house for sale—tell all about it in The POST. Right now—call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad-taker.

Dudley Succeeds Walsh as PGA Head in Landslide Vote

New Leader First Player To Be Chosen

Walsh Declines to Run; Cunningham And Sprogell Closest in Vote

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Ed Dudley, a transplanted Philadelphian now in a professional post at Colorado Springs, Colo., was elected president of the Professional Golfers Association today, succeeding the popular Tom Walsh, of Chicago, who declined to be a candidate.

DUDLEY

Dudley won by a landslide, with 47 votes out of the 70 cast. The rest were split with Frank Sprogell, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Alex Cunningham, of Chicago, running strongest.

It was the first time the P. G. A. had reached into the ranks of its playing stars for a president. Dudley, who is 39, was a member of three Ryder Cup teams, formerly pro at the Philadelphia Country Club and now is at Broadmoor Country Club, Colorado Springs. He was chairman the past year of the P. G. A. tournament committee.

Sprogell later was reelected national secretary and Willie McGuire, of Houston, Tex., was reelected treasurer.

The P. G. A. confirmed the date of the $13,000 Tam o' Shanter Open, golf's richest event for 1942, which will be played in Chicago, September 10 to 13.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—After being held to one goal for more than 50 minutes, the Providence Reds cut loose with a wild scoring burst to overwhelm the Washington Lions, 6 to 0, tonight in their first clash in the American Hockey League.

DeMarco opened the Reds' scoring during the eighth minute of play and then started the third period drive. After Jack Forsey pulled the home team into a 3-to-0 lead, Alex Singbush drew Washington's second penalty, and during his absence Ab Calladine and Hughie Gustafson drove pucks through Goalie Bibeault. Augie Herchenratter completed the Ulines' rout with about four minutes remaining.

The one-sided triumph was the Reds' second of the season. Before halting Buffalo on Sunday they lost five straight games.

Philadelphia Six Beats Pittsburgh, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 12.—Scoring two goals in the first period and two more in the last, the Philadelphia Rockets tonight handed the Pittsburgh Hornets their sixth straight American League hockey defeat. The score was 4 to 1.

Two of the Rockets' goals were scored by Defenseman Rolly Roulston. Bobby Kirk, on loan from Hershey, made another, and Glen Vickers made the other two. Lloyd Roubell, a former Philadelphia player, notched the Hornets' lone point in the third period.

Indianapolis Wins, Takes Western Lead

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Nov. 12.—Indianapolis took undisputed possession of first place in the western division of the American Hockey League by defeating the Hershey Bears, 3 to 0, in a slam-bang session on the local ice tonight. It was the first defeat of the season for the Bears and jolted them out of a tie for first place.

The Bears and Caps, top favorites in the western division, battled through 35 minutes of scoreless hockey before Ken Kilrea scored from a face-off on Hershey ice in 15 minutes of the second period.

How to Figure Skate—Article III

Arms, Shoulders Play Big Part Together With Flexible Knees

This position is now held for approximately one-third of a circle with the left foot (or balance foot) carried just outside the print with open hip and toe pointed downward. The head turned to the right with eyes focused on the curve several feet ahead of the body, about one-third of the distance the head is now rotated to the left looking over the left shoulder with head and body now upright till finish of the edge. The left arm (or free arm) follows the head rotation immediately and is pressed backward. The left leg now rotates backward around the right or skating foot passing it, (the left leg in this position is very close to the body) at about half way around and is held back of the right foot close to the print to be skated. The open hip prevails throughout the rotation of the balance foot. The right arm and shoulder which has been held backward for about one-half of the circle is now released and allowed to swing left just over the print (the print as referred to in this article is the figure to be skated).

On completing the circle the right foot changes to an inside edge as the left or balance foot has been brought up close to the right and as you place the left outer edge on the ice dip the skating knee (right) and push off in the direction of the opposite curve.

During the skating of these circles the skating knee is slightly bent for about two-thirds of a circle. It is then gradually straightened up to the finish.

3. At the half-way mark, the balance foot has moved forward and is just passing the skating foot. Her shoulders and arms have rotated slightly to the left.

4. At the three-quarters mark, the balance foot is now farther ahead of the skating foot and just outside the circle. Balance foot has been turned parallel to the skating foot. This position is held to the finish.

Western High Meets Central For Title Spot

With their last chance to gain the public school title playoff staring them in the face, Western and Central squads went through strenuous drills yesterday in an effort to be fully prepared for their meeting tomorrow afternoon at Central Stadium.

The game, half of the final regular season double-header ,which will also see Wilson invading Roosevelt, will settle once and for all Anacostia's foe i:. the Thanksgiving Day championship clash. And the issue is clearly up to Western.

A tie isn't enough to save the Red Raiders' hopes because they now trail Central in the Eastern division standings by half a game. Thus their practice yesterday was aimed more at scoring points than keeping the Vikings from scoring.

Tied Wilson, 6-6

To date they haven't been so successful in the point department. Except for a three-touchdown spree against Roosevelt, the Raiders have been forced to settle for no more than one touchdown in four other outings. They go up against a Central machine which has ground out 99 points in seven games, including a 32-7 triumph over the Wilson club, which Western was only able to tie, 6 to 6.

The Raiders' chief threats are expected to be their new-found broken field runner, Duke O'Connell; Bill Goodman, hard hitting fullback, and Clarence Kuldell, their clever passer. They will be abetted by the usual scrappy Western line, mostly inexperienced but willing enough.

Central Is Favored

Central already is assured of the favorite role, with most observers touting it by two or three touchdowns. The Vikings have almost everything—brilliant backs in Jim Kurz, Mike Denikos and Stan Valanos, a burly and experienced forward wall led by Wilbur Rock, Jack Samperton and George Lavinder, and the fighting spirit to go with all that.

N. Y. Amerks To Move Team To Brooklyn

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 12.—It's going to happen on ice in Brooklyn.

Red Dutton, president and manager of the long-orphaned New York Americans hockey team, announced today that the organization will be known henceforth as the Brooklyn Americans and possibly later as the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"We're swinging all our allegiance to Brooklyn," said Dutton at a gathering of New York sports writers. "I'm running this club lock, stock and barrel now and I'm convinced the best chance of success for a second National League hockey team in the New York area lies across the East River."

Rink Needed

The rub is that there's no ice rink large enough in the fabulous land of Flatbush and this season's games will have to be played at the Americans' old stand, Madison Square Garden.

But in every other respect, Dutton said, the Americans will be strictly a Brooklyn institution and in time, when priorities will be relaxed sufficiently to provide materials for building a large rink in Brooklyn, he hopes the Americans will be accepted just as enthusiastically as the beloved Bums of baseball and the Brooklyn football Dodgers.

The Americans will open their season tomorrow night in the Garden against the Chicago Blackhawks and except for the location, in mid-Manhattan, it's going to be an all-Flatbush occasion.

Will Dedicate Team

Brooklyn Borough President John Cashmore will dedicate the Americans to the greater glory of Flatbush. The Brooklyn football Dodgers band will furnish the music.

Because the club has all its advance billing on the presses as the "Americans" no attempt will be made to designate them as the Dodgers this year.

"But when we've proved ourselves capable of playing the same kind of championship game as the baseball and football teams we'll more than likely adopt the name of Dodgers," Dutton said.

Lester Patrick, manager of the rival New York Rangers, welcomed Dutton's decision and said it should lead to a strong interborough rivalry like that between the baseball and football Dodgers and Giants.

The Americans, last in the seven-club league last season, went into bankruptcy several seasons ago, and Dutton, the manager, became vice president while the National League administered the club's affairs. Dutton since has become a successful Canadian defense contractor and now controls the club completely.

Burke Takes Golf Honors In Dental Play

Dr. J. R. Burke won low net honors in the monthly golf tournament of the District Dental Society yesterday at Manor Country Club with a round of 96 minus, 25 handicap strokes, for a net 71.

The golfing dentists, who each month honor an association member, yesterday observed "Bill" Barr day for Dr. W. C. Barr, who has been with them for 39 years. Dr. Barr has been the District Golf Association secretary for more than 25 years and is also secretary of the Middle Atlantic amateur golf body. He is a vice president of the dental society.

The program was continued with a dinner and gift presentation to Dr. Barr, who missed a perfect day by missing the prize list.

Other net winners were: Dr. T. J. Rice, 88-16, 72; Dr. Nate Cohen, 95-23, 72, and Dr. Maurice Wolf, 93-19, 74.

Dr. W. R. McLister and Dr. J. G. Reilly tied for low gross honors with 83s. Dr. Michael Oliveri tied with Dr. P. M. Kleh for second with 87 and Dr. Walter Schultz was third with an 88.

In Richmond Sunday Cardinal A. C. to Play

Manager Jack Hoffman urgently requests all members to attend a meeting tomorrow night at 7 p. m. at 215 Twelfth Street Northeast.

Sarazen, Thompson Shoot 122 Mid-South Pro-Am Tourney

Sarazen Slashes Seven Strokes Off Par; Walper And Kirchner Have 135, Just Missing Money

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 12.—The veteran Gene Sarazen and his knickerclad amateur partner, Eric Thompson, of Pinehurst and Bermuda, today shot a dazzling best-ball score of 57 to win the pro-amateur event of the Mid-South Open with a 36-hole score of 122.

Sarazen, the Brookfield Center, N. C., Conn., "farmer," slashed seven strokes off par figures for the course to establish a new record of 63. He was aided six strokes by his amateur partner who was allowed a handicap of four and used three of these strokes.

Trailing the Sarazen-Thomson combination was a duo composed of F. H. Appleton, New York amateur, and Willie Goggin, White Plains, who carded a best-ball score of 63 today for a total of 129. Sarazen won $300 and Goggin $200.

Horton Smith, Pinehurst, and James T. Hunter, North Adams, Mass., amateur, were third with a gross best ball of 130 on a pair of 65s to earn $150.

Two teams were tied for fourth: George Corcoran, Greensboro pro, and Amateur Wesley Ferrell, Greensboro baseball star, and Johnny Bulla, Greensboro pro and Benny Godes, Reidsville amateur. The low scores of 132 netted $112.50 each for the pros.

A three-way tie followed at 133, with the pros receiving $41.67: Willie Klein, Wheatly Hills, N. Y., and Amateur Robert Odom, New York; Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., and Amateur Donald Cook, Westwood, N. J., and Felix Serafin, Clark's Summit, Pa., and Amateur B. C. Rae.

Walter McCallum, Washington amateur, and Harold Zimmerman, Flint, Mich., had 143, while Levi Yoder, Annapolis, and D. M. Duffield, Belfast, Ireland, made 145.

Market Wise Is Top Weight of Gov. Bowie Handicap Today

$10,000 'Cap Marks Close Of Pimlico

Field of Eight Named for Test; Shot Put, Filisteo Are Next Topweight

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 12.—A field of eight, topped by Lou Tufano's Market Wise, hero of the Pimlico Special, was named today for the twenty-ninth running tomorrow of the $10,000 Added Governor Bowie Handicap, closing-day feature of the Maryland Jockey Club's fall race meeting.

Market Wise, the likely runner-up to Whirlaway for 3-year-old honors, was assigned top weight of 124 pounds for the mile and five-eighths test, with Mrs. Marie Evans' route-running Shot Put rated next in line with 117.

H. C. Hatch's Filisteo, which won the Exterminator Handicap from Shot Put in world-record time, was another entry, with 116 pounds, while Mrs. E. K. Bryson's Trois Pistoles, conqueror of Filisteo in the Grayson Stakes, gets in with a mere 104.

Others named overnight for the get-away feature were E. D. Axton's Baby Ormont, 104; G. H. Bostwick's Nillie Bly, 109; E. R. Bradley's Best Seller, 99, and A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose, 109.

Blily Direct, Harness Record Holder, Is Sold

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP).—Billy Direct, holder of the world's mile record for harness race horses, has been sold to Hanover Shoe Farms, Butler, Pa., Arthur and Daniel McConville, Ogdenburg owners, announced. Sale price was $10,000.

The 7-year-old pacer established the mark of 1:55 at Lexington, Ky., September, 1938, with Vic Fleming, Syracuse driver, at the reins. The former standard of 1:55½ had been set 39 years earlier by Dan Patch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY SPRING, $55.60, $31.40, $9.00; WITNESS STAND, $10.50, $6.30; FREELAND'S LAD, $4.60.

EARLY SPRING, in the first flight on the outside from the start, responded gamely when shaken up, wore down FREELAND'S LAD to take command and drew out in the final test. WITNESS STAND raced forwardly from the start, went widest of all entering the stretch and closed willingly, but was no match for the winner. FREELAND'S LAD forged to the front in the opening furlong, drew out, but weakened suddenly in the final 70 yards. EPISTLE was hard ridden and closed with good energy.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:46½. Off at 1:47½. Winner, P. S. Baird's blk. g. (4), by Jean Valjean—Shades of Night. Trained by P. S. Baird. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAVERT, $82.90, $32.00, $9.90; WAR SMOKE, $5.10, $3.20; SADDLING BELL, $2.90.

JAVERT was well placed from the beginning, came wide entering the stretch and withstood a long drive to win going away. WAR SMOKE was always within striking distance, rallied in the stretch run and was second best. SADDLING BELL forced the pace of STAR STREWN to the stretch and weakened gradually. PERSIAN QUEEN lacked early speed and came with a rush in the closing stages.

Daily Double—EARLY SPRING and JAVERT Paid $3320.40.

THIRD RACE—Two and one-half miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Steeplechase (18 jumps). Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:13. Winner, Cielo Siette Stable's ch. g. (7), by Double Bed—Financee. Trained by H. J. Jeffcott. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 5:01.

†H. E. Talbott entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—FATAL INTERVIEW, $10.60, $5.00, $3.40; BIG REBEL (entry), $3.00, $2.40; FATTY, $3.30.

FATAL INTERVIEW took command at once, withstood repeated challenges from BIG REBEL, recovered from a bad landing at the fifteenth and drew out under hand riding on the final flat. BIG REBEL moved up boldly early to press the pace, fenced cleanly and weakened in the final test. FATTY was well placed throughout, landed poorly at the tenth and twelfth—end was held safe at the end. SHIP EXECUTIVE was within striking distance from the start, but his rider lost his stirrup in the final stages and was unable to do the mount justice.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:41½. Off at 2:42. Winner, L. W. Ulmer's b. g. (3), by On Watch—Hileaway. Trained by J. McGee. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIGRATION, $16.30, $10.70, $6.40; CHALDAR, $12.10, $7.90; CONQUEROR III, $23.30.

MIGRATION took command going to the first turn, drew out and held away to the end under good handling. CHALDAR improved his position gradually on the inside and hung in the closing stages. CONQUEROR III was hard ridden and weakened in the final eighth. SILVER ROCKET, sluggish early, closed full of run and appears ready.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:11½. Winner, J. B. Partridge's b. g. (6), by Boot—Sadie. Trained by J. B. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45⅘.

NOSY	(McCombs)	114	2	1	1h	3¹	7nk	8	8	8.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANDY BOOT, $6.10, $3.90, $2.90; SHAHEEN, $4.80, $3.30; MIGHTILY, $3.30.

SANDY BOOT, not hurried for a half mile while far back, came to the outside when placed to a drive, improved his position readily and wore down SHAHEEN inside the sixteenth pole. SHAHEEN took command approaching the stretch and barely failed to last. MIGHTILY raced HONEY into defeat to take command and weakened gradually after the half. DINGMANS was well placed on the outside and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $7500 added. For 2-year-olds. The Walden. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:41½. Winner, Mrs. A. Sabath's b. c. (2), by Good Goods—Winds Chant. Trained by A. Swenke. Net value to winner, $7720; second, $1500; third, $800; fourth, $400. Time, 1:44⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
ALSAB	(Vedder)	122	5	1	2¹½	2¹	2½	1hk	1hk	$6.10

SIR WAR	(Woolf)	115	1	3	5²	5²	5²	6	6	32.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALSAB, $2.20, $2.10, $2.10; BLESS ME, $2.90, $2.30; FAIR CALL, $2.40.

ALSAB, steadied when unable to outrun FAIR CALL going to the first turn, moved up approaching the half pole to take a brief lead, was rated to the stretch on the outside of FAIR CALL, responded when put to ahard drive and held away to the end under vigorous handling. BLESS ME was rated close up on the backstretch, came into the inside at the far turn to better his position, was blocked off entering the stretch, was sent to the outside and was wearing down ALSAB at the end. SWEEP SWINGER was outrun early, saved ground and closed with good energy. TRELAWNY weakened gradually after the opening quarter. SIR WAR had some early speed and faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:13. Winner, C. O. Ferguson's br. f. (4), by Tourist II—Saint Justine. Trained by C. O. Ferguson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:36.

PITTSBURGH	(Dufford)	113	3	1	1h	12	10¹½	12	12	83.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUST TOURIST, $5.90, $3.90, $3.40; BLOCKADER, $7.10, $4.50; JIM MIKE, $5.00.

JUST TOURIST was hard held while following the pace in the opening mile, came around the leader entering the stretch and drew clear to win in easy fashion. BLOCKADER was knocked off stride when hit by MASON B. in the opening quarter, recovered well, took command on the backstretch, held on willingly, but was no match for the winner. JIM MIKE was slow to find his best stride and came well in the final quarter.

EIGHTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:46½. Winner, J. H. Stotler's b. g. (3), by Broker's Tip—Accotinke. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅕.

REHEARSAL	(Young)	110	8	7	8¹	12	12	12	12	27.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONE TIP, $104.50, $31.40, $20.60; ROAD SCRAPER, $11.60, $8.30; MORDECAI, $11.60.

ONE TIP improved his position gradually, responded when placed to a drive in the stretch and wore down ROAD SCRAPER to be up in the concluding strides. ROAD SCRAPER, first away, set a good pace, but was tiring gradually in the final test. MORDECAI, last away, came with a bold rush through the stretch to be going fastest of all. BECOMLY was in trouble early and closed full of run.

Enlisted Army Airman To Play Another Game

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Joseph McCourt, of Yonkers, N. Y., halfback on the Colgate football team, is going to get in the traditional Colgate-Syracuse game Saturday although he enlisted in the Army Air Corps today.

Army Air Corps officials first announced he would leave tomorrow for Maxwell Field at Montgomery, Ala. Later, however, they said he would not be inducted until Monday.

Ice Palace to Stage Major Open Pin Event

The first big Ice Palace bowling tournament of the season is scheduled for Sunday afternoon when Jack Talbert's Major Open gets under way. The first prize of $300 is guaranteed and the entrance fee is $15, which includes the cost of the games.

The first block of five games may be rolled at either 2 or 4 in the afternoon, with the second five-game block starting at either 7 or 9. The event is sanctioned by the N. D. P. B. C.

Selections at Pimlico

On last Tuesday's program, Jockey Sterling Young was riding Big Meal and seemed to have a safe lead. He looked back on the outside and did not see a horse close, but between Big Meal and the rail, Jockey Nick Wall was rushing along aboard Vivacity. Wall finally booted Vivacity to victory. From the press box it appeared that Young did not see the winner until after the two horses passed the line. This is exactly what happened in the Preakness. Jockey Eddie Ambrose on E. B. McLean's Toro apparently had the race locked up and Sonny Workman sneaked through on the rail to steal the big money with Victorian. Friends of Jockey Bobby Watson tell me that he is another Mora. They say Watson has come to ride at Pimlico for three years and has been suspended regularly at each fall meeting. I'm wondering if that $200 fine put on Mora in addition to the two-day suspension wasn't a direct slap at the Maryland racing commission. The power of the stewards does not extend from one meeting to another and the usual procedure in the closing stages of a meeting is to give the boy the remaining days and then refer his case to the commission for additional punishment. However, in the Mora incident, the stewards plastered a $200 fine. Were they making sure that the commission wouldn't be light on Mora? By the way, I don't know Mora peronsally but I admire any jockey who rides all horses to win whether or not they are owned by the rich or poor, the influential or obscure. Talked to Charles Town officials on the phone last night and everything is ready for the December meeting. But, lest we forget, Bowie opens tomorrow. And John J. Fitzgerald wants the world to know Tropical Park opens December 20. Honey Cloud won't be seen at Bowie for the first time in many meetings. The big horse has been shipped to Florida. Speaking of steeplechasing, they call it sport and I call it madness. Won't somebody please get Happy Gordon, the outrider, a pony that can run. I feel sorry for him. He looks like he's riding a slow freight. See you on the rail.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—ST. PETER'S last was encouraging. Meets maidens in this field and I'm going to string along. PEACE LANE showed a fair effort recently and may be prominent. INSCOLIAN to take care of the others.

SECOND RACE — SLOW MOTION drops far down to meet these and needs only to be a shadow of himself to take it all. CIRCUS is a good stablemate of the top fellow. OAK TAR was a surprise winner at Laurel and is dangerous.

THIRD RACE—HERESHECOMES had plenty of trouble last out and ran a creditable race. Looks like the right spot in this field. MAECLOUD is a veteran with a liking for this oval. LANTE drops down enough to be a threat.

FOURTH RACE — REDTHORN gets my call in this rather open affair for juveniles. Needs only the right ride. BEAN BY BEAN had speed last out and could surprise. CONNIE JEAN is reported to be a good one.

FIFTH RACE—The Ring entry of RINGIE and NIGHT GLOW appears to have a lock and key on this event. Either one can turn the trick. BIRCH ROD and SON ALTESSE to battle it out for what is left.

SIXTH RACE—MARKET WISE totes 124 pounds but I'm forced to string along. Should be along in time to take the big money. FILISTEO was never better and is dangerous. TROIS PISTOLES is in light.

SEVENTH RACE—CONNIE PLAUT likes the long route and this race track. PEPPERY is cheap but gets in with a feather. BETTER HALF to take care of the others.

EIGHTH RACE—RAMASES needs only some help from the saddle to defeat this kind. VINTAGE PORT and SASSY LADY to take care of the other money positions.

Best bet—Ring entry.

D. C. Used Car Sales Off 25% During Month

Washington used car sales in October slumped 25 per cent as compared with the same month last year, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association. A survey covering 58 deals in the District of Columbia showed last month's sales totaled 2508 units, as compared with 3365 in October, 1940.

Dealers' stocks of used cars, as of October 31, were the lowest in at least four years. Available cars for sale were 32 per cent less than last year on the same date, 29 per cent less than in 1939 and 11 per cent less than in 1938.

The sharp decline in September and October sales was not unanticipated in local automotive circles. Dealers report that many buyers anticipated their needs for new and used cars during the summer. When the 1942 models appeared, they attracted relatively little attention and increased prices met stiff resistance from the public.

Although stocks of used cars are low, demand likewise has fallen, due to what some dealers say is a temporary saturated market.

Holcombe Parkes Promoted

Holcombe Parkes, associate director of public relations of the Association of American Railroads at Washington, has been appointed assistant to the president of the Southern Railway System, it was announced yesterday by Ernest E. Norris, president of the railroad.

MR. PARKES

In his new position, which he will assume on November 15, Mr. Parkes will have charge of the railroad's public relations activities in addition to other assigned duties. His office will be in the Southern Railway Building in Washington.

Mr. Parkes has been engaged in railroad public relations and advertising work since 1919, when, after several years of service with railroads, newspapers and the Associated Press and a tour of duty witn the French and American forces during World War I, he became associated editor of the Railway Age at Chicago.

Air Express Gains 78 Per Cent

Gross revenue of air express flown in and out of Washington during October was up 78 per cent over the same month last year, reports A. D. Satterwhite, agent of Railway Express Agency. Total number of shipments was 5,450, an increase of 24.7 per cent over October, 1940.

Newsreels, news photos and Government shipments of all types accounted for a major part of the increase according to Mr. Satterwhite.

Field Secretary Named

James Parker Nolan, chairman of district 11 (District of Columbia, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia), of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., has appointed Martin J. Bayly as field secretary. Mr. Bayly, a native of Baltimore, has spent 20 years in investment accounting work both for over-the-counter dealers and stock exchange members. Mr. Bayly will be the administrative employe of the association in district 11 and his duties will include educational and examination work.

Australia Ships $5,929,378 Gold

By the Associated Press

A large shipment from Australia boosted gold imports to $14,141,103 last week.

The Commerce Department said yesterday the total, which was somewhat larger than any recent week, was due mostly to a shipment of $5,929,378 from Australia. Other large deliveries included $3,751,454 from Canada, $2,099,729 from Colombia and $1,339,416 from the Philippine Islands.

Foreign gold deposits under earmark in the Federal Reserve banks increased $21,037,304 during the week ended November 5 to a total of $2,066,593,548.

Army to Speed Truck Buying as Job Aid

The Army has decided to speed up motor truck purchases in order to relieve unemployment in the Detroit area caused by priority restrictions in civilian automobile production.

Authoritative sources said that, within the next few days, President Roosevelt will ask Congress for appropriations to enable the Army to place orders immediately for thousands of trucks, which the Army originally intended to buy over a period of years.

Defense officials decided that since the trucks would be needed eventually anyway and materials would be easier to get now, they were justified in speeding up the orders in order to relieve temporary unemployment in the motor vehicle manufacturing area.

Automobile workers now losing their jobs, officials said, are to be absorbed about the middle of next year in new airplane and other defense factories being constructed in and near Detroit.

No exact figures were available, but officials indicated the number of new truck orders would be in excess of 25,000, and would be in addition to all existing truck-procurement programs.

Officials said the new appropriation would be part of a large Army request now being prepared covering airplanes, guns and other weapons, and totaling possibly five billion dollars.

Tax Boost Needed As Inflation Curb, Says Gaston

Herbert E. Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said yesterday that higher taxes would be imperative during the coming year to check inflation.

While the latest tax bill, together with earlier legislation, should provide approximately 12 billion dollars in revenue during 1942, he said in a prepared speech to the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut that amount would not be sufficient to close the "swiftly growing gap between the amount of purchasing power in the hands of our public and the dwindling supply of goods that can satisfy that demand."

"There is a point at which the least fortunate among us simply cannot be asked to do more," he said. "Nevertheless, both price considerations and Government fiscal considerations make imperative a new tax program that will be as sweeping as possible and as productive of revenue as it can be made without creating severe hardships or dangerous disturbances of our economy."

Gaston listed higher taxes, savings through the purchase of defense bonds, reduction of non-defense Governmental costs and price control as the "obvious ways to attack inflation."

He contended, however, that none of those methods "can serve by itself to prevent inflation."

"Whatever we do," he said, "must be compounded of many methods and cannot be limited to the obvious methods alone."

Gaston suggested the possibility that rationing of goods needed for defense might become necessary ultimately.

Program Drafted to Aid Metal-Plating Workers

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, said yesterday the labor division had proposed a four-point program to relieve unemployment among 7000 employes in the metal-plating industry, hard hit by a priorities order curtailing "bright-work" on automobiles.

About 407 men have been laid off in Detroit, and an additional 866 will be laid off there by December 15, the date the order takes effect, the division reported.

The program proposed at a joint meeting of labor, management and Government representatives included these points:

1. No new plating plants or facilities to be built while plants and facilities are available.

2. Possibility of pooling facilities on both an industry-wide and geographical basis to obtain defense contracts or subcontracts.

3. An industry-wide study with OPM'S cooperation to determine how the industry's facilities may be best adapted to defense production.

4. Investigation of the extent to which the curtailment order will affect employment in the industry with a view to preparing possible future revisions of the order.

OPM officials emphasized that the program would require the industry to study current requirements of the Army and Navy for plated articles.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—A post-holiday outburst of selling today sent grain and soybeans prices into the worst tailspin since the mid-October break.

Wheat tumbled as much as 4¼ to 4¾ cents, coming within ¼ of the limit permitted in one session. Soybeans fell 6 cents, the limit; corn and rye more than 3 cents and oats almost 2 cents. All grains recovered part of the losses before the close but beans, in which trading was virtually at a standstill during the last half of the session, finished at the bottom.

Brokers blamed selling, which developed first in soybeans and corn, on improved weather conditions for late harvesting of these crops, and on Government estimates of production, which were higher than had been expected. Selling spread into other pits and as prices slid, stop-loss orders, which were forced into execution, accelerated the decline.

Wheat closed 2@2¾ lower than Monday, December 1.13¾@1.13⅞, May 1.19@1.19⅛; corn 1¾@2⅛ off, December 75⅞, May 81½; oats 1⅛@1¼ down; rye 2⅛@2¼ down and soybeans 6 lower, December 1.65⅜. Lard, weakened by action of grains and hogs, fell 18 to 23 cents per hundred pounds.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Cotton futures quotations dropped 55 cents to $1.40 a bale today, selling in sympathy with the decline in grains accounting for part of the liquidation.

Mill purchases against improved gray goods sales earlier had steadied the market. As selling increased and quotations slipped, stop-loss orders were uncovered and accelerated the decline.

The exchange's estimate of October cotton consumption, 948,000 bales, had a minor influence on prices, although it borne out by official figures would constitute a record. It compared with 876,000 in September and the official record of 928,943 bales established in July, 1941.

Kodak Boosts Dividend and Wage 'Melons'

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. declared today an extra common stock dividend of $1 a share in addition to a quarterly dividend of $1.50, at the same time voting to increase wage dividends to employes by aproximately $1,200,000.

Under the company's profit-sharing formula, the wage dividend rate is dependent upon dividends declared on common stock. To be paid in March, it will amount to approximately $4,200,000.

The $1 extra dividend brought declarations on the common to $7 for the year, $1 over the amount paid last year. The regular 1½ per cent dividend, amounting to $1.50, also was declared on preferred stock. Both dividends are payable January 2, to stockholders of record December 3.

Full wage dividends, which the company explains to its wrokers as a share in the earnings of the company, are paid to each employe who has complete five years' service at the end of 1941 and who is working on the date of payment.

Each of these employes will receive in March a check for approximately 4½ times his weekly wage during the five years from 1937 through 1941. For example, a person whose earnings averaged $30 a week will receive $136.50, as compared with the $97.50 he would have received had the extra dividend not caused the wage-dividend increase.

The number of eligible employes is not yet known, but last March wage dividends were received by 27,175 persons in the Western Hemisphere, including 18,133 in Rochester.

20,000 Get Extra Pay

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP).—Endicott Johnson Corporation announced today it would soon distribute approximately $600,000 in extra pay benefits to 20,000 factory, tannery and office workers.

The distribution will include full pay for each of the four holidays observed by the corporation since December 1, 1940, and full pay for the coming Thanksgiving holiday.

Earlier this year, three pay restorations of approximately 1 million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars each were made to wipe out deductions made during 1938.

Extra Dividend Voted

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Directors of United States Gypsum Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1.50 a share, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 50 cents a share, on the common stock. The extra dividend will be paid December 24 and the regular on December 31, both to stockholders of record December 8.

For the 12 months ended September 30 net profit was $6,462,768 or $2.27 a share against $4,956,975 or $1.77 in the 12 months ended September 30, 1940.

Stocks Slump On Heavy Sales For Tax Losses

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 12.—The November decline in stocks today accelerated into a steep slide as selling to establish tax losses reached what some brokers termed "unusually large" proportions.

Industrial leaders receded fractions to as much as 2 points, many reaching new 1941 lows. Rails, in the downward procession from the start, widened their losses in the late proceedings on the announcement of a strike order by the operating brotherhoods to become effective December 7.

Hamstringing the market in the work of absorbing the expanded offerings was a general timidity on the part of buyers who did not like the looks of the Far Eastern picture and troubled labor situation.

Commodities Also Off

Commodities and bonds also were dominated by selling. Recording one of the sharpest dips in recent months, the Associated press 60-stock average was down .7 of a point at 39.3, the lowest level for the composite since April 21 and only .2 of a point above the 1941 low.

Active turnover in various low priced shares lifted volume to 1,017,630 shares, the largest since September 25, against Monday's 627,100 shares.

It was figured by brokers that the urge to dispose of stocks for tax purposes was stronger than in other years. This was due, they said to the increased levies against 1941 incomes, the prospects for replacement of holdings at relatively small price differentials and fears that the new revenue bill might call for a general curtainment of privileges covering tax losses.

Pivotal Issues Slip

Among the weaker issues were U. S. Steel, Bethelehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Douglas, American Telephone, Western Union, American Can, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, and Great Northern preferred.

Pennsylvania ended with a minor gain, deriving support from the declaration of a $1 dividend which brought the year's payments to $2 a share against $1.50 in 1940.

Chicago wheat dropped 2 to 2⅜ cents a bushel and corn declined 1¾ to 2⅛. Hogs were 5 to 10 cents lower. Cotton futures closed off 55 cents to $1.40 a bale.

Treasury Weaves Tight Web On Refugees' Market Deals

By Bernard S. O'Hara
Associated Press Financial Writer

New York, Nov. 12.—Wall Street brokers gloomily admit that stories about the market deals of refugees who have been employing their trading talents in the security and commodity exchanges are likely to pass out of circulation soon for lack of new factual material.

Taking one step at a time the Treasury Department in Washington has woven a tight web of restrictions on all financial dealings involving physical property, stock and bond certificates and commodity contracts in which non-citizens of refugee classification seek to engage.

Rumor and gossip heard in the canyons of the financial district regarding the trading activities of lately-arrived aliens have suggested that wide fluctuations in recent months in leading staples futures markets—cotton, grains, lard, hogs, soybeans, pepper, etc.—were in greater or less degree determined by refugee participation in the markets.

Wall Street brokers in a position to estimate the volume of refugee dealings the last year or so in relation to the whole insist that such stories have been long on color and short on accuracy.

The latest Treasury action to curb alien dealings in markets, announced two weeks ago, requires liquidation of open accounts in commodity futures with the expiration of the contracts. This means that the aliens affected—the Treasury calls them "blocked nationals"—in the event they hold December cotton or December wheat must sell on or before the date these contracts are liquidated and terminated. They cannot transfer positions from December to a distant month—say, March—except by obtaining from the Treasury a special license.

Controls over the alien transactions represent the Treasury's carefully worked out plans, in conjunction with the Federal Reserve System, to block the designs of any foreign agents who might be playing with Wall Street brokerage accounts for the benefit of an unfriendly country. Brokers aver that, with the stringent rules, a person with subversive ideas operating in the guise of an inoffensive refugee would have to be a master manipulator to pull a fast one on the Treasury.

The gigantic policing job for making the Treasury's controls effective mostly falls to the Reserve banks. It encompasses far more than the scrutiny of the dealings of noncitizens.

Conn-Ritchie Bout Opposed

Commission Disfavors Fight Here

Local Body Claims No Direct Knowledge Or Details of Bout Listed for Uline's

The Boxing Commission announced yesterday that it would look with disfavor upon a proposed Billy Conn-Babe Ritchie heavyweight fight which reports from New York and Pittsburg had scheduled here the first of the year.

Rumors were current both here and in New York that a match had been tentatively set at Uline, January 19. The commission stated that it had no knowledge of such a match.

However, it was asserted that Ritchie is not at this time the proper opponent for Conn and the commission would be opposed to that bout.

In its release to the press, the District body added, "the commission therefore feels that it should make its stand clear to both the press, public and promoters that a permit for such a contest might not be granted."

Illinois Dog, Sister Of '40 Winner, New U. S. Hunt Champ

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 12 (AP).—Helen K, owned by Albert A. Krueger, of Metropolis, Ill., today won the twenty-first annual running of the Chase Futurity of the all-age championships of the National Foxhunters' Association.

Helen K is a full sister of Jack K, last year's winner, and Ben Dial, of Wellston, Ohio, association president, declared the successive victories by full brother and sister were the first in the Futurity's annals.

The new champion was injured in the second day's running yesterday and Dial said her exhibition today was the gamest he had ever seen in the long history of the event.

"Not one dog in a thousand could have done what Helen K did out there today," Dial declared.

Durocher, Sinkwich Compared

One of the brightest cracks of the season was recently contributed by some brilliant Southern brother, who said Frank Sinkwich's jaw and Lippy Leo Durocher's were the most famous pair of the year. Sinkwich, in case a fellow has to draw pictures, is the University of Georgia halfback of all-America hue, who's been playing with a harness that looks like Queen Elizabeth's ruff protecting a fracture in his eating machinery.

Cunmngham

And playing, in case anybody happens to ask you, He accounts for 15 of his team's 19 points against Florida last Saturday.

But what your ereplitating correspondent is getting around to asseverating is that before that chin of Mons. Durocher's gets too far out of range for a scribe to get a good full arm swing at it, I'd like to drive it somewhere up in the vicinity of his hair-part with the statement that he, not Mickey Owen, was the real goat of the late lamented Dodger disaster. And he rates that dour distinction principally upon the count that he didn't use that aforementioned and highly publicized jaw.

If there ever was a time in the history of baseball where a manager should have been out on the field with some soothing oratory, right after Owen dropped that ball and Henrich raced to first base, that was precisely and unequivocably the moment.

The ball game at that time was far from lost. Two Yankees were out. There was a man on first, and bad news in the form of DiMaggio and Keller was coming up. But so what?

But so Durocher should have been out on that diamond, taking the curse off the new and sudden tenseness. He could have done a lot of things. The least and most sensible would have been to rally the infield around Owen and Casey while he uttered a flow of "never-mind-its."

Mickey couldn't have been very happy. A sudden break such as that figured to jar the aplomb even of a man who bleeds ice water. So far as Casey was concerned, his temperamental status was probably close to normal. He'd done his job. He'd struck the man out. The break was too weird to cause him much but a laugh—not that anybody noticed him chuckling.

But the last thing that made sense was to leave the thunder-stricken Dodgers standing around out there helplessly looking at each other, while the park was a bedlam and the radio magpies chattered so excitedly they could be heard in centerfield.

Through all his baseball life until then, Lippy Leo had been a self-starting orator. In trains, hotel lobbies, in dugouts and from coaching lines, he has let the verbs and pronouns fly. He's always a cinch for a statement. He would hold forth on anything. The soap box and Leo have been practically synonyms.

This isn't a knock at the gentleman. What he's said has always made copy, and it's often made fines when some embattled umpire was his vis-a-vis. But the point is that Leo had never lost a chance to start sounding off before.

And here, where everything about the situation cried for somebody to say something, even if it was no more than bosh!, the gentleman with the free-wheeling jaw, merely leaned against a post and let the situation ride. It couldn't have been that he was too weak to move. He looked healthy enough. He just missed the cue, in fact he dropped it on his foot.

There were a lot of things he could have done. He could even have ordered DiMaggio and Keller passed, filling the bases and setting up a play at every sack. I said "could." I'm not recommending it. I'm just saying he could have mushed in and taken full charge in one of several ways. Anyone might have steadied the quivering nerves. A little speech right then might have made the mighty difference.

But with nothing but vasty silence, Casey was probably saddled with the extra wonder as to how Leo was taking it. Owen may have been privately dying from the same general curiosity.

So DiMaggio, the pale and palpitant expectant-father, pumped one into left. Keller swings and misses twice, but the next one, supposed to be the same pitch, gets away from Casey to break six inches closer and Keller rifles it into the scoreboard, for two runs, the ball game and, probably the series.

Everybody said Owen, I say Durocher.

He went mute in the wrong place.

Alsab Wins At Pimlico, Bless Me 2d

ner and "84" in the upper right-hand corner. He added the two numbers and played the "7-12" on a hunch, not even knowing the names of the horses. The Bohemia Stable's Early Spring came from behind to win the first race to pay an individual mutuel of $55.60 and P. S. Baird's Javert came around on the outside to take the second race and supplied his straight backers with a pay-off of $82.90.

Adds $7720 to Earnings

Getting back to the Walden, Alsab added $7720 to his earnings, which now total $109,520. This was his tenth straight victory and his fifteenth in 22 starts. Alsab was purchased by Albert Sabath, Chicago attorney, for $700 at the Saratoga sales.

The owners of both Alsab and Bless Me are under the care of physicians. The Chicagoan was here with his family to see the 2-year-old perform, but as usual had to turn his back during the running of the race due to his condition. E. R. Bradley, owner of Bless Me, saw the race from his car, parked in the infield.

Ironically, it was Jockey Don Meade who inadvertently kept the Bradley colors away from a sweet victory. The boy for whom Bradley is said to have "gone to the bat" when he was in trouble, had the mount on Fair Call and he came in on the rail entering the stretch to force Jockey Sterling Young to pull up on Bless Me.

Fair Call also had much to do with Alsab being tired at the end. Meade used free reins and hustling tactics to make Fair Call outrun Alsab to the first turn. Vedder, on the champion, dropped in behind the leader and Bless Me, in the center of the track, was third as they went toward the backstretch.

Moves, On Outside

Nearing the half-mile pole, Alsab moved up on the outside of Fair Call. But the son of Trace Call was not through. Meade urged him and he drew out again on Alsab. In the meanwhile, Bless Me was taken to the inside at the turn. On the run to the stretch, Fair Call appeared to carry Alsab wide but as the two horses neared the bend, Meade brought Fair Call into the rail again and it was at this point that Bless Me was shut off.

In the straightaway, Alsab took command but Young again got Bless Me under a drive on the outside. Inside the sixteenth pole, Alsab hung and the son of Sickle was cutting down his margin at every jump to the end.

The stewards talked to Meade and Young after the race but there was no announcement of a ruling against Meade.

Smith, Frickey In Gopher Drill

Minneapolis, Nov. 12 (AP).—Spirits of Minnesota's football warriors were high today as Capt. Bruce Smith and Herman Frickey, out for some time because of injuries, participated extensively in the workout in preparation for Iowa.

Both Smith and Frickey limped a bit as they alternated with Bud Higgins at left half, but it appeared certain they both would at least get into the Iowa game Saturday.

Hockey Player Fisher Receives Suspension

Detroit, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings, of the National Hockey League, today placed Forward Joe Fisher under suspension for refusal to report to Indianapolis, of the American League, in exchange for Bill Jennings.

Fisher, who said he would quit hockey rather than play with a minor league team, left today for his home at Medicine Hat, Altavista. Manager Jack Adams tried to make Fisher change his mind but was unsuccessful. Fisher said he would return to his restaurant business.

land, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, had little time to think about the weather for just about every man on the field is in continuous action.

After the face-off a player grabs the ball and runs for the opposing goal until he is about to be tackled and then he laterals to a teammate, unless he goes to the ground first. Forward passing is not allowed and the runner can have no blocking for interference.

A "Scrum" Follows

Often 15 or 20 of the players would be on the ground at once and when the ball is out of play a "scrum" follows. That's when eight men on each team lock arms and kick the ball out with their feet until an alert teammate picks it up and runs.

Scoring is three points for a "try", or an American touchdown That's when the ball-carrier crosses the goal line and touches the ball to the ground. A "conversion" follows but instead of kicking from the center of the regulation football goal posts the bal must be brought out from where it was carried over and kicked from the 20-yard line, often at difficult angles However the rugby football kicks truer than a football. The conversion counts two points.

A field goal counts four points and that consists of a drop kick when the player is about to be tackled and thinks he has a better chance of kicking than carrying it over.

The feature play of the evening was late in the second half when Lt. Gourlay was off on a 20-yard run and tried a field goal but it was blocked and Lt. Boyle picked it up and blocked field goal attempt and carried it over for a try.

Rugby Players Officers

The soccer players were mostly all seamen but the rugby lineups were dotted with officers. The regulation 40-minute halves in each game were reduced to 20 minutes each.

The Formidable team won the three preceding matches in Richmond, Portsmouth and Norfolk while the Formidable soccer team has won two and tied two.

Signalman West and Yoeman Mathews were the Formidable scorers in the soccer game and Marine Pritchard was the hero with several saves in the goal box.

The H. M. S. Formidable Band played the "Pompy" (short for Portsmouth) chimes after each soccer goal. The U. S. Navy School of Music Band, American Legion Band, Pepco Glee Club and Washington Gas Light Band entertained.

The British American Ambulance Corps, Bundles for Britain and Community Chest benefited. The event was sponsored by the American Legion.

Joe Osmanski Joins Army; Draft Case Postponed

By the United Press

Providence, R. I., Nov. 12.—Joseph C. Osmanski, former Holy Cross football player, enlisted in the Army Monday, it was revealed today shortly after postponement of his hearing on charges of wilfully falsifying his selective service questionnaire.

Osmanski, brother of Bill Osmanski, the professional player, was sent to Fort Devens, Mass., and later will be assigned to the Coast Artillery at Fort Eustis, Va.

His case will be presented next week to a Federal grand jury, which will be informed of his three-year enlistment.

Two other Southern mounts, Lieut. and Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, jr.'s, Hi-Ho and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Bogley's Ringmaster, were out of the ribbons as Hi-Ho, wearied after two dazzling performances here earlier this week and many other fine rounds, stopped at the in-and-out, and Ringmaster, showing remarkable perception, ran under the barber pole twice instead of over it. Bogley caught the big bar on his chest but was not hurt.

Although the hunter championship was slightly overshadowed by the thrills of the jumper division, Patricia duPont's Woodfellow was a brilliant winner as he won the $1000 hunter stake and the conformation tricolor with 28 points over Mrs. George Watts Hill's Inky, of Rougemont, N. C., and Virginia, who had 24 markers.

Moving with sparkle and precision, Miss duPont's brown gelding overcame Inky's early 2-point lead for the title by romping off with the $1000 Hunter Stake, thus putting an additional 7 points on his score. This victory, coupled with the blue in the hunter preliminary, was sufficient to give him the crown for his Wilmington (Del.) owner.

Other finalists in the preliminary were Morton Smith's Ballela, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Big Boy, and Inky, finishing in that order behind Woodfellow.

ODD BODKINS — BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

MR. BODKINS, WHO WAS GIOVANNI CIPRIANI?
HE WAS A—ER—ER—A—
MISS IT, ODD! MISS IT! GET IT WRONG!
HE WAS AN ITALIAN PAINTER. HE CAME TO ENGLAND IN 1755 AND BECAME A FELLOW OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY!
HE ANSWERED IT RIGHT! NOW I WON'T GET $5!
DID YOU SEND IN THAT QUESTION, GRANDMA TWEEDY?
I SENT IN HUNDREDS OF 'EM!
WHAT'S A CHRONOMETER?
DID YOU SEND IN THAT QUESTION TOO?
NOPE—BUT ODD WON'T HAVE ANY TROUBLE ANSWERIN' IT. THAT'S ONE OF THE HUNDREDS HE SENT IN!

From now on you can be sure that a certain radio program is good for the kiddies—as well as grown-ups.

For tonight on the sanction of no less an authority about children and parents than Parents' Magazine, which makes a specialty of catering advice to both, that certain radio program is to be singled out and given an award for its wholesomeness, its high regard for the truth and—oh yes—its general entertainment value.

The program is "Death Valley Days," which you hear over WJSV every Thursday night at 8 p. m. And tonight it receives the first Honor Award for Truth from Parents' Magazine Press.

George Hecht, president of Parents' Magazine Press, which also publishes True Comics, is to be on hand to present the Old Ranger with a plaque bearing the inscription: "True Comics Honor Award to 'Death Valley Days.' This award is made to exceptional radio programs based on truth, which is stranger and more interesting than fiction." Then the true story dramatized on "Death Valley Days" tonight is to be published in the next issue of True Comics.

We just thought we'd let you know that it's not only allowable, but recommended, that you have Junior listen to "Death Valley Days" before going to bed.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

LIMEY, SENT TO BRING THE MYSTERY GIRL BY FORCE TO GLOVER MINE, HAS A PLAN FOR ELUDING KING AND KID WHOM HE SEES IN THE DISTANCE.
SO YOU THOUGHT THE MOUNTIE WOULD OVERTAKE OL' LIMEY? — WELL, AURORA, ME CRUMPET, SEE THAT ROPE ACROSS TH' CANYON — IT'LL TAKE TEN MILES OFF OUR JOURNEY!
— BUT WHEN THAT MOUNTIE BLIGHTER GETS 'ERE, THE ROPE'LL BE GONE!
I CAN'T ANSWER THAT, KING, BUT IT'S SURE BLOWIN' UP A BLIZZARD!

A SPECIAL GROUP OF NEW FALL AND WINTER STYLES AND PATTERNS

One day, once a year, do we celebrate the founding of The Hecht Co. And we're letting you in on the celebration party with a one day sale, today only, of famous Sheldon suits and overcoats. Savings that add up to many dollars in this Founders' Day Event! If it's clothing you need, you'll be doing yourself an injustice if you don't see the values and qualities in this sale. Shop today from 9:30 A. M. to 9 P. M. but be sure you're here as early as possible. These Sheldon suits and overcoats will revert to their regular prices after closing time this evening.

Sheldon Clothes are EXCLUSIVE with The Hecht Co's MODERN MAN'S STORE in Washington—Second Floor

THE SUITS IN THIS SALE!

Hard-finished Worsteds for business, street and dress wear. Sporty Tweeds for business, sports and casual occasions. Sturdy Twists that take a beating and come up smiling. New stripings, herringbone and diagonal weaves, overplaids and neat checks. Single and double breasted lounge and conventional models. Blues, greys, browns and tans. Sizes, too, for practically every build.

All Sheldon's properly labeled as to wool content.

THE OVERCOATS IN THIS SALE

Warmth without weight is the feature of these famous Sheldon Overcoats. Soft fleecy "Pacadowne" is soft to your touch, light on your shoulders and warm on your back. And also Kilkenny Velour . . . a smooth, luxurious fabric that is always tagged much more than this low $26.00 price. Sizes for regulars, shorts, longs and stouts in these famous Sheldon Overcoats.
